DECIDE TO TRY EX-KAISER

DEFENSE MADE BY WILHELM IN INTERVIEW

Laughs at Idea of Trial; Lusitania a "Blunder."

BULLETIN.

PARIS, March 30, 4 a. m.—(By the Associated Press.)—The commission on responsibility for the war has decided:

First—Solemnly to condemn the violation of neutrality and all the crimes committed by the central empires.

Second—The appointment of an international tribunal to judge all those responsible, including the former German emperor.

BY HAROLD BEGBIE.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.
[Copyright: 1919.]

AMERONGEN, March 29.—What I am now about to write of the former German kaiser's opinions I should have been able to write in the form of a conversation but for the ex-emperor's determination to remain a private person and to do nothing which might give him a moment's appearance of wishing to interfere with the present government in Germany.

It must be understood that in this dispatch, which is an authentic account of the kaiser's opinions concerning the events which precipitated the war, I am attempting to write simply as a secretary for his state of mind.

I am neither attacker nor defender, neither protagonist nor historian. I set myself no other task than most faithfully to present the reader with the thoughts of William Hohenzollern, myself nothing more important than the pen in his hand.

Kaiser Feels Innocent.

The former kaiser is entirely impenitent. He is not only convinced of his innocence; he sees himself as one who strove harder than any man in the world to avert war. As for being put on trial, he laughs at such an idea. There is no power on earth that can try him. If he thought he was to be arraigned before an international tribunal, he would destroy himself, not out of any fear of the result of such a trial, but because he would regard such an ordeal as insufferably undignified.

"I am answerable for my conduct only to God, and God knows how I strove, to my own peril, the peril of my throne, to avert the calamity of war," he said.

Amazed at Accusations.

He does not often protest his innocence. It is a more frequent occurrence on his part to express amazement at the opinions of those who regard him as the guilty cause of the war. Questioned as to any plot on the part of the Germans, he asks if it was that, with the consent of his war minister, Germany, manufacturer of munitions, supplied Russia in the early days of 1914 with 30,000 machine guns, 400,000 rifles, and 4,000,000 rounds of ammunition.

"I did not want, as Nicholas did not want, war. George did not want war," he says, with energy. "No ruler wanted war. We were all dead against war. The war was made by the diplomatists. The whole guilt of the war rests on the Russian government and there were secret forces at work in the Russian government," he continued.

Basis of the Conflict.

His argument is that the rivalry in the Balkans between Russia and Austria led to the conflict of 1914. Russia was beginning to get upon her feet, Austria was falling more and more into decay; France was financing Russia; England had assured Russia of her friendship. The finances of Russia and her army organization were in a comparatively sound condition, and the Russian government, feeling itself thus powerfully buttressed, decided that the hour was ripe for a definitive contest with the worm-eaten empire of Austria.

Germany was drawn into the war because she was pledged to defend Austria against Russian aggression, and because she herself could not be insensible to the increasing menace of Russian activity.

He denies with a kind of fierce ridicule the charge that there was any

WARN HUNGARY TO END POWERS OF BOLSHEVIKI

Allies Tell Enemy to Hold Election Under Watch.

BULLETIN.

PARIS, March 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—Lemberg was heavily shelled by the Ukrainians from Monday until Tuesday morning, according to a Havas dispatch from Warsaw.

Scores of civilians were killed and hundreds wounded.

St. George's cathedral and the archbishop's palace were badly damaged.

LONDON, March 29.—The allies have demanded the resignation of the Hungarian soviet government, according to dispatches to the Exchange Telegraph company by way of Berlin and Copenhagen. They demand the election of a national assembly under the supervision of allied troops.

A Havas dispatch from Paris quotes the Temps as saying that the allies will send certain war material and equipment to Roumania for use against the Hungarian soviet rule.

Looting in Budapest.

PARIS, March 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—The American commission received indirectly tonight a dispatch from Budapest reporting serious disorders there, with the looting of shops, the confiscation of personal property, and the seizure of much silver plate belonging to the wealthier classes.

All work in Budapest has been stopped and the government is taking an inventory of shops, banks, and factories. All property, real and personal, has been sequestrated. Houses have been seized by the state, arms requisitioned, and numerous prominent persons arrested.

American Is Safe.

In addition to the Italian and British representatives Prof. Philip Brown of Princeton university, representing the United States, remains in Budapest. It is announced that he will be treated with courtesy and allowed to send messages to Vienna.

Premier Lenine of the Russian soviet government has sent to the Hungarian constitutional commission a draft of a proposed constitution for Hungary, according to a Vienna dispatch transmitted by the Zurich correspondent of L'Information.

Serbia Sends Flotilla.

LONDON, March 29.—A Belgrade dispatch, coming by way of Basle, says a Serbian flotilla is steaming up the Danube toward Budapest.

Foreign Minister Bela Kun has issued a decree extending the protection of the "Hungarian soviet republic" to the foreign military missions in Budapest, a Hungarian wireless dispatch received here today says. The missions will be permitted to fly the flags of their respective countries over their headquarters.

Rail Strike Is Ended.

COPENHAGEN, March 29.—The railway strike in German-Austria has been settled, a report from Vienna says. A strike of railway workers in German-Austria was called later Wednesday. A dispatch from Vienna Friday indicated that the strike was partly in sympathy with the Hungarian revolution. The men on the Southern railroad walked out Wednesday, and the cessation of traffic threatened a serious food situation in Vienna.

Ukrainians at Budapest Freed.

BERNE, March 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Hungarian government has released members of the Ukrainian mission arrested at Budapest, restored property belonging to the mission valued at 1,000,000 crowns ($203,000), and made an apology to Ukrainia, according to the Ukrainian press bureau here.

The Ukrainian government entered a protest following the arrest of its mission at the Hungarian capital.

WILL NOT DELAY RETURN.

Washington, D. C., March 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—Recent events in Hungary, Gen. Peyton C. March, chief of staff, announced today, have resulted in no change in the military policy of the United States, so far as the war department has been advised. Return of troops from France is proceeding even faster than scheduled originally, and nothing has occurred to interfere with this movement.

GERMANY WINS VICTORY OVER DANZIG ISSUE

Allies, Yielding, Send Polish Troops by Other Routes.

BULLETIN.

LONDON, March 29.—[British Wireless Service.]—In addition to reinforcing the garrison at Danzig the Germans, according to advices received here, are said to be mounting guns along the Prussian coast near that port.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, March 29.—Germany has won another round against the allies through the faulty drafting of the armistice terms, which provided that the allied troops should have access through Danzig for two purposes—to maintain order in Poland or to feed the peoples.

Gen. Hallers' Polish division will go to Poland via Stettin, Koenigsberg, and Libau, or probably will disembark at several of these ports simultaneously, as the Germans have flatly refused to permit them to land at Danzig.

The Germans craftily know that possession is nine points of the law and that is the chief reason why the Poles are barred from Danzig, as Premier Ebert has announced plainly that he never would permit Danzig being made a Polish port.

Forced to Accept Dictation.

Heretofore the allies have maintained that Danzig is the only route by which the troops might be sent to Poland; now the Germans calmly announce they can go by any of four other routes, and the allies are placed in the position of being forced to accept a defeated enemy's dictated ultimatum.

Thirty ships, averaging 5,000 tons each and drawing eighteen feet, are being raked together to transport the Polish troops, as the deep channels of Danzig, Koenigsberg, and Stettin still are mined and only shallow side channels are open.

Germany has ended Gen. Foch's demands that more troops be sent to Poland by announcing that she will permit only three divisions to pass through her territory.

NO ARMISTICE BREACH

PARIS, March 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—President Wilson and the premiers, constituting the council of four, gave Marshal Foch instructions today regarding the situation at Danzig, where the Germans have refused to permit the landing of Polish troops.

The nature of the instructions will probably not be revealed until they are made known in Germany.

The military situation at Danzig is explained by military experts attached to the peace commission in a different manner from the explanation given in dispatches from Berlin.

Hope to Avoid Breach.

It is said that the German purpose appears to be to direct the movement of these troops so as to avoid unnecessary chance of friction or hostile collisions with the German populace in the region to be traversed. Therefore, while Danzig was named in the armistice as the port of debarkation best adapted for the purpose, it is regarded by the military authorities as only proper that the entente commanders should consider any proposition by the German authorities looking to the use of other German ports as a violation of the armistice.

So far as is known nothing in the nature of an ultimatum has been delivered and it is believed that the issue will be settled satisfactorily without a breach.

One source of delay has been found in the failure to secure quickly the shipping necessary to convey the Polish legions to the German port of debarkation. It will require thirty ships of 5,000 tons each and two months' time to complete the movement, and negotiations have not been completed for furnishing this large amount of transport.

Report Mission Interned.

A rumor was in circulation here last night that the allies' mission at Danzig had been interned. This morn-

Mayor Campaign Ending in Frenzy

THE APOSTLE OF PHYSICAL INERTIA

[Copyright: 1919: By John T. McCutcheon.]

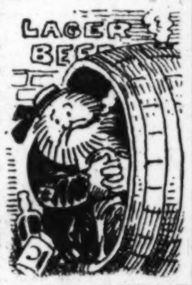
J. RAGLAN PATCHMORE TALKS

Rest Magnate Gives Out Interview on Prohibition.

VIEWS WITH ALARM

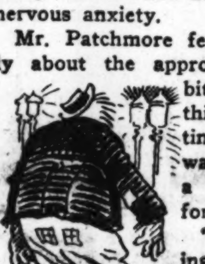
Threatens to Move if Country Goes Dry.

Mr. J. Raglan Patchmore, who retired from voluntary work when he lost his energy in the panic of '93, is again in Chicago to do his spring voting. He spends all his idle time here and elsewhere.



HE WAS FOUND AT HIS TOWN HOUSE.

The Apostle of Physical Inertia was found at his town house yesterday. He looked his usual self, costume and linen showing no appreciable change, but his hair and beard, if shampooed, would doubtless reveal many white hairs as the result of nervous anxiety.



PREFERS A ZIGZAGGY STEP FORWARD.

Mr. Patchmore feels very deeply about the approach of prohibition, which he thinks is a distinct step backward. He prefers a zigzaggy step forward.

"The impending drouth in America," he said, threateningly, "may oblige me to move, and you know how moving distresses me. I may go to Mexico, where there is more personal liberty."

"Why not Canada?" queried the interviewer, drawing nearer.

"Canada does not agree with me, and I don't agree with Canada," he responded, sadly. "The last time I was there I stayed ninety days longer than I hoped to stay. And besides, the bracing climate of Canada is too invigorating, and I don't like to expose myself to it."

"WHERE THEY HAVE MORE PERSONAL LIBERTY."

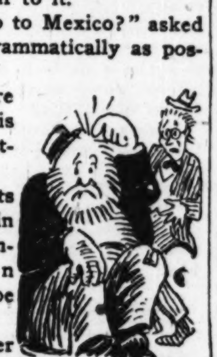
"Shall you go to Mexico?" asked the scribe as grammatically as possible.



"THERE ARE LOTS OF LITTLE THINGS IN MEXICO—"

Mr. Patchmore scratched his head reminiscently.

"There are lots of little things in Mexico that annoy you when you like to be alone."

The reporter hastily edged away!

"The situation is grave," said the Rest King. "There is one particularly sad spot. They're setting the clock ahead an hour, and that gives us an hour less before July 1. I wish they would set it back a year, and any politician who runs on that platform would get all my votes on election day."

"So you consider the situation serious?" mused the scribe, musingly.

"Most serious. I see nothing ahead but a nation of candy eaters. Candy shops will spring up on every corner where once the genial glow of the saloon brightened our weaving homeward way. If you are invited to have a drop of something, it will be a chocolate drop. If you wink at the man behind to put a stick in it, he will put in a stick of candy. If you negotiate a slight loan you will be cautioned not to squander it on candy. When you go home at night your wife will sniff to see whether you are reeking with taffy. Rum shops will only sell gum drops."

"It's a dark and sticky prospect," commented the now thoroughly alarmed reporter. "But will there not be substitutes for intoxicating drinks, synthetic drinks, as it were, with the sin and the headaches eliminated, so to speak?"

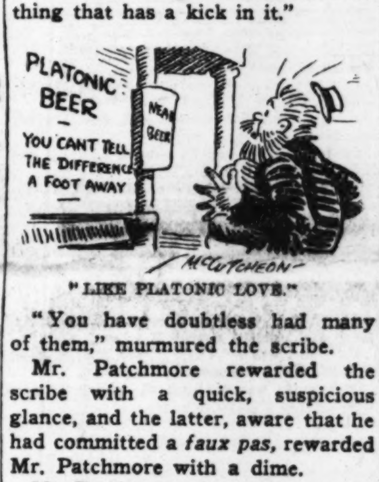
Mr. Patchmore dismissed the suggestion with a frown.

"When platonic love takes the place of the real thing, then and only then will platonic beer take the place of the real thing. We want something that has a kick in it."



PLATONIC BEER
YOU CANT TELL THE DIFFERENCE A FOOT AWAY NEAR BEER

"LIKE PLATONIC LOVE."

"You have doubtless had many of them," murmured the scribe.

Mr. Patchmore rewarded the scribe with a quick, suspicious glance, and the latter, aware that he had committed a faux pas, rewarded Mr. Patchmore with a dime.

Mr. Patchmore shot a look at the calendar and hastily ran down the alley toward a neighboring thirst cure.

GENEVA CHOSEN AS THE CAPITAL OF WORLD UNION

PARIS, March 29. — [By the Associated Press.]—It is understood that the committee having in charge the selection of the official seat of the league of nations has reached a definite decision in favor of Geneva.

Brussels, The Hague, Rome, and Constantinople were considered by the committee.

The Hague, although it has the advantage of possessing a building for peace conferences that would immediately be available, is objected to by several countries, especially some of the Latin world, which oppose settling the future league of nations in Holland. Another group opposes Brussels.

Rome, although the cradle of international law, must be discarded, the conference having almost unanimously decided that no great power shall have the seat of the league. Constantinople is opposed because it is not convenient of access.

20 SINN FEINERS ESCAPE PRISON

DUBLIN, March 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—Twenty Sinn Fein prisoners, including J. J. Walsh, member of the British house of commons, escaped today from Mount Joy prison. They used a rope to clamber over the walls.

The prisoners were exercising when some of them turned on the wardens and held them down while the others were arranging a rope ladder over the thirty foot wall.

When the outside public saw the men sliding down a rope from the jail wall to the canal bank, people quickly collected and helped the fugitives by holding the rope. As the military guard came to the aid of the wardens the escaped prisoners dashed in various directions.

DISASTER REPORT ON LA LORRAINE NOT CONFIRMED

New York, March 29.—Reports current today that the French liner La Lorraine had met with a mishap in mid-Atlantic were unconfirmed here tonight and were generally doubted by government and shipping officials. La Lorraine sailed from Havre, France, March 23, and is due in New York Wednesday. French line officials were without confirmation of the report.

It was announced by officials of the French line late tonight that there was no truth in the report that the La Lorraine was in distress, as far as they were able to learn. Navy and army officials likewise doubted the truth of the rumor, having received no messages regarding the transport during the day.

The rumor, the source of which could not be traced, said the steamship had been in collision.

On La Lorraine were 369 cabin passengers, 224 steerage, and 287 officers and soldiers of the following organizations: Casual companies, 2,476; regular army, 2,477, scattered; 2,478, South Carolina; 2,480, Nebraska, and 2,481, scattered; Special Casual company 2,474, and four casual officers.

WILD SCENES AS VOTE HUNT NEARS FINISH

Candidates All Claim Victory; Chaos Reigns.

BY CHARLES N. WHEELER.

The scrambled mayoralty battle passed through a wild, frenzied, and spectacular stage yesterday. Downtown Chicago stood on its head, ran around in circles, got mixed up in a dozen clashes, tore down lithographs and smashed banners, paraded, yelled, swamped the betting places, and went mad.

In a whirlwind, wild west, knock-'em-dead finish for the Saturday before the balloting, the major candidates dashed over the city in big limousines, pleading, promising, haranguing, each putting forth the supreme desperate effort to get the "psych" to the estimated 200,000 voters still on the fence and waiting for some occult spirit to come along and tell them whether Hoyne or Sweitzer stands the better chance of defeating Thompson.

Howl Down Mayor's Men.

Fighting between Sweitzer and Thompson partisans began in the loop district at noon and continued until midnight. The city hall had an extra force of policemen scattered throughout the downtown district to protect their wagons, but many of them ran afoul of the anti-Thompson throngs that turned the main thoroughfares into a wild bedlam.

An added protection for Thompson wagons was the placing of young women aboard, and they were not seriously molested. But the spellbinders had a tough time of it. One man started to make a speech at noon from one of the big trucks, and at 6 o'clock at night he was still trying to earn his stipend. But as far as he got in the six hours was "Fellow citizens." One crowd had a picture of Mayor Thompson with a mustache painted on it to resemble the kaiser. Wherever he drew up at the curb the crowd was there with the picture and insisted on sticking it in his face.

The Thompson partisans managed, however, to litter the downtown streets with pamphlets, representing "your mayor" as the only fighting giant that stood between the downtrodden populace and the traction barons.

Center on Coliseum.

The city hall forces centered their entire strength on the Coliseum meeting at night, at which the mayor devoted himself almost entirely to an attack on the newspapers and an appeal to support the Republican ticket as a starter for the national campaign next year.

The long-heralded parade was a flivver, due to the bad blood engendered throughout the day by the street clashes. But the Coliseum was filled and the final blast was set off.

Hoyne and Sweitzer continued their wild rides over the outlying wards at night, holding half a dozen meetings each and getting in their last appeals to the voters.

Fitzpatrick, the new Labor party candidate, also made the supreme effort. Bands of his men flocked to the loop and helped make life miserable for any one who attempted to make a curbstone speech. Many of them also had the "vote no" stickers furnished by the wet forces, and they plastered them on everything and everybody they could.

All Claim Victory.

When the tumult subsided at midnight for a few hours all four major camps were claiming victory on Tuesday, despite the fact it is April Fool day.

The most significant forecast of the day, the political chiefs held, was that given out by Homer K. Galpin, chairman of the Republican county committee, which has been nominally in charge of the Thompson campaign. While everybody else was claiming all the way from 100,000 to 200,000 for the respective candidates, Galpin would not increase his "sure" lead for the mayor beyond 25,000 votes. He said it might go to 50,000 plurality. The other camps immediately declared that if the mayor's men didn't count on more than 25,000 plurality, the fight was close enough to insure the mayor's defeat.

Senator Francis P. Brady, issuing the formal claim for the mayor, put his plurality at 170,000.

Hoyne's managers said the state's attorney would sweep in with a landslide plurality of 92,000.

Sweitzer's statistical sharks placed their certain plurality at 115,000, and said it might go to 150,000 by Tuesday.

The Labor prognosticators gave Fitzpatrick a total vote of 225,000, which, they said, would be about 50,000 more than they would need to bring home both the bacon and a slice of the Rhine.

In the final frenzied hours the betting gents, however, could see nothing but a two horse race right up to the finish, between Thompson and Sweitzer, and hundreds of thousands of dollars went down in the loop saloons on that basis.

Walter Powers, the Washington street thirst quencher, sent out a wireless at 9 o'clock at night that he had $50,000 waiting to be put up on Sweitzer at even money.

Admit Uncertain Element.

But all camps based their figures on the probable swinging of the large silent vote, all admitting that the uncertain element was still in the campaign larger than has been known in recent years.

The candidates themselves were supremely confident as the tumult reached its height.

Mr. Hoyne said he would win by a vote that would establish a new record for uprisings in Chicago.

Mayor Thompson himself said there wasn't a human possibility of his being defeated.

HECKLE MAYOR'S ORATORS

Big Bill's "ammunition train" stormed the loop in an eleventh hour effort to arouse enthusiasm. Fists, buttons, and handbills flew thick and brass bands added to the din of the hot air barrage laid down by the "wagoners." Fifteen large auto trucks, loaded with megaphone artists and literature, with band wagons supporting them, made up the attacking force.

There were personal encounters galore, but no arrests. The police could have filled the Coliseum with assault and battery cases, but differences were patched up quickly. Women mingled in the crowds, heckling those of their sex who attempted to megaphone "your mayor's" cry against everything not Thompsonian.

Traffic Tied Up.

Traffic was tied up at practically every downtown crossing during the wild hours. There were extra police, but their efforts counted for little during the crush.

Streets were filled with Thompson cards, circulars, and pamphlets.

"Some day!" groaned a street sweeper at Washington and Dearborn streets last night as he gave his broom a final push. That push carried a handful of Thompson buttons and cards into the "dust pan."

"Look out, there; that's your boss' stuff," remarked a passerby.

"Yeh, and you see where it's goin'," replied the whitewing and proceeded to fill a garbage box. But much of the literature remained last night.

Trucks Reach Loop.

The Thompson campaign management had decided to make one last effort to arouse the downtown district. Long before noon a cavalcade of trucks swept through the loop. At noon they took up stands on the principal street corners. Cards, handbills, and lapel buttons were showered upon pedestrians like confetti.

Their efforts did not go unchallenged. One of the most exciting points was at the southeast corner of Dearborn and Monroe streets. A tall, pale gentleman with a megaphone decorated with a picture of "your mayor" was the leader.

"Wait until Tuesday—O boy!" he shouted. "Big Bill can't be bought, bluffed, or bossed by the newspapers."

"Lundin Does That."

"They don't want to—Lundin does that!" replied a man with a Sweitzer badge, taking the "stump," which was a garbage can ten feet from the rear end of the truck. "Hooray for Sweitzer!"

"He's not a good American," challenged somebody in the crowd. "What do you say to that?. Hooray for Hoyne!"

A soldier and sailor placed with the megaphone artists in the truck actually blushed. The man with the horn didn't answer.

"Wait until Tuesday," was his only comeback.

Just at this point a coal truck rumbled by. "H'ray fer Sweitzer!" shouted a grimy coal heaver and he shied a pound chunk of anthracite at the mayor's wagon. It connected with a man wearing Fitzpatrick's colors.

Attention was brought back to the gathering when a man with a derby and a Charlie Chaplin "lip eyebrow" began scuffling with a particularly loud youth whose downy cheek could not place him among the voters.

Sailor Is Target.

"Ray for Collins, Fitzpatrick, Sweitzer, or Hoyne—anybody but Bill Thompson!" yelled the man on the garbage can. Somebody handed up a picture of Sweitzer. He waved it. Then somebody else pushed him off his "stump."

A file of Great Lakes gobs on Saturday liberty tore by. "Get off that wagon, sailor!" they yelled to the "salty" third class gunner's mate who was in the Thompson truck. He disappeared. A soldier tried to argue with them. They carried him south in Dearborn street.

The Labor party's men were everywhere. They, too, were well armed with literature, but did not scatter it as lavishly as the Thompson "wagoners." They made a strong effort to buttonhole individuals.

Practically every Thompson truck carried two or three women. They had no chance. At Clark and Madison one started to talk.

"Let the lady talk; what's she got to say for him?" yelled a spectator. They did!

"H'ray for Bill!" was her speech.

Night came on and with the traffic jam the trucks started moving. A detail of 100 extra patrolmen was on the job to keep the crowds going and they did their best. But there were self-appointed speechmakers for every candidate everywhere.

Downtown bars did a rushing business. "Best day since the armistice," was the comment everywhere.

"Wouldn't be so much noise if the election was July 4," remarked a bartender in Righeimer's.

And late last night they were still celebrating and campaigning.

HOYNE MEETINGS

At the Harper school hall, Sixty-fifth and Wood streets, in the Twenty-ninth ward, Hoyne got an ovation, 1,100 people jamming the place.

Before Hoyne got squared away, Lieut. T. F. McGlynn, just back from eighteen months' overseas service, put the crowd on its feet with a patriotic address and an appeal to support Hoyne on the ground that he is 100 per cent American.

Tearing into the bipartisans, Hoyne ripped the machine politicians right and left, and told the audience that if the people of Chicago wanted a government representing them he was the only candidate in the race they could vote for intelligently.

Greeted by Crowds.

At St. John's hall, Fiftieth place and Peoria street, 500 men and women were waiting for Mr. Hoyne, and they cheered him to the echo. He talked Americanism and anti-machine domination, promising them that he would wear no man's collar, that he would be the mayor of all the people, regardless of race or religion.

Another crowd awaited Hoyne at Liberty hall, Thirtieth and Union streets. Clarence Darrow and Lieut. McGlynn joined him here again and the crowd gave forth wild applause as the old party forces were lambasted fore and aft.

G. O. P. CHEER SWEITZER

Sweitzer climaxed his night meetings at a Republican rally in the Seventh ward—Sixty-second street and Ingleside avenue—where former Ald. Bernard W. Snow, Republican leader, presided. About 800 people had jammed into the hall. Snow said that all except about fifty were lifelong Republicans.

In introducing Sweitzer, whom, he said, he would support, he stated:

"When our brave boys were fighting in the Argonne forest in France the enemy airplanes circled over them, dropping the speeches of William Hale Thompson of Chicago. That same William Hale Thompson has not adhered to the principles of the Republican party. He is not the true representative of our party, and in this crisis I am glad to stand here and support Robert M. Sweitzer, for I believe he can be elected and remove this disgrace, both from the party and the city we all love."

Gets Warm Welcome.

Sweitzer was given a warm welcome. He declared he would expand the playgrounds, work for higher wages for school teachers, stop the disgraceful wranglings in the school board, put an end to the crime carnival, and be the mayor of all the people.

At Ninety-first street and Exchange avenue, in the Eighth ward, Sweitzer got a big hand. He said that when Thompson came in as mayor Harrison had left $3,000,000 balance. Today, he said, the $3,000,000 had been used up, the city was $4,000,000 behind, and, in addition, there was an increased bonded debt of $12,500,000.

"There will be no more disgraceful scenes in the school board meetings after I have taken the oath of office as mayor," he said. "There will be an end to the carnival of crime. One can almost tell beforehand now the very hour that another bandit raid will be made in our city. Mr. Thompson promised you four years ago that he would get you cheaper gas. It has gone up. He promised you better street car service. It is worse."

To Raise Teachers' Pay.

Mr. Sweitzer said that the school teachers were the poorest paid of all public servants and he would devote his efforts to remedy that.

At Twelfth street and Blue Island avenue, in the Twentieth ward, he also met a large crowd, overflowing into the street. He raised a great shout of rejoicing when he said that if elected mayor he would increase the facilities of the Maxwell street market. The charge by his opponents, he said, that he intended to close it up was a lie.

The next stop was at Cedric hall, Linden place and Kedzie avenue, in the Thirty-third ward. They yipped and yelled for "Bob" there.

The Logan Square auditorium, Milwaukee avenue and Logan boulevard, housed another big audience and they yelled lustily for the "next mayor."

The final meeting of the night was in Sokol hall, Twenty-fourth street and Kedzie avenue, in the Twelfth ward. He had everything his own way there, and left for hime with yells and shouting of "good luck Bob," ringing in his ears.

TALKS FOR FITZPATRICK

Morton L. Johnson, in charge of the Fitzpatrick campaign, said the last hour reports to their headquarters confirmed their opinion that labor for the first time in Chicago is going to hang together Tuesday and vote almost its solid strength. He said:

"There are more than 500,000 members of organized labor affiliated with the Chicago Federation of Labor and 150,000 workers in other labor organizations such as the Railroad Brotherhood and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. With the other members of their families, they aggregate at least three-fourths of the voting population. Fitzpatrick will receive at least 50 per cent of this vote. Straw votes taken by the loop newspapers who are not supporting the labor candidates, show Fitzpatrick leading in every poll, taken at a union meeting or in the neighborhood of the many large industrial plants.

BILL FOR TODAY.

Today and tomorrow the top speed pace will be maintained all over the city in the effort to get the undecided vote. So important is this unappraisable element held by all managers that the nerve racking ballyhooing will be sustained right up to midnight tomorrow.

Aviators Aid Sweitzer.

Today the Sweitzer people introduce the first big novelty in the campaign, when two avaiators, who were in service, will fly over the city and bombard the town with literature. The fliers are Lieut. Dorsey R. Crowe and Jack Wiggins. Crowe was injured while flying for the Fourth Liberty loan. He is a candidate for alderman in the Twenty-first ward. The two aviators will start from Cicero field at 3 o'clock.

CLAIMS MADE BY MANAGERS

BY JAMES S. AGAR.

[Manager Hoyne Campaign.]

We believe that it is not unlikely that 700,000 men and women will vote. But at this time we make our estimate of the result on a basis of 650,000 votes so as to be conservative.

Our polls and canvasses indicate that Thompson's vote, giving him the most favorable figures, will be 170,000. Sweitzer cannot poll within 50,000 of this total, but we will allow him 120,000. Fitzpatrick is making a strong campaign and is likely to poll 80,000 votes. Collins may be credited with 18,000.

This is a total of 388,000 votes leaving for Maclay Hoyne 262,000—a plurality of 92,000.

BY BERTRAM M. WINSTON.

[Chairman of the Robert M. Sweitzer Business Men's Nonpartisan Club.]

Robert M. Sweitzer will carry thirty-four of the thirty-five wards in the city. The only one I concede to Thompson is the Second.

Mr. Sweitzer will receive 90 per cent of the Democratic vote and 30 per cent of the Republican vote. Sixty per cent of the independent vote will go to him. He will receive 325,000 votes in all. Mayor Thompson will get 210,000 votes, or less, leaving Mr. Sweitzer a plurality of 115,000. The vote of the minor candidates will be divided this way: Hoyne, 75,000; Fitzpatrick, 60,000; the two Socialists, 30,000 between them.

BY MORTON L. JOHNSON.

[Executive Secretary of the Labor Party of Cook County.]

John Fitzpatrick will receive upward of 225,000 votes and will be elected by at least 50,000 plurality. He will carry fifteen wards big and in at least twelve wards we will elect our aldermanic candidates.

This is no idle preelection boast frequently indulged in by the old party politicians. Fitzpatrick's victory is certain and I base my estimate of his vote on a thorough canvass of the conditions in all the 2,250 precincts in the city.

BY FRANCIS P. BRADY.

[Thompson Manager.]

On the basis of 700,000 votes being cast out of the total registration of 800,000, which is our judgment, the vote will be divided approximately as follows: Thompson, 350,000, 50 per cent; Sweitzer, 180,000, 26 per cent; Hoyne, 112,000, 16 per cent; Fitzpatrick, 50,000, 7 per cent; Collins and Carm, 7,000, 1 per cent.

U. S. AGENT NABS "MARINE" AIDING MAYOR THOMPSON

A man in the uniform of a United States marine was seized and hustled into detention yesterday while haranguing a loop crowd from an automobile truck bearing the insignia "William Hale Thompson."

D. T. Hammond of the army intelligence service interrupted the address to ask the "marine" a few questions. Apparently the replies were not satisfactory, because the "marine" was ordered to descend from the truck and accompany Hammond to the East Chicago avenue station.

He was said to be Roy Sincotta, living at 916 Kedvale avenue. He was removed from the station at 1:45 in the afternoon and efforts to learn where he was taken proved futile. Neither the police nor the army intelligence officer would discuss the case.

Two Lucile Thompsons Sentenced for Theft

Remarkable coincidences featured the cases of two girls of the same name, charged with the same crime, and given the same sentences, in Judge Brentano's court yesterday.

Lucile Thompson, colored, and Lucile Thompson, colored, not related, were arrested on charges of larceny. Both pleaded guilty. One stole a diamond ring, the other picked a gold watch from the pocket of an admirer.

"Since the facts are so much alike, not to say anything of the similarity of names, I send you both to the house of correction for three months," said the judge.

VOTERS SEEKING 'AMERICAN HOPE' TO BEAT BIG BILL

200,000 Believed on the Fence as to Candidate with Best Chance.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Tuesday's election will be won or lost today. Perhaps 200,000 voters are sitting on the fence this morning with one question uppermost in their minds: "Who has the best chance to beat Mayor Thompson?" Today they will sit down in the old armchair to think it out and in their strolls they will talk it over with the neighbors.

Yesterday's razzle-dazzle in the loop, the circusing and bally-hooing, the fireworks and the parading, have died away, and this is the day when sober judgment gets in its work. It has a wide field—the total vote is expected to reach 700,000, and two days before the polls there are abundant signs that at least 30 per cent of the electors are puzzled and undecided. Sunday's decisions will determine Tuesday's results.

Thompsonism is the paramount issue. As the day of judgment approaches, the mayor's managers are making furious efforts to distract public attention from a polka dotted record. Mayor Thompson is whacking the bass drum harder than ever on the tariff, which is something a Chicago mayor has less to do with than the snowball crop in Greenland.

The "High Cost" Duet.

Fred Lundin, prime minister and O. K. man, looking the situation over from "City Hall No. 2," has tuned up the "ballyhoo" and the cowpunchers of the hall are howling about "high cost of living" to drown the criticisms of "high cost of city government."

The mayor will help to free Ireland if reëlected! If Bill wins, he will drag the Republican party to a national victory in 1920! Good old bunk! Anything to make a noise is a precept Lundin learned early in the ancient Lorimer school of politics.

Here are some of the high spots in the record which the city hall is trying to push out of the memory of the voters. They are a brief summary of the series of articles on the Thompson régime, and they deal with only two main phases, finances and the war:

Finance.

Under Mayor Thompson, Chicago has been absolutely without a municipal policy for four years.

The city is dead broke. It is getting along by "making touches" from the bankers. Carter Harrison, in 1915, left a surplus of $2,859,971 for current operating expenses in the bank. This has evaporated and the city is in the hole to the tune of $4,633,000. This means a total reverse of $7,492,971.

In addition unpaid bills have accumulated to the amount of $5,000,000. It was in the budget, but the money represented by the appropriations was spent for current expenses.

Thus the total backward slide in four years is $12,492,971, or more than $3,000,000 a year—in the corporate fund alone.

Next Tuesday the electors are to vote on a $9,500,000 bond issue, to pay for unpaid bills rolled up during the Thompson administration. This includes the sanitary district's bills. If the bonds go through, twenty years from now the taxpayers will just be finishing the payment of bills rolled up under Thompson for current expenses, such as pens and pencils, street cleaning, and garbage removals.

62 Per Cent Tax Boost.

The city tax rate will jump from $1.98 to $3.21, an increase of 62 per cent, this year if the legislature gives the relief sought and the bonds are passed. Yet Chicago has been getting more money from taxes than ever.

On the Michigan boulevard link, to which the hall "points with pride," the cost of both land and construction has increased from an original estimate of $7,952,283 to $13,748,000. In four years the cost of construction alone jumped from $2,289,247 to $7,946,583, which is vastly more than the cost of labor and supplies has advanced.

Experting by "experts" cost Chicago $1,694,312 under the first three years of Thompson. Under the last three years of Harrison it cost $455,694. City council financiers estimate that politicians who were appointed as "experts" cost Chicago more than $1,000,000 since 1915.

Raids on civil service have filled the hall with sixty day men. Under spoils politics city pay rolls have staggered under a load of battlers. In the first four months alone of Thompson 9,163 sixty day appointees were given jobs.

Record of War.

After America had entered the war, Mayor Thompson flouted Gen. Joffre, hero of the Marne and our comrade at arms. The mayor said Chicago was "sixth largest Germany city" and forgot it is second American city. He coddled the pro-German vote by expressing a doubt that "a portion of the city might not be wildly enthusiastic" over the visit of the French envoys. He wanted to know if Joffre and Viviani were coming here to encourage the doing of things "to make our people suffer further."

He denounced conscription, then before congress, and prated that the history of the draft was that it "led to trouble."

He opposed the sending of troops to Europe and made the astonishing proposal that we should fight Germany by keeping our army and navy at home and be ready for invasion, thus fighting the kaiser 3,000 miles behind the fighting line.

He refrained from encouraging recruiting and defended the yellow ribbon slackers at the marriage license window.

He sneered at enlistments, saying they showed "the people do not favor sending an army to Europe."

Ignored on Exemption Boards.

Mayor Thompson displayed such lethargy over the draft enrollment, which was placed in his charge, that the authorities later ignored him in picking the exemption boards. The election board ran the military registration and the mayor then sought to get the credit.

He shouted for an embargo on food when we were geting ready for fighting, and when others were thinking of Belgian and French babies and women starving, his heart "bled," so he said, at thought of a "food famine" in America.

He was so keen to coöperate in the First Liberty loan that he kept an official committee cooling its heels for three days in his ante chamber before giving a permit to canvass the city hall. He did not want anybody "coerced."

The mayor openly defied Gov. Lowden and made Chicago a haven for the notorious People's Peace Council, setting the powers of the city against the powers of the state.

He failed to attend the farewell ceremonies when Chicago's quota began to move to Camp Grant and got out a "God speed the boys" message TWO WEEKS AFTER they began marching to the colors.

Chicago's mayor took a position that encouraged war objectors—Sidney H. Kreutzinger, on trial for disloyal remarks at Camp Grant Aug. 16, 1918, said Thompson's attitude convinced him that it "is a capitalistic war" and that he should stand against military service.

His Senatorial Guess.

The mayor attacked President Wilson and the war policies. Last year in opening his senatorship campaign he said we had been brought into the war through "Democratic blunders." The Chicago ministers said he "failed to grasp the moral issues of the war."

He based his senatorship campaign on the idea the war would prove "unpopular" and the draft would bring trouble. His advisers deemed that the issue would be pro-war versus anti-war, and that great strength could be developed from the pro-Germans, the pacifists, the Socialists, the anti-draft element.

After American soldiers got to the fighting line in France the kaiser's airplanes showered them with German reprints of the utterances of Chicago's mayor and excerpts from editorials in the Republican, the Thompson mouthpiece.

Now the "hall" seeks to draw a screen over all this by screaming about the tariff. To use one of Lundin's favorite phrases, "Will the voters fall for it?"

RESULTS OF "TRIBUNE" MAYORALTY STRAW VOTE

Final canvass and recanvass of sections of the city in which the vote is most in doubt appeared by THE TRIBUNE's mayoralty straw vote to show that Maclay Hoyne is striding along fast in a final spurt to overtake Mayor Thompson and Robert M. Sweitzer. In the Seventh, Eighteenth, and Twenty-sixth ward sentiment seemed to be sweeping toward Hoyne.

Mayor Thompson, who for days has, in the straw polling, been lagging behind Sweitzer and sometimes behind Hoyne as well, took the lead again in yesterday's collection of more than 1,200 votes. He led Sweitzer by twenty-one votes, in spite of the fact that Hoyne was cutting heavily into the Thompson strength in several quarters. Sweitzer's percentage of the total vote to date dropped slightly yesterday, while the percentages of Hoyne and Mayor Thompson both took a little jump upward.

Hoyne led in the Seventh ward, with Sweitzer and Thompson running neck and neck behind him. In the Twenty-sixth ward, where a batch of 362 ballots was collected, Mayor Thompson and Sweitzer were running close together, with Hoyne appearing to be sweeping up toward their mark.

New visits into a number of wards and into several office buildings were made by "The Tribune" mayoralty straw vote collectors yesterday. Below will be found a tabulation of figures representing a re-canvass of the Seventh, Eighteenth, and Twenty-sixth wards and of the Harris Trust and Savings Bank building, and a first time collection of votes from the employés of the First National bank:

Ward.	Character of vote.	Total number of ballots.	Thompson.	Sweitzer.	Fitzpatrick.	Hoyne.

Note—The figures do not exactly balance when added crosswise. This is because a few votes which went to Collins were included in the totals.

PROHIBITION HIT BY HUGHES' TALK ON BOLSHEVISM?

New York, March 29.—[Special.]—Charles E. Hughes in an address tonight at the Lotos club predicted the failure of bolshevism in Russia, but declared the affairs of government here should be so conducted that there could be no justification for debate on class rule.

He argued against the superimposition on one locality of the opinions of others with respect to questions of local concern, and when he said that at present there was perhaps only a temporary forgetfulness of this fundamental principle some of the 300 diners took his argument to be an attack on the prohibition amendment.

Continuing, he said that the principle of local government must be preserved at all hazards and insistence on its application be made.

Of "the specter of bolshevism," he said, "it is not a thing indefinite in shape without outline. It is a very definite, concrete proposal, with a thorough going constitution containing many articles of faith. We have got to understand what it is. It is simply the enthronement of one class at the expense of all the others. It is the antithesis of our kind of government. It is the violation of every principle of group action and of democracy itself; the rule of class."

DEAN EDW. T. LEE OUT FOR HOYNE AND TELLS WHY

A great many letters of indorsement poured into the Hoyne headquarters yesterday from all classes and all sections of the city.

Edward F. Lee, dean of the John Marshall law school, set down three reasons why he would support Hoyne.

"I intend," he wrote, "to cast my ballot for you for mayor next Tuesday because, first, I want to record in the most emphatic manner I know my protest against the 'neutral' attitude of Mayor Thompson during the war; second, as a rebuke to the present whispering campaign being conducted against you, appealing to religious and race prejudice; third, to encourage every young man and woman voter in Chicago to continue the fight you have begun for the divorce of local government from national politics."

REPUBLICAN MAY GAIN BENCH IN MILITARY TRACT

Springfield, Ill., March 29.—[Special.]—An election is to be held Tuesday in the military tract district to choose the successor to former Supreme Court Justice George A. Cooke.

Geography and politics and the results of the Scott and the Cooke elections, apparently, have worked altogether in the interest of George H. Wilson, who is the Republican nominee for the Cooke vacancy that runs for three years. The Democratic nominee is the present Democratic state's attorney of Rock Island county, Floyd E. Thompson.

The consensus of members of the general assembly who come from the counties comprised in the district is that Wilson will be elected.

SOLDIER WRITES OF THOMPSON AS MENACE TO CITY

"Your mayor" is no favorite among the American troops in the army of occupation. Private Ludwig Isaac of 5536 South Park avenue has written his brother-in-law, R. C. Goldblatt, 362 East Fifty-sixth street, his concrete opinion of Chicago voters if they elect Thompson again. Private Isaac was an ardent enthusiast for Mayor Thompson in the election four years ago. His letter, in part, reads:

LUDWIG ISAAC

"I sure was disappointed to see that Chicago renominated Thompson, and think all the less of Chicago for it.

"I'd like to know how they do it. At one time they almost threw him out of the city hall, and then they renominate him. I know I won't be so enthusiastic about coming back to Chicago if he gets reëlected.

"What's the matter with Hoyne? Why not give a man a chance to make a clean, straight city out of Chicago?"

Private Isaac is with the First American army in the Luxemburg sector.

305 CAMP GRANT OFFICERS NAMED FOR REGULARS

Camp Grant, Ill., March 29.—Three hundred and five Camp Grant officers, holding temporary reserve commissions, have been recommended for appointment in the regular army. Lieut. Col. J. M. Hutchinson heads the list. Other officers included are Majs. Robert S. Cooke, Frank J. Clendennin, John F. Garriott, Frederick A. Lind, Jesse E. Marshall, Paul McAllister, Robert S. Miller, William J. Muller, Irving A. Opperman, William E. Payson, Roy L. Piatt, Clinton Rush, and Floyd L. Simmons. First Lieutenants Victor Moffett, assistant camp adjutant, and Robert G. Howie, intelligence officer, are included in the list.

Out of a total of 411 officers here who applied for regular army commissions 106 failed to secure the necessary recommendations. The successful applicants may be assigned to fill vacancies in the regular army or may be sent ultimately to the central officers' training schools at Camp Taylor, Ky., and Camp Lee, Va.

Maj. Max Ballin obtained his release from the base hospital here today, where he has acted as chief surgeon, and returned to his home in Detroit.

CIVIC BUREAUS FAVOR PASSAGE OF 2 BOND ISSUES

Would Pay Judgments and Finish Twelfth Street Viaduct Work.

Indorsement of two of the three bond issues—the $9,500,000 judgment funding bonds and the $1,200,000 Twelfth street viaduct issues—is contained in statements issued yesterday by the bureau of public efficiency and the Civic federation. No comment is made on the county bond issue of $600,000 asked for improvements at Oak Forest, as both organizations are concerned only with purely municipal affairs.

The detailed statement of the efficiency bureau explains that by substituting bonds for the $9,500,000 of judgments the city has outstanding, 1 per cent, amounting to about $90,000 a year in interest charges, may be saved. The bonds will bear but 4 per cent, while the judgments are yielding 5.

Completion of the Twelfth street improvements appears to hinge upon the authorization of the bond issue, the statement points out. The original plan, to pay the city's portion of the cost of the work out of current revenue, has had to be abandoned because of the increased cost of labor and materials.

Half Debt "Current Expense."

Nearly half of the indebtedness which it is proposed to finance with the $9,500,000 bond issue was incurred on account of current expenses, the report declares, continuing, in substance: "Notwithstanding that it generally is bad financing to meet such expenses with bond issues, it is advisable in the present instance. Faced with a serious shortage in revenues this year, due to increased cost of labor and materials and the loss of saloon license revenue, it is impossible for the city to retrench so as to make up the deficit—in fact, a very large increase in the tax rate is necessary and authorization has been asked of the legislature."

Payment of even such part of the indebtedness as is absolutely necessary would seriously cripple the city's activities, and the unpaid balance would still draw 5 per cent, the statement says.

Will Not Increase Debt.

It is pointed out that the proposed judgment bonds will not increase the city's debt, but merely change its form and lower the interest rate. Therefore, approval of the voters is advised.

Approximately $5,000,000 of the $9,500,000 debt is owed to the sanitary district. The greater part of this sum is for extension and rehabilitation of the city's lighting system, made under a contract entered into in 1910. Annual payments were to be made from current revenue, but installments falling due in 1916, 1917, and 1918, aggregating, with interest, $4,667,734, were not paid. But $1,350,000 has been paid on the contract—all prior to 1916.

The $4,667,734 represents permanent improvements, which are proper objects of a bond issue, the bureau declares.

Bankers Advance Millions.

Judgments for $1,750,000 were obtained by bankers, who advanced that amount to the city early last year to finance increases in the salaries of city employés. Later in the year the bankers again advanced money to the city, for which a judgment of $1,803,908 was obtained, to meet current expenses.

There are also miscellaneous judgments for about $650,000 outstanding.

ONLY 8 CLOSE CONTESTS FOR COUNCIL SEATS

Mayoralty Fight Takes Interest Away from Ward Ones.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

There are thirty-six council seats to be filled—as well as the mayor's chair. Little attention, however, has been paid to the aldermanic contests, although the importance of the council is hardly exceeded by that of the mayor.

The result is that it is comparatively easy to forecast the aldermanic election in each ward next Tuesday, with three or four exceptions. This is on the assumption that the Labor party, as heretofore, will not get more than 10 per cent of the total votes cast.

Forecast of Result.

On that basis the certain and probable winners in twenty-eight of the wards are as follows:

Ward. Name.	Party.
1—*Michael Kenna	Dem.
2—*Louis B. Anderson	Rep.
4—Timothy A. Hogan	Dem.
5—*Joseph B. McDonough	Dem.
6—*Alexander A. McCormick	Rep.
6—[Vacancy] Charles S. Eaton	Rep.
7—*William R. Fetzer	Rep.
10—*Frank Klaus	Dem.
11—*Edward F. Cullerton	Dem.
12—Anton J. Cermak	Dem.
13—*Thomas J. Ahern	Dem.
15—*Edward J. Kaindl	Dem.
16—*Stanley H. Kunz	Dem.
17—*Stanley Adamkiewicz	Dem.
18—*John J. Touhy	Dem.
19—*John Powers	Dem.
20—*Henry L. Fick	Dem.
22—Rudolph L. Schapp	Dem.
23—*Thomas O. Wallace	Rep.
24—*Frank F. Roeder	Dem.
25—*Henry D. Capitain	Rep.
26—Clayton F. Smith	Dem.
28—James F. Kovarik	Dem.
30—John Burns	Rep.
32—*Albert J. Fisher	Rep.
33—John P. Garner	Rep.
34—*Joseph O. Kostner	Dem.
35—*John S. Clark	Dem.

*An alderman at present.

Some Fear Double Cross.

Some of the aldermen listed above as probable winners on the Republican side are fearful of the Thompson-Lundin machine. They have heard rumors of double crossing.

This fear is based upon the assumption that Hoyne will get a large Republican vote and these voters will neglect to vote for alderman. Coupled with that may be the knifing of the Republican aldermanic candidates by the Thompson-Lundin crowd. In such a situation, some of those in the above list might fall by the wayside. The city hall has only one Republican alderman in the list. He is Louis B. Anderson in the Second ward. John P. Garner is also a city hall candidate.

Some of the other Republicans, like Capitain in the Twenty-fifth ward, have declined to attend Thompson meetings.

In eight wards there are contests, concerning the outcome of which there appears to be some doubt. These are all against present aldermen, running for reëlection, except in the Twenty-seventh ward.

List of Contests.

These eight battles are in the wards designated below in a table, showing the name and political complexion of the alderman, together with the name of his principal opponent set opposite:

Ward. Alderman—	Opponent.
3....Iliff, D.	John H. Passmore, R.
8....Woodhull, D.	Frank C. Hill, R. Theodore J. Vind, L.
9....Johnson, S.	Guy Madderom, R.
14....Maypole, D.	Edward J. Lyons, R.
21....McCormick, R.	Dorsey R. Crowe, D.
29....Lipps, R.	Thos. R. Caspers, D.
31....Long, D.	Scott M. Hogan, R.
27....*Beaudette.	Ida L.M.Fursman, L. Edw. R. Armitage, R.

*Not an alderman.

Iliff Has Fight.

In the Third ward, Ald. Iliff, Democrat, is attempting to get a second term in the council. John H. Passmore, Republican, wants the job, and Capt. Oliver T. Reilly, who has just returned from the army, is an independent candidate.

The Democratic managers predict that Hoyne will get such a large vote in the ward that Sweitzer will receive a plurality over Thompson, and they hope thereby that Ald. Iliff will go over with Sweitzer. He has the indorsement of the Municipal Voters' league and will get some independent votes.

On the other hand, the recent increase in colored population should make the ward safely Republican. Thompson leaders are confident that they will carry it with a large vote. If he doesn't he will lose the mayoralty contest by an enormous vote.

Capt. Reilly was formerly a Democrat, and is expected to draw support from that party. On the face of things Passmore has the advantage.

Eighth Ward Uncertain.

The political character of the Eighth ward has been of uncertain tint for years. Sometimes it has a Republican alderman and sometimes a Democratic. Ross A. Woodhull, Democrat, indorsed by the M. V. L., is trying to come back to the council for his second term. This ward embraces the South Chicago industrial district, and the Labor party has a strong candidate for alderman. If he garners many Democratic votes Woodhull must receive a larger Republican support to win. If he fails to get this backing the Republican candidate, Hill, might slip in. On the other hand, the Labor man might run away with the prize. This is the place where the Labor candidate is thought to have the best chance.

Fight Four Cornered.

The Ninth ward is a four cornered battle with a Socialist, the present alderman—Guy Madderom, Republican; J. J. Leonard, Democrat, and Herman C. Diehl, Labor party man, in the ring. The last two and the Socialist have their principal constituency among the toilers in the shops of the ward and they will probably split this vote to such an extent that a Republican will be elected. This is another ward where the parties are so divided that the results are usually in doubt until the votes are counted.

In the Fourteenth ward Ald. Maypole, backed by M. V. L., another first termer, is opposed by Edward J. Lyons, a Thompson Republican. Maypole is a Democrat and on several occasions has jabbed the city administration. The political dopesters claim that Sweitzer will carry the ward and the alderman expects to ride in on his mayoralty wave.

Fight in Twenty-first.

Ald. R. H. McCormick, strongly indorsed by the league in the Twenty-first ward, has a real contest. Lieut. Dorsey R. Crowe, who has just returned from the flying corps, has the support of the Democrats and is gaining sympathy from others. Crowe has tried it before and been defeated. Ald. McCormick has had two years' experience in the council on top of his wide business experience, and if he has made a reasonably thorough campaign should be able to retain his council leather chair.

Ald. Long, still another first termer, from the Thirty-first ward, has Scott M. Hogan, assistant corporation counsel, as an opponent. Long should be able to win easily, despite the Thompson-Lundin machine. Long has the support of the league.

The only old time alderman with a contest is William F. Lipps. He has been in the council for fourteen years. He and some of his close friends think they have a battle because of the candidacy of Thomas R. Caspers, Democrat, a former actor. Unless there is a deliberate attempt on the part of certain Republicans to put Lipps out of business, it is improbable that he will have any trouble starting his fifteenth year.

In Twenty-seventh Ward.

The remaining contest is in the Twenty-seventh ward. A year ago the Republicans and Democrats agreed to support Ald. Oliver L. Watson, Republican, in order to defeat the Socialist. The agreement provided that the Republicans this year would support Arthur S. Beaudette, Democrat. The regular Republican organization is keeping this agrement, although one faction of the Republicans has gotten behind Edward R. Armitage. Mrs. Ida L. M. Fursman, school teacher and president of the Chicago Teachers' federation, is the Labor party candidate. The battle is probably between Beaudette and Armitage.

Among Minor Fights.

Returning to the first line of candidates, the friends of Ald. Ahern, Demorcrat, from the Thirteenth ward, claim that he has a contest. Samuel O. Shaffer is the Republican entry. This is the home ward of Sweitzer and his managers reckon that he will get a plurality of 6,000 in the ward, so it seems that Ahern's friends are uneasy without cause.

Ald. Kaindl in the Fifteenth ward is another of the reasonably certain winners who is working like he had a real hard battle on his hands. Kaindl is a Democrat. Against him is a Socialist, a Republican, and a Labor man. The ward has few votes and Chester A. Sample, Labor party, appears to be running next to Kaindl.

The Twenty-second ward has a Thompson Republican running against Rudolph L. Schapp. He is a little nervous, but his backers think his election is certain.

PARLOR FARMS IN BERLIN RAISE RABBIT POTPIE

Goats in Coal Bin and Sitting Hens in Nursery for Food.

BY RICHARD HENRY LITTLE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

BERLIN, via Berne and Paris, March 29.—Life in Berlin is more complex every day. I went to tea this afternoon in a nice apartment just south of the Tiergarten and took some apples brought me by army courier from Paris, my contribution to the party. In the parlor the hostess asked if she might give Louise some apples, as they were fattening Louise to kill.

I turned pale and feared the Germans were getting so hungry they were turning cannibals. I offered to marry Louise, anything just so they wouldn't kill her. The hostess whistled and a big rabbit loped into the parlor. "This is Louise," said the hostess. "She goes into a nice rabbit pie next week."

Brings In More.

Louise ate some of an apple, disappeared, and came back with a whole flock of young rabbits. The hostess exhibited them with great pride and told just when August, William, Crown Prince, Eitel Fritz, Lena, Bertha, and all the rest of the young rabbits would be fat enough for a barbecue. She said she had been raising rabbits under a parlor sofa for the last two years as a simple, inexpensive form of stock farming—a nutritious addition to the scanty meat supply.

The hostess said all her friends went in for parlor rabbit farming and she had tried raising ducks in a bathroom, but had given it up, for ducks always quacked when she was trying to put the baby to sleep. I thought it might be a good idea to keep a cow in the kitchen, but the hostess said it is no joke about the ducks. She invited me to go tomorrow to call upon a friend who had two sitting hens in a nursery which seemed to me a perfectly appropriate place.

Reds Get Her Goat.

The hostess said for a while last fall she kept a milch goat down in the coal bin, but a wandering band of bolsheviki captured the goat and took it away. She had been warned, but thought she had the goat safely hidden. It is very hard to hide a goat if the thieves have a sense of smell.

When I went away Louise and all the children tried to follow me and seemed to sense the fact she and her family would be safer with an American than a German.

HITCHCOCK SURE OF SENATE O. K., BUT MAY AMEND

Washington, D. C., March 29.—[Special.]—Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock of Nebraska, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, has informed President Wilson that the senate will ratify the peace treaty "if it contained the league of nations as an integral part, whether amended or not."

It became known today that Senator Hitchcock is the senator frequently referred to in press dispatches from Paris as having suggested amendments to the league of nations covenant to meet the senate opposition. The senator said today he had submitted a memorandum to the president, giving a résumé of the situation in the senate and outlining amendments which he thought would facilitate its ratification.

In explanation of the memorandum he had sent to the president he says:

"Among possible amendments I mentioned were a reservation to each nation of its exclusive control over domestic subjects, a specific provision that each nation might withdraw from membership on giving reasonable notice, a definite statement that the acceptance of the burdens of a mandatory by each nation should be entirely optional, and a specific reservation of the Monroe doctrine.

"I did not recommend or urge these amendments, or any of them—in fact, I thought some of them were already covered in the constitution."

TWO HELD ON JOINT CHARGE OF EXTORTION

Charged with extortion by threat, Martin Nolan, 859 South Wabash avenue, and Herman Gould, 55 West Ontario street, were held at the detective bureau on complaint of George T. Barber.

Barber charges that one of the two men posed as a policeman, falsely accused him and demanded money for silence. The other, according to Barber, loaned him $199 with which to pay the supposed officer, with the understanding that the three were to meet in a loop office building yesterday afternoon, when Barber was to repay the money.

When Barber appeared to make payment he was accompanied by Detective Sergeants Essig and Piper of the detective bureau, who arrested the two men.

Both men have criminal records, according to the police. They will be tried at the South Clark street police court tomorrow.

MUST CHANGE PLAN OF LEAGUE, CUMMINS SAYS

Des Moines, Ia., March 29.—Modification of the original draft of the league of nations covenant must be accomplished or he will be compelled to vote against its adoption, United States Senator A. B. Cummins of Iowa declared in an address here tonight.

Following generally statements he made in the last congress, Senator Cummins expressed opposition particularly to the articles which he said would make American domestic affairs subject to the action of alien powers.

He attacked the provisions under which the United States would be made a mandatory party to governing backward peoples and the article guaranteeing to nations in the league their territorial integrity.

Senator Cummins appealed to the United States to "maintain its policy of avoiding entanglements" in affairs abroad, and to set the rest of the world an example in democratic government.

The senator declared the "black clouds of socialism, sometimes in the form of bolshevism," were sweeping Europe, and expressed the belief that "all of those countries would try it," though he hoped some would escape, and pointed to the menace to the United States in this regard.

URGES SPECIAL ATTORNEYS FOR COURTS MARTIAL

Washington, D. C., March 29.—Lieut. Col. C. V. Porter of the judge advocate general's office, submitted a statement today to the special committee of the American Bar association embodying changes in the military justice system which, he said, would bring about improvement in administration of justice. The committee is investigating army courts martial at the request of Secretary Baker.

Col. Porter's main recommendation was the organization of a special and distinct corps of lawyers who would serve as judge advocates, one portion to serve the prosecution and the other the defense in courts martial. He also recommended reduction in the number of members of a general court from thirteen to three or five and the assignment of counsel to the accused at the earliest possible moment.

Col. Porter has been a practicing lawyer for nine years and served as judge advocate with the army both in this country and France.

HOYNE EXPLAINS WHY HE SIGNED DRYS' PETITION

Says He Believed a Vote Should Be Taken on the Question.

The latest appeal to prejudice on the part of his rivals for the mayoralty, Maclay Hoyne charged last night, was an effort to make it appear he was opposed to the laboring man having his glass of beer because he signed the dry petition a year ago.

Explains Signing Petition.

In a statement, setting forth his connection with the dry petition, Mr. Hoyne said:

"I signed the dry petition because I believe the question was a proper one to be placed upon the ballot, and that it should be decided, and I regret that the voters were not given an opportunity of voting upon the question long ago, as they should have been permitted to do.

"'Your mayor,' William Hale Thompson, has made a political football of the wet and dry question. He closed the saloons on Sunday for one of several reasons, none of which agree. When he was a candidate he signed a pledge of the United Societies for local self-government that he would not enforce the Sunday closing. About the same time he gave a pledge to the Anti-Saloon league that he would enforce the Sunday closing law.

Mayor Changes Stories.

"After issuing the Sunday closing order just before starting for California in the delusion that thitherward lay a boom for the Republican nomination for president, he cast about for an excuse. First came his statement that former Gov. Charles S. Deneen had through a friendly judge sought to have named a special state's attorney to bring about his indictment for nonenforcement of the law. Next he substituted my name as that of the seeker of his indictment and impeachment. The third 'explanation' was that he was an advocate of law enforcement, had seen his duty, and had carried it out.

"The probable reason, as indicated by what has followed, was that he sought to build up a large political machine. Favored saloonkeepers were allowed to run. Those 'in bad' were closed. Would it not be interesting to know how much has been paid into the coffers of the city hall machine by its favored saloonkeepers?

Tells of Fraud Charges.

"The city hall machine and Sweitzer gas machine parceled out the judges and clerks of election between them. In their desperation they have padded the voting lists in a number of wards. As a result of my investigation in the First, Twenty-first, and other wards, I filed over 2,000 suspect notices against illegal voters before the election commissioners, and established I was right.

"For the information of my friends and as a warning to election thieves who are supporting the Sullivan machine, I wish to say that my campaign has been thoroughly organized and that there will be four watchers Tuesday in every precinct in Chicago, and that the Sullivan gas machine will not be permitted to stuff ballot boxes, vote repeaters, or count me out. For the information of the gasocracy, I wish to say that the people have made up their minds and I am elected now. It only remains to register the figures on Tuesday."

Hoyne Talks Schools.

In another statement Mr. Hoyne laid particular stress on the school board issue. This, he said, was of the greatest importance—whether the schools should be kept free from political tinkering — whether the schools be run solely for the benefit of the children who attend the schools.

Mr. Hoyne issued the following statement on this point last night:

"If elected mayor, as I confidently expect to be, I pledge myself to draft the best citizenship of Chicago to the service of the schools and school children. Good citizens would not refuse a call to such service if it came from the mayor backed by public sentiment.

For Free Mayor And Board.

"The people on April 1 should avail themselves of the opportunity to elect a free mayor and a free school board. The election of a mayor, free from the control of political machines and bosses, means the election of a school board equally free from such control. Such a free and independent board could not be bossed or dictated to by any interest or any politician."

EVEN SWEITZER BEAR COLLARED, WOMAN SHOWS

Mrs. D. H. Danek Takes Leading Part in Hoyne Fight.

The Sweitzer campaign bear made a mistake when it stopped in front of the Hoyne headquarters in the Ashland block yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Edward J. Fleming, a Hoyne worker, was just entering the building. She stopped at sight of the bear and went up to pat the black nose.

"Nice little bear," she said; "pretty little bear." Then, addressing the crowd:

"He eats out of your hand. He wears a collar. He will lie down and die for you. Nice little bear."

The crowd applauded this graphic allusion to the Sullivan collar, which is said to be ready for the neck of Sweitzer.

Worker for Hoyne.

Mrs. Fleming is one of a group of workers working under the direction of Mrs. David Hill Danek, who has complete charge of the women's headquarters for Hoyne.

She has been the center of beehive of industry for the last few weeks. Her organization work among women has extended even to the Second ward.

"We have 5,000 women working for us now," she said yesterday. "Many of the finest women in the city have volunteered to help us and are taking the platform."

Mrs. Danek is a business woman and glories in it.

"Business Woman's Job."

"This is a business woman's job—nothing else," she said. "I was thrown in here and no man has told me what to do. I have not been near my own office for three weeks."

She is head of "The Woolry," a business which is nation wide and in which she comes into competition with many big firms.

The door to her office is always open to workers. She has assumed no authority, but has obtained coöperation from many of the women and organizations that worked for Merriam and other candidates in other campaigns.

What the Women Seek.

"What do the women want?" she was asked yesterday.

Her dark eyes glowed. She is a woman who not only wants things but gets them.

"First," she said, "we want a smoke inspector who will clean our atmosphere.

"Second, we want our tin cans and garbage piles cleaned away.

"Third, we want a fair and square —on the level—school board.

"And lastly we want full recognition for women in all lines of civic life. And we are going to get it too."

She spoke of Hoyne's recognition of women in the appointment of Mrs. Nellie Carlin as assistant states attorney in the Court of Domestic relations and of his organization of the bureau of social service which looks after all children charged with crime.

Organizer for Hoyne.

She has handled all the women speakers in the Hoyne campaign and has organized every ward in the city.

"Hoyne is gaining 10,000 votes a minute," she said yesterday. Her enthusiasm and energy are contagious. Her office works at high speed. She was organizating final meetings yesterday, arranging for an aviator to fly over Chicago and attending to a hundred details of the big organization that has rallied around her for Hoyne.

Here is one of the letters she has sent out to women:

"Dear Madam—Are you interested in having a better mayor and a better Chicago? The question is needless—we know you are, as is every other right thinking woman in Chicago. Chicago is asking you, in this last hour appeal, to give fifteen minutes of your time and energy and help save the fair name and honor of Chicago.

"Let Chicago again be the 'I Will' city and not the 'Big Bill Won't' city."

MUNDELEIN FOR PEOPLE'S RULING ON PROHIBITION

Sees Risk "of Fomenting Class Hatred" in Law Regulating Habit.

Views of Archbishop Mundelein on the "wet" and "dry" question to be decided by Chicago voters Tuesday are expressed in a statement he issued yesterday through the Very Rev. Dennis J. Dunne, secretary of the chancery of the archdiocese. "The American people themselves should be permitted to decide what they want when it is a question of any change in the constitution and when the change is made let every one abide by it," the statement says. It follows in full:

"His grace has always refused to give any direct expression of opinion on a national prohibition amendment, it being, as he thinks, a question for each person to decide, and he did not wish to influence any person's views. He feels that there are plenty of good men differing on the question and he does not class as cranks and bigots those who have come out in favor of it any more than he would dare call drunkards those who oppose it.

Question for People.

"He has constantly maintained that it is a question the people themselves must decide and the churches should not be used to influence them one way or the other.

"This is the age of democracy and it has always been his boast that we are living in the most democratic country in the world, in which the poor man, the uneducated, the foreign born citizen, has an equal right with the rich man, the university graduate, and the children of the old settlers to decide every question that affects his liberties as a citizen.

Depart from Democracy.

"He feels that once we depart from these ideals we are creating class distinction; we are in danger of fomenting class hatred; we are departing from our fathers' idea of democracy. He feels in all sincerity that there are thinking men who will agree with him that more than once in later years we have departed from those ideals, but he remained silent because he believed greater issues were at stake.

"But now the great emergency has passed and speaking simply for himself he feels that the American people themselves should be permitted to decide what they want when it is a question of any change in the constitution and when the change is made let everyone abide by it. He feels that the American people form the safest, sanest tribunal in the world."

"Drys" Charge "Sedition."

One last shot was fired by the "dry" forces at the efforts of the "wets" to secure an expression of opinion Tuesday from Chicago voters against prohibition.

"The campaign of the wets is nothing more nor less than active sedition —an effort to create discontent with the fundamental law of the nation," declared E. J. Davis, superintendent of the Chicago Anti-Saloon league. "No such effort has been made in the other large cities of the country, which already are dry—Seattle, Detroit, Denver. Chicago put itself on record when the vote to submit the constitutional prohibition amendment was taken in congress.

"Six of the seven Illinois congressmen to vote against it were Chicagoans. And when the ratification vote was taken in the lower house of the legislature forty-two of Chicago's fifty-four representatives voted against it."

CAPT. HARRISON NAMES HOYNE CITY'S ONLY HOPE

Five Times Mayor Says Independent Alone Can Weather Storms.

BY SPEARMAN LEWIS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, March 29.—Here is Capt. Carter Harrison's last word to voters of Chicago. It is the word of a five times successful mayoralty candidate, who matches his best judgment against an untried candidate and an unworthy one.

It is the last word of counsel of a man who from the pinnacle of Europe sees the clouds gather and whose first thought is for shelter for his loved ones at home.

Here Is Message.

You write your answer on Tuesday. Tonight I write just as the captain dictates. The earnest man sits opposite and measures every word. It is Carter Harrison who speaks:

"To Men and Women Voters of Our Own Chicago:

"These are days of world-wide political unrest. Economic upheavals rack every section of the earth. New social problems affecting the welfare of each one of us are springing out of nothingness and demanding immediate solution.

"In a city like Chicago, made up of drafts upon the races and nations of the world, is needed forthwith in the office of mayor a civic leader who can courageously meet each new problem as it arises and deal with it on the basis of right and justice for the good of the greatest number of our citizens.

"Not a Fiction."

"This world tumult is not a fiction. My observation after six months in Europe is that no great community of people is safe from this beating tempest of unrest and readjustment, which, starting in Europe, threatens every country on the globe.

"If we of Chicago can survive this gathering hurricane it will be because the captain of our ship has had the courage, skill, and vital manhood to meet the storm and best it.

"Neither from the standpoint of personal ability or of political backing does Thompson or Sweitzer measure up to standards that Chicago needs, demands of its next mayor for the safety of us all.

"If anything can be worse than Thompson, blundering around on the pilot's bridge, under the domination of Lundin, it would be Sweitzer, hand picked by Roger Sullivan and the gas crowd—picked not because he has personal ability or experience to qualify him for the responsibility, but because his backers can classify him as a 'good scout, who would do as he was told.'

Bad Roads to Take.

"Thompson has proven through four years of service he is thoroughly unfitted for the officer of mayor-pilot, and the greatest storms are yet ahead. Absolutely nothing in Sweitzer's past record gives assurance he will be a whit better at the task.

"If these were the only two possibilities it would be time for the decent voters of Chicago to take to the boats.

"Fortunately Chicago is given an opportunity to elect as mayor—and captain of its ship—a man qualified by personal ability and long experience in municipal affairs, to serve the people efficiently in person, Maclay Hoyne.

"Practically all of Hoyne's life has been devoted to a line of public service which would seem almost predestined to qualify him as mayor.

Free of Shackles.

"Hoyne has proven himself to be free from any political shackles and he has sailed great seas of experience.

"He has no boss. He takes orders from no one, except the people. His boss is his conscience. Hoyne is a man of great ability and tremendous personal force.

"At a time when Chicago seemed threatened with the fate of Thompson or Sweitzer for the next four critical years it would seem most providential that Hoyne's candidacy as the city's skipper was offered to the public.

"Unlike Sweitzer, Hoyne has no corporate compass influences that would lead him on treacherous shoals or which might lead him to side with corporations as against the public. Never has Chicago so needed able men or staked more than it does in the ballot booths on Tuesday next. There is more to this election than any man today can tell."

The earnest Harrison has gone his way. His Red Cross work will soon be done. Chicagoans scattered through Europe where storms rage at every turn will be hanging on the cable news on Wednesday next to learn what you have done to make the town secure.

BURLESON PUTS TELEGRAPH RATE UP 20 PER CENT

Order in Effect April 1 Excepts Press Charges.

Washington, D. C., March 29.—[Special.]—Postmaster General Burleson today announced an increase of 20 per cent in all domestic telegraph rates, to be effective April 1. The increase also applies to commercial and government leased wires, as well as to general messages.

Mr. Burleson said the advance would be "barely sufficient" to meet the "increased cost of operation" caused by wage increases made during the last year.

It was announced there would be no increase in special press rates for newspapers or in charges for special wires leased by press associations and newspapers.

Under the order, however, commercial and government leased wires will be charged for at an advance of 20 per cent over existing rates, whether such wires be furnished by a telegraph or a telephone system, under government control.

Mr. Burleson's order says:

"The following schedule of domestic commercial telegraph rates shall be effective from April 1, 1919, and continue until otherwise ordered:

PRESENT RATE.		—NEW RATE—
Charge for 10 word message, cents.	Charge for each additional word, cents.	Charge for 10 word message, cents.	Charge for each additional word, cents.
30	2	36	2.5
35	2	42	2.5
40	3	48	3.5
50	3	60	3.5
60	4	72	5
75	5	90	6
100	7	120	8.5

"Day letters and night letters shall be computed as at present, but charged for on the basis of the above rates. Night messages will be charged for at an increase of 20 per cent over existing night message rates."

ALL RUSSIA MAD, ENVOY ASSERTS

PARIS, March 29.—By the Associated Press.]—"Bolshevism is not a political movement; it is a social disease, and must be treated as such," said Boris Bakhmeteff, Russian ambassador to the United States, today.

"All middle Europe is like a man with a fever," he continued. "The world is threatened with a lapse into barbarism comparable with that in the fourth century, when Greek and Roman civilizations were submerged. In Russia today practically the entire population is mad. Bolsheviki and nonbolsheviki alike are unbalanced by struggle and hardships. They are indifferent to fate. The hopelessness can be overcome only by food and manufactured articles necessary for bodily comfort."

M. Bakhmeteff expressed the belief that the entire Ukraine would fall under bolshevik control, excepting Odessa.

Identifies Army Units U. S. Sent to Murmansk

Washington, D. C., March 29.—Arrival of the Sixteenth engineering company at the Murmansk-Archangel front on March 25 was announced today by the war department. It consists of 15 officers and 133 men. The One Hundred and Sixty-seventh engineering company, also ordered to that sector, is en route.

Japan Extends Ballot to One Million More

Washington, D. C., March 29.—Among new laws passed by the Japanese diet which adjourned Thursday, the state department was advised today, was an election statute under which it is said approximately 2,500,000 will be given the franchise, as against approximately 1,500,000 who vote under the present law.

37TH ENGINEERS ARRIVE DIRECT FROM THE RHINE

Capt. Henry Day Takes a Parting Shot at the Germans.

There were two happy girls at the Fourteenth street yards of the Pennsylvania railroad yesterday when the Chicago contingent of the Thirty-seventh engineers pulled in on its way to Rockford. One was Mrs. Paul Bryant of 204 West Jackson boulevard, a bride, whose husband returned to her on the first anniversary of her wedding day. The other was little Miss Jane Day, 5 year old daughter of Capt. Henry Day, whose home is at 4641 Lake Park avenue, and who was in charge of the engineers.

Neither of the two girls appeared in the least embarrassed by the crowd of soldiers and their relatives who thronged the yards, but each threw her arms about her particular soldier and gave him a real hug and kept it up to the evident satisfaction of the hugees.

Direct from Rhine.

"We are straight from the Rhine," said Capt. Day, "and it surely seems good to get home again. Those Germans are the—beg pardon, I didn't mean to say it, but you know how it is. There's absolutely nothing good about them. Why, the things I heard—You see, our company hiked 110 miles after the armistice was signed, from Souilly to Trier, and we passed through parts of Lorraine where the people had not been permitted to speak any French for forty-seven years. I talked with one old woman in French and what she told me of the way her own little children had been treated"—the captain hugged his own child again, in grateful recognition of what the American army and its allies has kept from her.

There are two companies of the Thirty-seventh engineers who claim the credit of having been first on the Rhine, beating the Thirty-third by a few hours.

Say They're Not Heroes.

All the men in the regiment denied any heroism in the war because they were not combat troops. "It was our business," one of them explained, "to see that the fellows had water and to arrange for the electrical equipment in hospitals and on the field. I guess we did our share."

"Finest bunch in the army," the captain announced with decision.

The work of the Thirty-seventh was done in Argonne region, around Aisne and St. Mihiel, and on all three fronts.

They will be demobilized at Rockford. The majority of them were trained engineers, many with college degrees. In one company fifty-two trades were represented.

Plan Celebrations.

Chicago plans for the welcome demonstrations to the Thirteenth engineer regiment, the One Hundred and Forty-ninth field artillery, and the Prairie division will not be checked by Gen. March's order calling for the discharge of returning men within forty-eight hours after they reach demobilization camps.

"If any organization desires to parade and receive homecoming tributes, it is the policy to authorize the parade and help all it can," said the chief of staff.

AMERICAN PLANE STARTS FLIGHT OVERSEA IN MAY

New York, March 29.—The start of the United States navy's attempt to cross the Atlantic ocean by air on a heavier than air machine will take place on the first clear day in May, or as soon thereafter as the fog belt, which now envelopes the Newfoundland coast, shows signs of clearing, according to a statement issued tonight by the Manufacturers' Aircraft association, which says it has definite information from Washington.

Each of the two or more N. C. type of airboats, with which the flight will be attempted, will carry a crew of five men, consisting of pilot, mechanics, a wireless operator and possibly an aerographer.

Mother ships, especially outfitted to the care and repair of flying boats, will be employed, it is stated, to guard against possible disasters should one of the planes encounter severe storms. Destroyers also will be used to form links in the safety line. Very little food will be carried by the seaplanes, the necessity for this being removed by the use of destroyers and mother ships.

British Flyers in Newfoundland.

St. Johns, N. F., March 29.—[Special.]—The Sopwith trans-Atlantic flight team, Lieut. Harry G. Hawker and Lieutenant Commander MacKenzie Grieve, arrived here today. Two Sopwith biplanes will arrive tomorrow and the date for the start of the trans-Atlantic flight has been set for April 15 if the weather conditions are favorable.

MAYOR TOO LATE TO READ SPEECH AT COLISEUM

Ettelson Acts as Proxy and Quotes Attack on the Press.

Mayor William Hale Thompson closed his campaign for reëlection with a great rally of his forces at the Coliseum last night. He received a reception when he arrived at 11 o'clock which, he said, would have "moved a heart of stone."

For fifteen minutes the crowd, which filled the greater part of the building, cheered him. The noise of four bands was drowned in the howling of the people. The mayor took it as a certain sign of his reëlection. He said he expected to be elected by a majority of 200,000.

His main address, which was largely an attack on THE TRIBUNE, was read by his corporation counsel, Samuel Ettelson, before the mayor arrived. Then, in a brief speech which was made under some difficulties of noise and confusion of the people drifting toward the door, the mayor continued his attack on newspapers and said that the people by their presence and their patience in waiting had shown their support of him, and that it all meant a republican victory at the ballot box Tuesday.

Flags All Around.

The mayor's managers staged a patriotic background for his appearance on the stage. Flags and banners were all around him. A soldier led in the cheering from the platform. Sailors stood back of him. The band in front of him played patriotic airs. In the balconies were more flags and men with megaphones.

The banners of various ward clubs were in the hall. Delegations had come to the meeting from Seventh, Eighth and Twenty-third wards.

Professional singers on the platform led the audience in the song, "The Man of the Hour," just before the mayor arrived. The refrain of this was "We must send Big Bill back."

The mayor's voice was husky and he was tired. He waved his hand at the people as a signal for them to stop cheering. But he did not want to talk. He said he was sure all the people in the hall were for him anyway and he had spent the evening in working where he might make votes.

Songs and Band Music.

During the three hours' wait for the mayor the people were entertained by song and band music and violin solos and addresses. Congressman William E. Mason urged the people to support the mayor because of the influence on the national elections. State Senator Frank Sadler took the same ground, holding up the menace of Bolshevism in Europe. Edwin R. Litsinger predicted a majority of 100,000 for the mayor.

There were at least 100 policemen scattered through the hall and in front of the Coliseum.

"Dares" "The Tribune" to Print.

The mayor transmitted a copy of his Coliseum speech to THE TRIBUNE yesterday with a letter in which he said:

"Mayor's Office, March 29.—Editor The Sunday Tribune.—Dear Sir:

"I hand you herewith advance copy of my address to be delivered this evening at the Coliseum at a Republican rally, which it is expected will be attended by not less than 15,000 Chicago citizens.

"For the last several days you have practically ignored the statements which I have issued for publication, or have garbled and distorted my utterances beyond recognition.

"You proclaim your paper to be 'the world's greatest newspaper.' The purpose of this communication is to request the publication of the inclosed statement in full in your paper tomorrow and to advise you that the 15,000 or more persons who attend the meeting at the Coliseum will be informed that you have been furnished with an advance copy of the same with a request for its publication, in order that those in attendance may know whether you are publishing a newspaper as you profess, or a family organ in which you print attacks upon those whom you cannot control and laudations of those who are willing to submit to your dictation.

"Yours very truly,

"WM. HALE THOMPSON, Mayor."

Car Fares Are Topic.

The following is the mayor's speech—not entirely in full, because of news space limitations, but the quotations herewith contain among other things all the harsh things he said about this newspaper, unless he thought of others after his typewritten speech was prepared.

The first section of the speech was a declaration that if the people want to keep street car fares at 5 cents they must reëlect him. He reiterated his allegation that the traction ordinance which was defeated last fall was a "steal," and that he was the bulwark of the people against the machinations of the traction itnerests.

He contended the state public utilities commission would decide the present request for a 7 cent fare according as the people expressed themselves in the election next Tuesday. If they elect Thompson, he declared, that would be a mandate to the commission to refuse any raise; if not, the contrary.

Takes Up "The Tribune."

Then the mayor tore into THE TRIBUNE as follows:

"I am the only Republican candidate for mayor on the ballot. My three principal opponents are free trade Democrats, one of whom is running as a Democrat, one as an independent, and one as a Labor candidate. The name doesn't change the candidate's politics! Calling the Tammany Tiger a different name wouldn't make a different animal of him!

"Throughout this campaign THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE has given space to any person, no matter how unimportant he might be or how menacing his influence to the welfare of the city, if such a person would only vilify and malign the mayor of Chicago or his administration. In all this campaign of vituperation, it is significant that THE TRIBUNE has not been able to present a single instance where I have failed to represent the people and their interests.

Why He Was Assailed.

"I was thus assailed with lies and misrepresentations because I would not allow THE TRIBUNE to dominate me, or the utility interests to influence me against the people, or anybody to bluff me into indifference to the rights of the people.

"Having thus failed to present any instance of wrongdoing on my part, THE TRIBUNE has been driven to the point of declaring that I am a 'demagogue.' The word 'demagogue' is of Greek origin, signifying a leader of the people. That is about as near to a compliment as I ever received from THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE; but in justice to THE TRIBUNE it should be said that the word was used in THE TRIBUNE in its modern acceptation as a reproach and a stigma, in accordance with their custom.

Asks Some Questions.

"Does THE TRIBUNE consider me a 'demagogue' because I advocated the imprisonment of any person who corners food supplies or manipulates food prices?

"Am I considered a 'demagogue' because I vetoed the traction ordinance which provided for raising carfares; because I am opposing before the state public utilities commission the attempt of the traction interests to raise carfares to 7 cents.

"Does THE TRIBUNE consider me a 'demagogue' because I closed the saloons on Sunday in accordance with the law and the mandate of our Supreme court?

"Am I charged with being a 'demagogue' because I have said I would protect the interests of the people in the pending revision of telephone rates so that the existing rates may be lowered and the present poor service improved?

Brings in Schools.

"Am I a 'demagogue' because I have declared that I will continue to fight to restore our public school system to the representatives of the people, who have no selfish nor mercenary interest to serve; because I favor the construction of a school administration building, thereby stopping the payment of $43,000 a year in rental to the Chicago Tribune company; because I am opposed to the action of the present board of education in seeking outside of Chicago a man to superintend our schools, and in paying him a salary greater than that paid the governor of Illinois?

"Am I to be considered a 'demagogue' because I contend that American citizens should have the rights guaranteed by our federal and state constitutions of free speech and peaceably to gather for the purpose of discussing in a lawful way public matters in which they may be interested?

"Am I to be considered a 'demagogue' because I condemn the corrupt practices of many millionaires, powerful corporations, and influential interests, shielded by certain corrupt newspapers, hypocritical leagues, and political henchmen, who conceal millions of dollars of taxable property, by reason whereof an unequal burden of taxation has been imposed on our citizens of moderate means?

Loyalty to Party.

"THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE falsely charges that I have not been loyal to the Republican party. This unjust, untruthful criticism comes with ill grace from THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, which stabbed the Republican party in the back in 1912 and thereby helped to bring about the election of a Democratic president. It comes with ill grace from a pretended Republican newspaper which in 1916 refused to support Col. Frank O. Lowden, the Republican candidate for governor of Illinois. It comes with ill grace from a pretended Republican newspaper which is now supporting a Democrat for the office of mayor of Chicago, so that if he should be elected the message may be flashed to the world that this great industrial community has indorsed the record of the Democratic party as made up by its spokesmen from the solid south.

"I maintain that the present attitude of THE CHICAGC TRIBNUE is a rank betrayal of the Republican party because it repudiates the deliberate action of the rank and file of the party who, by clear majorities of the men and women voters in a combined majority of nearly 25,000, selected me as their candidate for mayor when they selected the other candidates on the Republican city ticket.

Tells of Pretenses.

"THE CHICAGC TRIBUNE pretends to stand for civic virtue and righteousness; yet it is disloyal to the city of Chicago and to the people who have contributed to its prosperity and its greatness through its continued policy of destructive criticism and willful misrepresentations of our wonderful city and its institutions.

"I maintain that THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE is hypocritical and insincere in its pretenses of civic righteousness while it continues to occupy school lands under a lease negotiated when its attorney was president of the board of education, at a rental of about one-third of what it should pay, through which profiteering lease THE TRIBUNE will take out of the school funds during the life of the lease about six and one-quarter million dollars.

"THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, in its support of Maclay Hoyne in this campaign, is exhibiting to the people of Chicago its hypocrisy and insincerity, because two years ago, when Maclay Hoyne was the Democratic candidate for state's attorney, T[illegible] CHICAGO TRIBUNE said he was [illegible] for the office, and recommended the election of the Socialist candidate for that position. How does THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE square its present attitude of only two years ago, when they declared Mr. Hoyne unfit?

"As a party nominee for mayor, I call upon all Republicans who believe in the principles of our party to unite under its banner in this contest, and I urge all other citizens who believe that to the Republican party can be best intrusted the task of working out our future destiny, both for Chicago and in the nation, to join hands with us in this fight."

The accompanying cut is made from a photographic reproduction of a newspaper printed in Frankfurt, Germany, last July, copies of which were dropped by German aviators in the American lines to break down the morale of our boys at the crisis in the war. The extract concerning Mayor Thompson's speech is reproduced from pages 1 and 2 of the same issue of that paper.

"America in Europe," a sample of the subtlety (sic) of German propaganda, was published by Germans under the thin veneer of American origin.

That this German propaganda attack on our soldiers' morale when the big allied push had just begun last July should use "Our Mayor's" speech is of interest to the people of Chicago, who have to vote for or against Thompson on Tuesday. Also it may be of interest to those who think the mayor's attitude during the war is misrepresented by his opponents.

Mayor Thompson's Speech in the Chicago Colosseum.

Mayor Thompson of Chicago, a prominent member of the Republican Party, is candidate for a United States senatorship. From his recent nomination-speech our Swiss correspondent gives us the following excerpts:

"Have the American people forgotten how the democrats entered upon the campaign for the re-election of their president, how vehemently the republican party was attacked because of its assertion that the country would be dragged into the war if the republican candidate would not be elected? The democrats put up their candidate, however, as a guaranty for the preservation of peace. Upon these assurances and promises Wilson was re-elected. Exactly ninety days after entering upon his second term he asked the Congress for the official declaration of war against Germany. We are in the war now and our national interests demand us to carry it through until we have attained an American peace, based on the American demands; however, the fact that I stand by my country while in war, does not mean that I have to glorify a political party that, according to my conviction, is incapable even in times of peace to govern the country, much less in times of war. I denounce the democratic party because I sincerely believe that it is for its inability, undecidedness, faintheartedness, for its tottering diplomacy, administrative wrongdoings, for its total impotence to solve problems of such magnitude, that we are in war. This is, so I believe, the price the American poeple have to pay for their last experiment with democratic rule. I am against all propaganda aiming at prolonging the war in the interest of those that make hundreds of millions of dollars profit out of the sacrifices of others. Complaints have been heard in Congress that some of our big dailies, partaking in this propaganda, are heading the war-profiters. This band of pirates, thinking of nothing else but of party-politics and making money, pose as shining lights of patriotism, waving the flag of liberty. Like the scoundrel who steels a heavenly raiment to serve the devil."

Thompson concluded his speech thus:

"I am opposed to all propaganda of hatred, intended to disjoin our people according to races, I insist on a detailed declaration of the aims of this war, I demand the preservation of our constitutional rights. Even in time of war it is a danger for the existence of our republic to put the whole autocratic power into the hands of one man or a handful of men under the pretext of patriotic necessity and rob our people of their right of self-government. I think it unwise to mix us up, through artificial bonds, with European politics or European customary friendships and enmities. I stick to George Washington's principle that for our Government the best policy is to keep out of Europe's quarrels and jealousies."

Government Cargo Boat Crippled Far Out at Sea

Washington, March 29.—Radio dispatches to the navy department today said the government cargo carrier Scranton was disabled about 800 miles east of New York as the result of damage to its rudder. The steamer El Sol was reported as standing by, but assistance was asked by the Scranton's captain.

OAK PARKERS MUST RISE EARLY TO READ IT ALL

Reams and Reams of "Dope" on the Village Political Fight Issued.

The political pot in Oak Park is boiling over following the publication yesterday in the weekly newspapers of the village and in a pamphlet of charges and counter charges by the two candidates for president of the village board, Calvin H. Hill and George W. Pyott, both Chicago business men of means. The election will be held Tuesday.

Page after page of the weeklies are filled with figures, reports, letters, and statements bearing on the campaign. Most of the argument appears to center around an alleged jumble in the village books with attendant secrecy regarding their audit.

Pyott, backed by the South Side Taxpayers' league, charges that Hill, president for four years and a member for ten years of the village board, is head of an "autocratic" ring, which has controlled village affairs, and dominated the nonpartisan party of the village. Associated with him in the "ring," it is declared, are Fred W. Pringle, village attorney; H. L. Fearing, special assessment commissioner, and W. F. Sargent, commissioner of public works, park superintendent, etc.

Worry Over Water Money.

The Pyott adherents assert the village water system will soon have to meet an obligation of $238,761, with but $86,108 on hand. Mr. Hill replies that "ample provision is made in the water ordinances for claims as they mature, many of which will not be due for some years."

Audit of the village books, made late in October, was kept secret until Mr. Hill was forced to reveal the figures by the Good Government league, the Pyott adherents declare.

The Pyott adherents ask "what has become of the $19,482 legal expense disbursements" spent by the village during the first eight months of 1918?" The Hill faction declares that the caption is misleading, that less than $1,000 was paid for attorney fees in the routine of village affairs. "Payment of special assessments against the village, purchase of tax deeds, court fees for confirming assessments and auditing the village books represent about $10,000 of the legal expense account," they assert. More than $7,500 was paid as contingent fee for recovery of $25,000 from the traction company under a contract made in 1911, they point out.

"No One Reads Proceedings."

To charges of secrecy made by the Pyott faction the Hill adherents reply that Pyott has been a member of the board for a year and could have made public any secrets which the village government might have had, if he wished.

Hill was chosen as the candidate of the village "nonpartisan" party in a primary in which Pyott was defeated. Pyott resigned as village trustee in order to run as an "independent."

Mr. Pyott is running on an economy and publicity platform. His opponents assert that he never voted against an appropriation during his term as trustee and that his advocacy of publication of the proceedings of the board is but a grand stand play. "It costs $800 a year to print the proceedings and no one ever reads a copy," they say.

"Tony" Steals War Medal to Show His Bravery

Private Fred Williamson, 1005 East Sixty-third street, reported to the Grand Crossing police last night that a man named Tony had stolen his Distinguished Service Cross No. 1474, which he won in France. The police beliveve "Tony" will exhibit the cross to his friends, and they expect to find him boasting of how he won it.

'JAEGER' HELD AS WIFE DESERTER; WRONG JAEGER

"He's Only Boy" Says Mother of Four, Abandoned.

F. L. Jaeger, 29 years old and single, of Berwyn, who with an unnamed woman was in an automobile accident six weeks ago on Sheridan road at Calvary cemetery, was taken into custody last night and for four hours was questioned by the Evanston police because of the suspicion that he was the husband and father who had deserted his wife and four children in Cicero two years ago.

Mrs. F. L. Jaeger, 42 years old, 5820 West Twenty-second street, Cicero, the deserted wife, arrived at the station about the time the police had satisfied themselves a mistake had been made. She failed to identify the suspect, who had been taken into custody on a warrant.

Not Under Lock and Key.

"Thought you said you had him under lock and key," she remarked to Chief of Police Charles Leggett.

"That is the man we arrested," said the chief, pointing out the suspect.

Mrs. Jaeger stepped closer and took a longer look.

"Why, he is little more than a boy. My husband was older than I am," she said. "Better let him go."

Jaeger received apologies from Mrs. Jaeger, the policemen who served the warrant, and Chief Leggett.

Wife Still on Trail.

Mrs. Jaeger left the station in quest of a fresh clew which would lead to her missing husband.

Jaeger's troubles came about through a similarity of names.

C. SCHWAB TAKES LITTLE FLIER IN MONEY LENDING

New York, March 29.—[Special.]—While Charles M. Schwab was returning from Paris the other day, he learned that the colored soldiers on board had not been paid for five months. One of them told him so.

"Well," said Mr. Schwab, "I'm going to lend you a dollar. It's yours, and you needn't trouble about getting it back to me."

Mr. Schwab said that gave him an idea and he decided to test those men just for the fun of the experiment. He made it known that he was willing to help out any of the men who were broke and 154 of them responded. To each he said something like this:

"Now, you needn't pay this back if you don't want to. You know me and where I am at. Suit yourself."

Do you know what? Up to date 138 of those boys have sent him the money they borrowed.

Mr. Schwab said: "It came out as I expected. The boys were sound to the core."

FINAL EFFORTS MADE TO RESCUE MONROE CREED

'Big Four' Studies Amendment to the Peace Treaty.

PARIS, March 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—The American Monroe doctrine amendment to the covenant of the league of nations, it is understood, has been submitted to the council of four for final determination as to the course to be adopted concerning it.

When the amendment came up at the last meeting of the league of nations commission an unexpected obstacle arose which caused action to be deferred. This was not against the Monroe doctrine itself, but the form of the amendment, which is so general in its terms that it might include other doctrines to which strong objections prevailed among some of the British dominions.

As a conference failed to disclose means of removing the obstacles, the amendment was finally referred to the premiers and the president as the court of last resort.

Australia Fears Monroe Creed.

The Australian peace delegates have pointed out that the proposed amendment regarding the Monroe doctrine, providing for recognition of the binding force of the policies heretofore applied, would validate and confirm Japanese claims to preponderance in China and the orient.

Fear is expressed in some quarters that the opposition which has developed on this account may jeopardize the amendment. Experts are trying to find a formula that will overcome this objection, and meanwhile the amendment has been withheld from insertion in the covenant.

The peace conference commission on a league of nations probably will hold its final session April 4, it was indicated today. At that meeting the foundations of the league will be definitely announced.

Discuss the Saar Valley.

The Council of Four—the president and the three premiers—has given fresh consideration to the question of the Saar valley, and it is believed that the council has virtually settled upon a plan to permit Germany to retain political sovereignty, while France will be given economic control of the mineral resources in that section for a limited time, supposedly based upon a time allowance for the settlement of indemnity.

President Wilson today spent some time in a discussion with Thomas Lamont and Norman Davis, members of the supreme economic council and the financial advisers of the American delegation, regarding reparations. Several formulas are under consideration and such progress has been made as to justify the expectation that this subject will be finally disposed of on Tuesday or Wednesday of the coming week.

Cleanest Possible Peace Sought.

LONDON, March 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—The efforts that the British delegates at the peace conference are making to procure for the world the cleanest possible peace will bear fruit in the peace treaty shortly to be made public, the Paris correspondent of the Westminster Gazette declares. He states on the authority of "a highly placed personage" that the conference does not mean to violate territorial rights.

"Certainly the peace will be a stern one for Germany," the correspondent continues, "but the greatest care is being taken that it shall be just to the eyes of moderate and well informed Germans. The principle of self-determination will be rigorously kept in mind with regard to the allocation of territories.

"There must be no casus belli left to Germany, otherwise you will have blocks of people clamoring for an alliance with the fatherland."

WOULD DISARM WORLD

MANCHESTER, March 29—In a special edition today on the question of a league of nations the Guardian prints articles from many prominent statesmen, including Lord Haldane, former secretary of war; Viscount Bryce, former ambassador to the United States; Albert Thomas, the French Socialist leader, and Premier Lloyd George.

The premier in his message says:

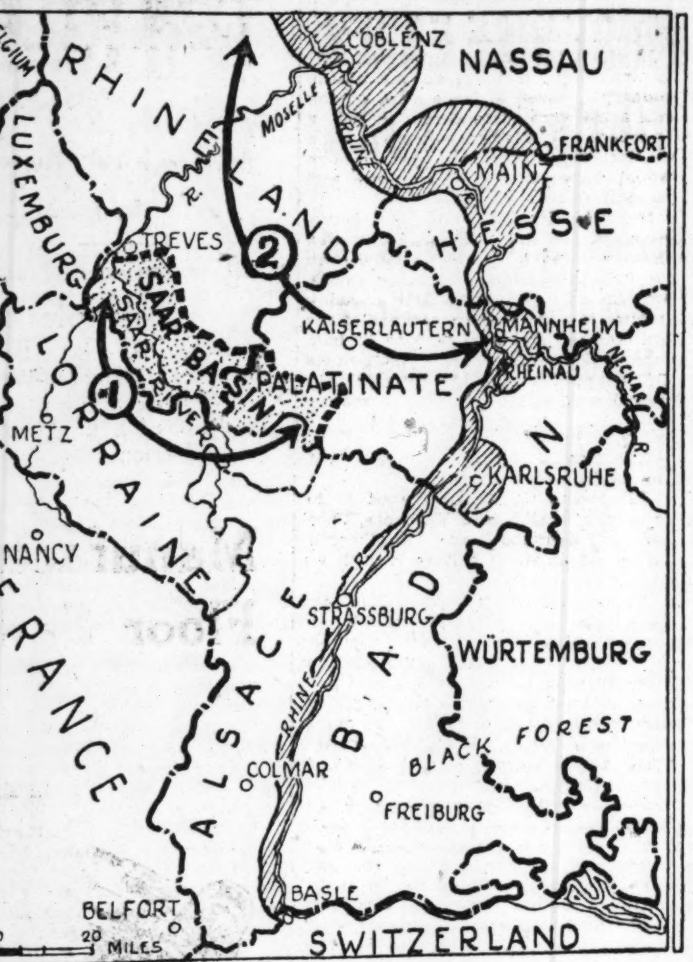
"All our hopes of saving the world from a repetition of the unfathomable cataclysm of 1914 center upon our working out practical means by which the nations of the earth can conduct the common affairs of the world in friendly coöperation instead of jealous rivalry. The league of nations represents the greatest attempt that ever has been made to substitute reason and justice for force and intrigue as the governing principle of international relations.

"The principle of a league of nations has been accepted, but the league will prove fruitless if it is to be no more than a new piece of international organization.

"Nations must not let themselves believe that in having drawn up a paper constitution the peace of the world has been made secure. If they allow themselves to be misled by this policy they will only be reawakened by a new war. They have to see that the league of nations is made an effective instrument for the solution of every international problem by their own readiness to make sacrifices in its behalf.

"Disarmament is an essential condition of success. We cannot expect the nations ravaged by the war to trust their desolated lands to the protection of the league if its advocates hesitate to show any confidence themselves in its guardianship. To set up a society of nations to insure fraternity among the peoples of the earth, while at the same time increasing the armies and navies to insure effective fratricide, is to make mockery of a great ideal."

FRANCE'S CLAIMS ON THE RHINE



France has come out dedfinitely for the Rhine as the western boundary of Germany. Included in the claims laid before the council of four at Paris is the demand that the Saar valley go definitely to France and that the frontiers be in accordance with the treaty of 1814. Later reports state that these demands have been modified.

1—The Saar basin contains large coal deposits essential to the development of France's war wrecked indudstries. It lies along the Saar river to the north and northeast of Lorraine.

2—The Rhineland west of the Rhine France demands shall be made politically autonomous, but should not be permitted to establish fortifications, occupy the territory with armed forces, or control the railways.

The shaded portions of the map along the Rhine indidcate the zones held by the American and allied armies of occupation along the river with the main bridgeheads at Coblenz and Mayence.

GERMANY GAINS A VICTORY OVER ISSUE AT DANZIG

Allies, Yielding, to Send Troops by Other Routes.

ing's newspapers, however, declared that no confirmation of the rumor had been received in French official quarters. According to the Paris edition of the London Daily Mail, a telegram received at the French foreign office reported serious disorders had occurred at Danzig, instigated by the pan-Germans. The demonstrations are declared to have been directed at the allies' mission.

Other reports, while denying any hostile action, say the mission has been virtually estopped from functioning, its work being hampered and it being isolated from the Poles.

ERZBERGER IS DEFIANT

BERLIN, March 28.—[By the Associated Press.]—Delayed.—Replying to the allied demand, Mathias Erzberger, speaking for the government, insisted that the allies give assurance that Gen. Haller's army will not occupy Danzig, operate against the Germans, or join the bolsheviki.

He also asked for details of the army's strength, its objectives, the time of its arrival, and the route it expected to follow.

If these conditions are not met, Erzberger said, the Germans could not give their consent to the Poles' landing, since Premier Paderewski is alleged to have promised his people they could have West Prussia as soon as they were reinforced by Gen. Haller's army.

Objections to Landing at Danzig.

COPENHAGEN, March 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—The full text of the German reply to the allies concerning the landing of Polish troops at Danzig shows that Germany made a point that it did not undertake to give free access to the Polish army to West Prussia in the armistice agreement with the entente powers. The reply says:

"Since the conclusion of the armistice the situation in Posen, West Prussia, and Danzig has entirely changed."

Offering the ports of Stettin, Koenigsberg, Memel, or Libau, the German government says that "all necessary facilities for the speediest possible landing and transit of Gen. Haller's army to Poland will be provided."

"From the standpoint of railroad facilities," the reply reads, "the routes from these cities lead more speedily to the goal without entailing interruption of importation of foodstuffs to Poland."

EX-SOLDIER SHOT BY ARMY SLEUTH IN LOOP CROWD

Army Campaign Against Bootlegging Cause of Act, Claims.

A loop crowd, home bound, at Federal and Van Buren streets, last night, saw Sergt. Mark B. Olinger of the army intelligence bureau, attempt to arrest and then twice shoot a man, who identified himself as William La Porte, 28, of 2614 South Washtenaw avenue.

The shooting was the first in the fight of the army intelligence bureau to stop the traffic in liquor to men in service and those recently discharged —a traffic that has increased alarmingly since the armistice was signed, it is said.

Olinger, himself discharged from service six months ago, wore the army uniform, which he had redonned to trap the bootleggers. La Porte had an army overcoat, but the rest of his garb was civilian. As La Porte fell, Olinger fled into the Monadnock building.

A crowd, including several soldiers, formed, but only Harry McMullen, 814 West Fiftieth street, and George Nohelty, 2713 Chancellor street, Evanston, followed Olinger. Nohelty saw service in France.

At the Jackson and Dearborn corner of the building Olinger entered a cigar store just a step ahead of the first of his pursuers.

Olinger Eludes Officer.

"Hold him!" McMullen directed an army lieutenant who chanced to be making a purchase, and he and his companion ran out in search of a policeman.

Olinger meanwhile left the lieutenant abruptly, ran back through the building, and attempted to leave by the Federal street entrance. It was locked.

Then Patrolman Norman E. Marcos of the traffic squad and the more adventurous spirits from the crowd entered. To the patrolman, Olinger surrendered.

He said he had been detailed on a bootlegging investigation night before last. In the uniform of a discharged soldier he had met the victim of the shooting and another man and had given them $4 to purchase whisky.

The two alleged "runners" then disappeared.

Says Crowd Was Hostile.

"This afternoon," Olinger went on, "I returned with a department of justice operative to Van Buren and Clark streets, where I first had met the pair and arrested one of them. We locked him up, and I returned to try to find his companion.

"When I recognized him I attempted to arrest him. He resisted me. The crowd showed hostility. So I drew my pistol and fired."

The wounded man was removed to St. Luke's hospital, shot in the abdomen and right leg.

He denied knowing Olinger.

Wouldn't Take His Word.

"He attempted to arrest me," he said, "and I resisted him. I didn't propose to take his word he was a secret service man. He looked like a regular discharged soldier to me."

La Porte said he was discharged from Camp Grant, Jan. 11. He had previously been training as a member of Battery E., Second Field artillery, at Camp Jackson, S. C.

The man in the South Clark street police station identified himself as Thomas Stanton, 28, a discharged soldier.

Apart from an army overcoat, his attire was also that of a civilian.

Olinger was released to Maj. Crockett of the intelligence service by Lieut. Gerrick of the Central detail police.

GERMANS STRIKE ON U. S. ARMY JOB; HEAVILY FINED

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.

COBLENZ, March 28.—[Delayed.]—Gen. Dickman, commanding the American army of occupation, gave evidence today of how he intends to act toward Germans who interfere with our military affairs when he signed orders for 150 laborers who struck yesterday on an army job to be put back to work under guard, and heavily fined as well.

The trouble seems to be due in part at least to Spartacist agitators who got into our region on false passes. One of them found German laborers unloading hay for the American army, got a job among them, and forthwith began arguing for a strike. He argued that the Americans had much money, that all the profit belonged by rights to labor, and that the Germans should strike.

The Germans did. This morning they were tried and fines were imposed ranging from 100 marks to 1,000 marks. This afternoon they were set back at work. The man who started the trouble was fined 1,000 marks and was kept at work to earn his fine.

Confer Upon the Fate of the German Warships

PARIS, March 29.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels, Admiral Benson, and Admiral Wemyss, first sea lord of the British admiralty, held an extended conference today and it is understood that the question of the disposal of the German warships was under discussion. No decision as to the ships, however, was reached. A number of subjects concerning naval policy were discussed.

German Ships to Americans.

COWES, England, March 29.—The German steamers Graf Waldersee of 13,000 tons and the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria of 24,500 tons, left here for Brest today, with American crews. The Zeppelin of 15,000 tons and the Prinz Friedrich Wilhelm of 17,000 tons arrived here today to be transferred to American hands.

GERMAN TROOPS AT POSEN SHOT FOR RED PLOTTING

Bolshevism Reported to Be Spreading; Arrest 300 Soldiers.

COPENHAGEN, March 29.—The Berlin Tageszeitung reports that bolshevism is spreading in the city of Posen, especially among the troops. Three hundred soldiers, the dispatch adds, have been arrested and some of them have been shot.

Attacks Noske for Cruelty.

WEIMAR, March 28.—[Delayed.]—In the national assembly today Hugo Haase, the Independent Socialist leader, made a violent attack upon Gustave Noske, the minister of defense, for his methods in suppressing the recent strikes, the shooting of Spartacans and other alleged abuses of power, asserting that the defense minister's course constituted a return to imperialism.

Herr Haase also attacked Chancellor Scheidemann for underestimating Sunday's demonstration in Berlin in favor of Gen. Ludendorff, declaring this showed that the present military leaders of the nation were standing solidly behind Ludendorff.

Seeks Relations with Russia.

Herr Haase, who was frequently interrupted during his attack, declared in favor of entering into immediate relations wtih Russia, saying that the Ukraine would soon be able to supply Germany with raw material and later with food. He said, however, that the Independent Socialists would not consider a treaty with Russia as one militating against England or the entente in general. They merely desired the end of the war to come, he declared.

Herr Haase asserted that Mathias Erzberger, the Centrist leader, falsified when he told of a cabinet meeting held Dec. 12 at which Independent Socialist nonmembers of the government who were present agreed with a decision to send a note to the entente urging the necessity for a common fight against bolshevism by Germany and the entente.

Draft German Senate Plan.

The committee on a German constitution of the national assembly agreed today upon the makeup of the national council or senate. It will be composed primarily of one member for each 1,000,000 of population.

Salvationists' 'Doughnut King' Gives Chicago Credit

Thomas H. Howard of London, chief of staff of the Salvation Army, and known as the "doughnut king," arrived in Chicago yesterday to attend a three days' conference. He praised the work of Salvation Army women during the war, declaring that Chicago gave birth to the idea of distributing doughnuts to fighting men and that fearless women carried out the service.

SPECIAL FILMS, ONE OF BATTLE SCENES, TO AID VICTORY LOAN

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 29.—Resources of the motion picture industry have been mobilized for the Victory Liberty loan drive, beginning April 21. More than 2,000,000 feet of film will be employed in explaining the necessity for buying bonds—"and more bonds"—now that the war has been won. All of the film has been supplied by producers at the cost of manufacturing, it was said, and will be exhibited by theaters without charge to the government.

Chief among the productions will be a 5,000 foot film, "The Price of Peace," a photographic record of how the country's billions were spent. An animated story of the great war contains battle scenes, many of which heretofore have been under the ban of the censor. Among the incidents are the first American attack on Chateau-Thierry, a German plane being destroyed in the air, a field piece with its crew being wiped out by a shell, and American soldiers keeping watch on the Rhine.

This film was made by army signal corps photographers and will not be shown at theaters, but will be exhibited in public halls, with admission free. One hundred and fifty copies have been made.

Among the actors who have made new films are Douglas Fairbanks and Julian Eltinge.

BOY MURDERER DENIES JEALOUSY WAS HIS MOTIVE

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 29. — [Special.]—Robert Warner, confessed murderer of 19 year old Irma Perkins Casler, never wanted to marry the girl he shot to death Thursday morning, nor did he care whether she married any one else, according to a statement he made today to a reporter.

"It was not jealousy that caused me to kill Irma," said he. "It was a matter of indifference to me whether or not she married any one else. I did not want to marry her and I killed her deliberately, and after I had planned it all out. I realized what it would mean to me, and to my family and had I to do it all over again, I would not hesitate one minue. It was worth the price I will pay."

This is the statement of Warner, who claims to be 19 years of age, but his birth record in Jackson shows that he will be only 17 in April.

Jungo-Slav Relief Worker Says Work Is Maligned

Daniel P. Predovich, member of the national committee of the Jugo-Slav relief committee, who arrived in Chicago yesterday, said that efforts were being made in certain quarters to discredit the relief campaign.

"The radical foreign language newspapers of our races are the worst offenders," he said. "They declare in bold faced manner as well as type that the collections are to be diverted to uses other than for the alleviation of the suffering of Jugo-Slavia. The bolshevists go about poisoning the minds of the credulous against our cause."

Mr. Predovich said that paper clothing is now the only clothing available for most of the people of Jugo-Slavia.

RAINBOW BOYS TURN IN ARMS FOR START HOME

Waiting for Box Cars to Carry Them to Brest as Sailing Point.

COBLENZ, March 29.—When the first of the many long lines of American box cars required to move the division from the Rhine to Brest backs in next Wednesday morning the Forty-second will be all ready to hop on board.

Today saw most of the regiments rid of the equipment they had to turn over before they can start on the homeward journey. The artillery had turned in its animals, guns, caissons, wagons, and harness and was back again to the condition in which it was when, like workmen without tools, it came overseas in 1917.

The infantry had delivered up its transport, the engineers their wagons and tools, and machine gun companies and battalions their pet weapons. The "paper work," which is tremendous before an overseas movement, is nearing completion. And surgeons were administering the last shots of anti-typhoid vaccine.

Reilly on Inspection.

A visit to the One Hundred and Forty-ninth field artillery, Illinois representative in the Rainbow division, caught Col. Henry J. Reilly starting on an inspection from headquarters at Vettelhoven. From battery to batery he went with an increasing feeling of being lost, as he found nothing but kitchens and mess halls to inspect. Not a gun park, not a picket line, not even a blacksmith shop.

In effect the One Hundred and Forty-ninth today is disarmed in a hostile country. Even a large part of the side arms were surrendered, according to orders. If the boches were to start an uprising in that territory the boys would have to resort to clubs and jackknives to suppress it.

But Col. Reilly found one outfit whose inspection was long. This was the now famous regimental band with its French trumpets, hunting horns, and drums. A particularly pleasing feature was the fine appearance of the brilliant red and gold fanions or banners which hung from the trumpets and snapped through the air as they waved with a real French flourish.

Happy Smiles Now.

The men of the regiment are wearing happy smiles.

"It seems too doggone good to be true, that's all," said Kenmore Thorsen of Edgewater and Kenilworth. "Most of us won't believe it until we get on the boat."

But apparently it is true, for "embarkation officers," who usually do work much nearer port than this, are on the job throughout the division and the men are properly grateful to general headquarters for the simplification put into the plans for the homeward movement. When the Rotterdam and Antwerp project failed, it was generally feared the division would be sent into some area temporarily first and wait two or three weeks before proceeding to Brest. But according to the present plans the Rainbow movements will be begun out of here on April 2 and will finish by April 7. The box cars will go directly through to Brest, the trip taking three or possibly four days.

As soon as the Forty-second is out of the way the Thirty-second—the Michigan and Wisconsin division—will follow them in the same way. And then comes a big movement for Illinoisans, for the Thirty-third and Fifth are scheduled to come up and become parts of the army of occupation along the Rhine.

Victory Loan Plea Prepared for 800,000 Workers

"The Victory Liberty loan will be sold—of that we have no doubt as our national integrity and our international prestige are at stake," said Philip R. Clarke, director of trades committee of the Chicago Liberty loan organization, yesterday in a communication addressed to 27,000 concerns in Chicago and Cook county, where 800,000 people are employed. These concerns will be solicited by the trades committee during the Victory loan drive April 21 to May 10. "There is a right and a wrong way of selling this loan—the right way involving the widest possible distribution among the people, both large and small, and the wrong way consisting of forcing it upon the banks."

Y. W. C. A. Conference Studies Post-War Problems

Problems created by post-war conditions are being considered at a three days' conference of economic secretaries of the Young Women's Christian Association of America, which began in the Hotel La Salle yesterday. Among the problems being considered are cafeteria management in all branches, and buildings and boarding houses for young women cared for by the organization.

KAISER THINKS GERMANY WILL RISE FROM ASHES

In Interview He Justifies Atrocities Committed in Belgium.

war party in the German empire. He quotes with fiery energy the statement of Lloyd George that Germany was just as much entitled to her large army as England to her strong navy. He says he was surrounded by enemies. He asks what England would have done in Germany's geographical position, with France financing Russia in order that she should build strategic railways to the German frontier.

English Made Bernhardi.

Bernhardi, he declares, was scarcely heard of in Germany before English translations of his works had made him a kind of military Shakespeare. The people of Germany desired peace; the jingoes were a small party among the serious statesmen of the fatherland. There was fear of Russian aggression, but no movement toward a war of defense.

Asked why he did nothing to enter the entente, he replied that he could not trust Russia. The entente seemed to him an organization of tremendous power, aimed directly at the German empire and inspired by fear of German industry and envy of German prosperity.

He was governed in some measure, in this respect, by his feelings toward Edward VII. He says Queen Victoria warned him again and again against the influence of Edward.

Warned Against Edward.

"Don't have anything to do with him," she would say. "He will do you no good intellectually, morally, or socially."

He was antipathetic to Edward VII., and the antipathy overflowed into their political relations. He protests his love of England, and is never tired of talking about his English friends. He said the famous Kruger telegram, which made him so many enemies in England, was sent against his wishes. He says that Prince Hohenlohe insisted on the dispatch of this telegram, telling him the reichstag strongly desired that Germany should express sympathy with the attacked Boers. He is emphatic in his declaration that he did not wish to send that telegram and sent it eventually with deep misgiving and sharp regret.

As to the character of the war, he hotly resents the charge of organized atrocities and steadfastly refuses to believe that any evidence worthy of the name exists for such monstrous wickedness.

Regrets Lusitania "Blunder."

He says of the sinking of the Lusitania that it was a great blunder, and one that he will never cease to regret, but he says England's policy of attempting to starve the women and children of Germany had driven his people out of all patience and quite maddened them against England.

Of the shooting for Miss Cavell, he declares that the order was given by a general who was the worse for drink, and that directly he heard of the execution he sent orders to headquarters that henceforth no woman was to be shot without his own personal sanction. He deplores that execution. He says the German armies fought with incredible courage and absolute devotion to duty, and he flares up and becomes furious with indignation when they are pictured as brutal Huns.

Immovable Regarding Belgium.

The question of Belgium is so clear in his eyes that he cannot understand how honest men can doubt the right of Germany to go through that neutral territory. He says that under Lord Haldane's administration of the British war office he regarded Lord Haldane as England's cleverest spy. Plans were laid, with the consent of King Albert's government, for attacking Germany through Belgium.

The violence of German methods in Belgium he defends on the score that Belgian franctireurs were attempting to unnerve the German armies and break their discipline. He declares that no harm would have befallen a city or a village of Belgium if the Germans had not been subject on all sides to secret attacks of Belgian citizens.

All Blame on Russia.

His full blame for the catastrophe of war is laid on Russia. His attitude toward England is curiously sympathetic. He does not now think, as he was once minded to do, that England's machiavellian statesmen deliberately brought about the war. He now says England was deceived by Russia and that she had nothing to do when the war came but to keep faith with her allies.

As for Germany, he is convinced that she will rise in righteousness and power from the ashes of the inescapable defeats incurred in defending her freedom from a world in arms.

He deplores her entrance into the conflict which sealed Germany's fate, but he is not at all bitterly disposed toward England, although his hatred of British journalists, of whom he says they have deliberately perjured their souls in a most iniquitous determination to blacken the German character at all costs, is strong, vigorous, and unforgiving. No English newspaper is now read by the kaiser. He says he finds their uncritical abuse and libelous vilifications beyond the power of his tolerance.

Russia's Doom God's Act.

Russia's war minister is, for the fallen German emperor, the Judas Iscariot of the world. He has no language too strong for his condemnation of this "dishonest and treacherous" man. The doom which has befallen Russia seems to him like the judgment of God.

He feels that England has never realized the justice of Germany's dread of Russia. England at one time feared Russia, at another time vilified and scorned her, and at another time fell upon her neck and kissed her, but for Germany Russia has always been a world menace, inscrutable and treacherous, a mass of black ignorance, savage ferocity, and almost soulless animalism, which, moving westward, would one day flood the world with revolution and death. Always for Germany Russia has been bolshevist.

Thinks Evil Menaces World.

As to the future of the world, the kaiser entertains the conviction that everything precious in human life is now menaced with destruction by the organized forces of evil. He has found a new peril. Bolshevism for him is only a criminal alias for Freemasonry. He is convinced that atheistical and socialistic Freemasonry as it exists on the continent is a power comparable in its organization and its international ramifications with the Latin church.

He sees in the destruction of German unity and German discipline not so much the physical victory of the entente as the spiritual victory of this atheistical secret society.

He reads a number of books on the subject and his eloquence about Freemasonry is as earnest and didactic as in former days was his denunciation of the yellow peril, socialism, and Slavism.

Driving Toward Abyss.

He sees in front of humanity a fearful abyss of agony and ruin toward which the hidden hand of Freemasonry is fast driving the unconscious masses of the world. He says that two great powers still stand in the midst of the world ruin, the church of Rome and the Free Masons.

"The Church of Rome at least stands for law and order," he says, "but as for me, I am true to the church of my forefathers and the Bible is all I need for my guidance. My grandmother, Queen Victoria, used to say, too: 'In the Bible you will find all that is necessary. Do not seek elsewhere.'"

He is convinced that atheism has fastened political tentacles round the body of civilization and is preparing to destroy its existence. Freemasonry for him is Satanism. This anxiety which chiefly concerns Germany is the first and principal preoccupation of the fallen emperor. He prays daily, almost hourly, that his people may be saved from the fate of Russia.

Wonders What Folks Think.

Second to this prepossession is his eagerness to know what educated people in England think about him and say about him at their dinner tables. He likes to talk to his host about practices in England they both know and people there who were once their friends.

He never dreams that the happiness of the past can be restored. Everything is fallen; everything lies broken at his feet. He has failed, and his doom is lifelong. When he is in these moods he speaks with freedom and compassion of his past.

"I have made mistakes," he will say. "I see now where I might have done better. But consider my difficulties! I came to the throne too young. I really succeeded my grandfather. The hundred days of my father's reign do not count. I succeeded my grandfather, and I found myself surrounded by his statesmen. They were all old men. They regarded me as a boy. They treated me with the amused tolerance which old men in those days employed toward their youngers. It was really insufferable.

Was Eager for Power.

"I determined to assert my power; I determined to be the leader of young Germany, the true king of a great people destined to be a mighty nation and the strong rock of law, order, and culture in the center of Europe.

"The opposition I encountered made me headstrong. I can see now how bad it was for me. I became impatient, intemperate, but, in spite of my faults, I did help Germany to grow to great power and I kept the peace for many years; and if Russia had not betrayed the world there would be peace now. I have made mistakes, but no man is more innocent of this war than I."

There is a strong loyalist party in Germany, and the former kaiser is interested in its progress. He maintains certain relations with it and is in frequent communication with his brother, Prince Henry of Prussia, who supplies him with all new German literature of any significance.

Looks for Peace Now.

But I think that no hope exists in his heart of a return to his throne and that he is quite impersonally interested in the future destiny of his country. He and the former empress would like to buy a place in Guelderland and there end the evening of their days in peace and seclusion. The ex-emperor is conscious that he has failed to save his country and that his reign has culminated in a disaster.

The end of that reign, as one feels it here in this Dutch village, is certainly tragic enough. The once puissant and medieval emperor, who made himself the mouthpiece of God and whose sword would flash from its sheath on occasion, sits on one side of a hearth in Holland, talking of Freemasons and shaking his head over the world's lapse into atheism. On the other side of the hearth sits the former empress, whose one task is to comfort and sustain her fallen lord.

Must Live Outlaw's Life.

These two human beings, paying the penalty of failure, discuss the world across their fireside and are more remote from the great world than the village policeman lounging in front of the castle gate. They are prisoners and the jailer who turned the key on their liberty is the world they discuss in their prison cell. Whatever the ex-kaiser may think will be history's verdict on his part in the war, no one knows better than he that for the rest of his human existence he must live the threatened life of an outlaw.

Suffering and sorrow have brought the ex-emperor and ex-empress into an intimacy which before the war was perhaps impossible. They are now seldom apart. The ex-empress is not more anxious and devoted in her ministrations to the emperor than he is anxious and devoted in nursing her through her frequent and often very painful heart attacks.

Is a Home Man Now.

They have become thoroughly bourgeois in their affection, sharing the same room, sitting by day at the same fireside, and manifesting toward each other all those little gestures and phrases of endearment which we associate with middle class domestic happiness. The ex-empress on one side of the hearth will sit with a piece of needlework in her hands, while the ex-emperor on the other side, reads aloud to her from a book which has reached him either from Germony or England. Perhaps I may be allowed to say he is now reading my book, "The Vindication of Great Britain," in which I have traced back to its source the stream of causes which ended in the Niagara of war.

A Breakfast Suggestion

Fried Sausage With Gravy. Lay slices of Jones Dairy Farm Sausage meat on a very hot iron frying-pan, and turn them as soon as they are well browned. As soon as the second side is browned they should be set into a hot oven to finish cooking.

Remove from the pan the instant they are done, and keep hot while making gravy. Add dry flour to the fat in the pan and let it brown as much as you dare to—then brown it a little more.

Remove from the fire while adding boiling water (one-half pint for each tablespoon of flour); stir till it is smooth and all the glaze in the bottom of the pan is dissolved, then return to the fire to boil for two minutes.

A Luncheon Dainty

Pork Loaf. 2 lbs. Jones Dairy Farm Sausage, 1 lb. steak chopped, 4 slices bread (soaked in milk), ½ onion (chopped), 2 eggs, salt, pepper and mace, grated rind lemon, 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Mix ingredients thoroughly. Grease a pan with butter or lard, place loaf in it, dust over with bread crumbs and bake in medium oven. Baste with melted lard several times. When done, serve hot.

For the Home Dinner

Scalloped Sausage and Cabbage. 1½ cups cold fried Jones Dairy Farm Sausage, shredded, 1½ cups cooked chopped cabbage, 1½ cups white sauce, well seasoned. Arrange in layers in a baking dish. Cover with buttered crumbs; heat in oven until sausage bubbles through the crumbs.

PETROGRAD SAFE, BUT DOG "VEAL" IS A DELICACY

Thug Terror Replaced by Want and Lack of Nourishment.

BY FRAZIER HUNT.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

FIFTH ARTICLE.

PETROGRAD, via Paris, March 29.—It is after midnight as I am writing. I have just come from wandering alone up and down the silent streets of Petrograd. I would say they are as safe as the streets in any American city. Robbers, looters, and street thieves are shot here now, and while the revolutionary terror and the overshadowing force of the Red army still lives, life is absolutely safe.

After dark only few pedestrians meet you. They hurry by, with their hands buried deep in their overcoat pockets. Rare, indeed, are the sounds of motor horns, for all automobiles are requisitioned by the government, and only officials ride about. The street cars run from 7 o'clock in the morning until 7 at night. Not more than a third of the windows in the great apartment houses—all Petrograd lives in flats—are lit, for only some 900,000 of the 2,000,000 of population remain here. Dim and far separated, the street lights cast an uncertain blue glow over the frozen streets, on which great piles of snow border the walks. The color of mystery and silence reminds one of Paris in the days of the Hun air raids.

Picture in Daylight.

In the daytime crowded cars clank by. The street crowds slip and slide over the frozen walks and at every street corner there stands the picturesque horse sleds, the drivers wearing the same regulation fur cap, blue coats of the old days. Their horses look as if they had received no feed since the czar's time. Practically all shops are closed, the windows are boarded up, and those which are open only sell luxuries—bric-à-brac, pictures, leather goods, and flowers. Everything which came under the general heading of necessity was long ago requisitioned by the government and today is sold only through the municipal stores on orders given by the committee on poverty that is formed in each great apartment house. Today if a Petrograd matron wishes to buy, say, a pair of rubbers she must go to her own house committee on poverty, elected by all the working people who live in that particular house—everybody works in Petrograd these days—and prove she really needs a pair of rubbers. If she convinces them she takes the order to the government store. If she is lucky she can buy rubbers for a fair price. Certain things, like shoes, are allotted each house according to the number of people and are drawn by lottery.

Conserves Its Possessions.

"First we recognized that we would have to live within our own borders and make such things as we had last as long as possible," an official said. "We had to conserve everything the country possessed. The second reason was that there was a terrible amount of speculation. We requisitioned supplies in order to break this up. We bought goods requisitioned at a fair price. We sell them at a fair price. If we hadn't done this storekeepers would have hidden goods or sold them at a speculative price. It would have been so high that only the rich could have bought."

But speculations are still rife here. It is a common saying that half the people live from selling "speculated" goods to the other half. Trade in foodstuffs goes on in a thousand underground ways. The reason is that the government rations kept to feed the soldiers of the red army and the railroad workers—these railroad people won their pound and a half of bread daily by threatening a strike—are more than sufficient to live on.

In Petrograd there are three active categories for drawing food. The first numbers 700,000 and draws half a pound of black bread daily. This month it has been allotted certain extras—one pound of sugar, a half pound of fat, one pound of fish, one pound of herrings, and two pounds of salt. These 700,000 are all working people, who are employed at hard work, and all children. A woman with three children doing her own housework is included, also nursing mothers.

Rations Are Diminished.

The second category, numbering 200,000, includes all working people, such as clerks, teachers, and office employés, who do not labor physically. This class draws a quarter of a pound of bread daily and certain extras.

The third category is composed of unproductive members of the community who do not work, but live on money. Its membership numbers 24,000. This class draws one-eighth of a pound of bread.

All children are included in the first category and get a good meal every noon free at their schools. In this connection it should be mentioned that the soviets are doing everything possible for the children. They furnish them free books and free lunches, and are making every effort to have the state care for them properly.

Altogether there are sixty-five large and 150 small dining rooms that feed approximately a half million people daily. The largest of these halls feed 70,000 daily and people have the choice of either eating meals there or taking them away and eating them at home. Besides the halls for unclassified people there are a number especially for children. I visited one of these yesterday in the former palace of the Duchess Olga. Dinner here was 20 cents and hundreds came with buckets and plates to take their children's food home. The meals were very poor, but the managers are trying desperately to make the small amount of food go as far as possible.

But even with rations and municipal dining rooms the people are hungry. It is this that has led to the wild speculation in food that the government has been unable to combat. For instance, here is a family in the second category, drawing a quarter of a pound of bread daily for each person. They may get poor lunches at the municipal dining rooms, but they simply must buy food outside.

Prices for Food.

For this contraband today's prices were approximately: Black flour, $2 a pound; sugar, $10; horse meat, $2.20; veal, $3.90; veal, with dog's tail still showing, $2; potatoes, 70 cents a pound.

Peasants who bring this contraband food in from their hidden stores in the country, grow rich overnight. Thousands are busy peddling underground stores and making enormous profits. Ordinarily much of all this is prohibited, but at all times when the government food supply is exceptionally low they permit what they call here "free trade" for a week or two, and then the things that have been sold surreptitiously are placed in the open market.

Now and again the red army group sweeps down on the markets and requisitions the visible supply of food at a low price. Next day the poor citizen pays even more for his scanty provisions.

Russian Official Admits Bolsheviki Face Failure

STOCKHOLM, March 29.—A frank avowal that the position of the bolshevik government had become absolutely intolerable was made at the recent international bolshevik conference by M. Lunacharsky, minister of education in the soviet government, according to a Petrograd dispatch. The minister is said to have confessed that the "Socialist conscience of the very circles on which bolshevism is based is shaken at present."

Lunacharsky also admitted that the worst enemy of bolshevism was the allied economic blockade, and he even went so far as to predict the end of the bolshevik régime if the blockade continued. He said that owing to physical privations from lack of bread, fuel, and raw materials it was natural that wrath should be provoked against the government and that it should also be accused of inefficiency.

Allies Still in Danger.

PARIS, March 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—The situation for the allies at Odessa is still critical, according to the last advices. The Russian soviet communique of March 25 declared that the vanguards of the bolshevik forces were close upon the suburbs of the city.

Cannon Busy in Far North.

ARCHANGEL, March 28.—[Delayed.]—[By the Associated Press.]—Allied artillery was active today in the vicinity of the village of Bolshoia Ozera, but the cloudy weather hindered the work of the aviators who were observing the effects of the cannonade.

A small infantry attack was made on the allied positions on the Vega front on Wednesday. In spite of a bombardment which preceded the attack, the bolsheviki were repulsed and lost heavily. The allies suffered only two casualties.

Lettish Troops Victors.

LIBAU, March 29.—After a violent battle along the Mitau-Tukkum railway, Lettish forces have defeated the bolsheviki and occupied the towns of Kammern and Kalnzem. Kalnzem is about twenty miles southwest of Riga.

JAPS WITHDRAW TROOPS

Washington, D. C., March 29.—[Special.]—Japan has withdrawn all except 26,000 troops from Siberia, according to a statement made by Viscount Uchida, minister of foreign affairs, given in the Japanese parliament in answer to an interpellation on Siberian intervention, says a cable dispatch received from Tokio today.

It is the policy of the Japanese government, the minister declared, to remain aloof from the internal politics of Siberia; but in case of local tranquillity being disturbed by bolshevist uprisings, the troops might be called upon to cope with the danger.

Foreign Minister Uchida stated that the Japanese troops would be withdrawn entirely from Siberia when the establishment of peace makes their stay unnecessary.

"LEAGUE OR RED CHAOS; SENATE MUST CHOOSE"

New York, March 29.—Asserting that "the black clouds of bolshevism are hovering over Italy, France, and England," Hamilton Holt, editor of the Independent, who returned recently from the peace conference at Paris, declared in an address here today that the alternative to bolshevism was creation of a league of nations.

Speaking before the League for Political Education, Mr. Holt said:

"The night before I sailed an eminent Frenchman of whom you have all heard said to me that if our senate did not ratify this treaty there would be revolt in Europe that would be akin to a volcanic eruption."

Arrest 2,000 Agitators in Barcelona, Spain

Washington, D. C., March 29.—Approximately 2,000 agitators at Barcelona, Spain, have been arrested, according to a Madrid cablegram today to the state department.

Pershing Calls for Books for His Men Overseas

Washington, D. C., March 29.—Gen. Pershing has cabled a call for more reading matter for the soldiers overseas. He says it is needed now more than ever. Transmitting the call today to its divisions and chapters, the American Red Cross called attention to the fact that a 1 cent stamp pasted upon the cover still will take a magazine to a member of the expeditionary force, although some publishers recently have dropped the notice to that effect carried by most periodicals in the upper right hand corner of their first pages.

Allenby Tells Egyptians He'll Drop Gentle Tactics

CAIRO, Egypt, Friday, March 28.—Gen. E. H. Allenby, the new commander in chief in Egypt, told a gathering of Egyptian notables today that he would be forced to employ active repression to restore order in Egypt. He said that it had been found impossible to restore order by defensive measures.

CONGRESS TO END MURDER OF U. S. MEN IN MEXICO

List of Nine Americans Whose Deaths Have Gone Unpunished.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., March 29.—[Special.]—With border raids and the murder of Americans again on the increase, the administration policy of dealing with Mexico and particularly the failure of the administration to enforce protection for Americans in Mexico are destined to receive extensive consideration by congress at the forthcoming extraordinary session.

American business men are now being given passports by the state department to go to such parts of Mexico as are deemed pacified and safe.

Villa Still at Large.

They do not include Chihuahua, where Villa is still at large perpetrating outrages upon Americans; Sonora, where the Yaqui Indians are a constant danger; the Tampico oil fields, where Gen. Palaes defies the authority of Carranza; the Zapata stronghold south of Mexico City; Caxaca, and parts of several other states which Carranza has failed to pacify.

Not without interest is the disclosure that the state department has been impelled to lift the restrictions on the return of American business men to Mexico, partly because it was found that European commercial agents were arriving in Mexico in considerable numbers and beginning to capture business that formerly belonged to Americans. British, French, and other European merchants found Mexico safe and are going about their business unmolested. Far less safe is Mexico for an American.

Enjoying Friendly Relations.

In the last seventeen months in the Vera Cruz and Tampico oil districts nine Americans have been killed, eleven wounded, and property valued at more than $170,000 stolen. In the Tampico oil fields between Aug. 15, 1917, and Feb. 5, 1919, there were 114 raids upon oil properties, some of them attended by bloodshed and twenty-one of the outrages were committed by Carranza troops executing "requisitions" for supplies for which no reimbursement was offered or made.

While all these robberies and murders were being committed the United States was "enjoying friendly relations" with Carranza, whom President Wilson addressed on July 20, 1917, as "great and good friend."

MEXICAN OUTRAGES TO DRAW U. S. FIRE

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 29.—[Special.]—Below is a list of authenticated outrages committed against Americans and American property in Mexico while the United States, according to the administration, has been "enjoying friendly relations" with Carranza. Want the Woman Worker Guarded in Peace Treaty

PARIS, March 29.—Miss Rosa Schneiderman of New York and Miss Mary Anderson of Chicago, representing the National Women's Trade Union League of the United States, applied at American headquarters today for an audience with Col. E. M. House of the American delegation. They wish to discuss the inclusion of a clause in the peace treaty insuring the recognition of the rights of women workers.

Chicago Student Airman Killed in 300 Ft. Nose Spin

Miami, Fla., March 29.—G. M. Gendrau of Chicago, student at the naval air station here, met instant death today when his plane went into a nose spin and fell 300 feet into Biscayne bay.

COL. SANBORN'S GALLANTRY TOLD OF IN LETTER

Lucien E. Harding, Chicago attorney, has just received a letter from his brother, Capt. Dwight Harding, in France, who mentions a short visit with Col. "Joe" Sanborn of Chicago. The letter says:

"Tours, Feb. 28.—Dear Lucien: Today being Saturday, I am stopping over a day in Tours on my way back from a small convoy trip east of here. Have a good many friends up here at headquarters, and so can put in the time profitably.

"A couple of days ago I had as my guest at dinner Col. Sanborn of the old First regiment, Chicago, who was ordered here to have another medal pinned on him, this time the Belgian. He sure has made a record for a man 64 years old. He put in a fight for the British which so astonished the division commander that he asked who that old devil was who personally led his regiment into attack, and they forthwith put the Distinguished Service Cross (British) on him then and there.

"The American D. C. M. followed, and now the Belgian. He was glad to run into some one from Chicago, and, as he was alone, we had a fine dinner party and he told me his version of a fight about which I had heard a good deal from other sources. His own brigade commander (American) said he didn't know whether the damned old fool ought to be court martialed or decorated, as he complied with an impossible order from British headquarters and went in and ate the boche alive without his machine guns and a part of his automatic rifles, which could not be got up on time. It is a great finish for his military career.

"Found a nice box of cigars from him awaiting me last night, as he insisted that I dine with him if I could get back in time. Affectionately,

"DWIGHT S. HARDING.

U. S. MAY LOSE ALL THOSE HARD EARNED TITLES

Washington, D. C., March 29.—[Special.]—President Wilson may find himself forbidden to accept or retain gifts from foreign kings. Gen. Pershing may have to renounce the title of "Sir" recently conferred upon him by King George. Josephus Daniels may not be permitted to enter the British knighthood.

All these prohibitions are dependent upon completion of ratification of a constitutional amendment pending for more than 100 years. Senator Gore today resurrected from dusty archives a copy of the amendment, which for many years was popularly supposed to be a part of America's basic law, forbidding any American to receive or retain a title or gift from a foreign prince or power.

"It failed of ratification by only one state," says Senator Gore. "I might say, by only half of one state, as the senate of South Carolina ratified the amendment, but the house failed to do so.

"This amendment is still pending and is still subject to ratification. It seems to me its ratification would be a fitting triumph of world-wide democracy."

Queen Marie Says She Hopes to Visit America

LONDON, Friday, March 28.—"I hope to visit America after the war," Queen Marie of Roumania said to the Associated Press at a reception in the Roumanian legation today in rely to a suggestion that it was understood the queen was contemplating such a visit.

"I must return to Roumania as soon as I can," she added, "because my work is there until peace is settled. I have great admiration for American women because of the important part they take in every walk of life in their country. Perhaps they would be interested in me because I have tried to do something for my country."

U. S. LABOR HELPS STEM RED TIDE, GOMPERS SAYS

Thinks That Our Nation's Workmen Play Leading Part in Crisis.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

LONDON, March 29.—"Organized labor of America is playing its part—I should not be modest if I said a leading part—in building a dam between the civilized world and crazy bolshevism. I should be even more immodest if I said that it is the intelligence of American labor which qualifies it to play this all important part in this supreme crisis in the history of the world."

It was Samuel Gompers talking. The president of the American Federation of Labor is in London on his way home from Paris, where he presided over the section of the peace conference which has drawn up what he calls the "Magna Charta" of international labor.

Sees Big Labor Jubilee.

"If the labor charter which we have prepared and unanimously recommended is adopted by the peace conference and incorporated with the rest of the charter of the league of nations in the peace treaty," said Mr. Gompers, "the greatest international convention of organized labor ever held will meet in Washington next October.

"We agreed in Paris that eight hours shall be the standard working day the world over. We agreed also that no children under the age of 16 shall be employed in any country which adheres to the league of nations. We adopted other principles which I may not state until our charter has been acted on by delegates of powers now sitting in Paris. But when it is made public in full it will, I am sure, commend itself to laboring men everywhere as a tremendous step forward.

Eight Hour Day in England.

"I am glad to see that the industrial commission appointed by Premier Lloyd George here in Great Britain has also reported in favor of the principle of the eight hour day, minimum wage, and restrictions of child labor. That commission includes both labor leaders and big employers, representing all the industry of the United Kingdom. I take it to indicate that our international charter just adopted at Paris will have the powerful support of Great Britain at the peace conference, as I am sure it will also have that of the delegates from the United States.

"I cannot make too strong my conviction that in the intelligence and sound judgment of organized labor of the United States lies the hope of the civilized world. But we must have also the coöperation and friendly support of employers."

WOMEN AWAIT HEARING.

BY CONSTANCE DREXEL.

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, March 29.—After seven weeks of hard, steady work Samuel Gompers and the international labor commission of the peace conference have quietly slipped out of Paris. Mr. Gompers has gone to England to confer with labor leaders before sailing for the United States, where he will report to the workers over there what his commission has done to justify its existence.

The report with recommendations on international legislation has been completed and is said to have been altered to comport with some suggestions put forth by women at the hearing before the labor commission.

The women's appointment for the conference of the league of nations has not been made, but Lady Aberdeen, president of the International Council of Women, who now is in Paris for the peace conference, has been assured by Lord Cecil an audience would be granted. This decision was made at a meeting of the commission which asked President Wilson as president of the commission to fix a day and hour.

This statement was also confirmed by M. Clauzel, secretary of the league commission for France, in a message to Mme. Jules Siegfried, president of the French National Council of Women. The appointment of time for the women to be received and to be heard by the league of nations commission is expected to come direct from President Wilson to Lady Aberdeen. At least two neutral nations—Holland and Denmark—will be represented by officers of their national women's councils. Women are anxiously awaiting the day and the hour of the hearing.

$500 VERDICT IN SIX YEAR SUIT.

Michigan City, Ind., March 29.—A jury here today awarded $500 damages to August Kehl, East Chicago business man, against the Lake Shore and South Bend Electric line, for injuries received six years ago, when his automobile was struck in Gary. Kehl sued for $10,000.

ILLINOIS UNITS TO CONTINUE IN NEW PEACE ARMY

Commands of Reilly, Davis, and Foreman to Be Perpetuated.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., March 29.—[Special.]—Despite the refusal of the last congress to approve its plan for a regular army of 500,000 men, the war department today announced its decision to effect such a regular organization if possible and to do it before peace is declared, under the emergency authority granted to the president.

Gen. March, the chief of staff, made the announcement disclosing complete plans for organization of the new army which will include five army corps of twenty-one divisions, the personnel to be obtained from enlistment, if it is possible to enlist that many men before peace is declared or before congress can enact legislation to alter plans for a permanent military force.

Illinois and other middle western units in the American expeditionary force are honored in the makeup of the new army, the Thirty-second and Thirty-third divisions being retained. The Rainbow, or Forty-second division, also is marked for distinction in the new organization, and will constitute a cavalry division to be organized in the southern department.

Foreman Command Retained.

Identity of the One Hundred and Twenty-second field artillery, the former First Illinois cavalry, commanded in Europe by Col. Milton J. Foreman, is retained in the organization of the Thirty-third division, as is that of the One Hundred and Thirty-second regiment of infantry, formerly of the Illinois national guard, commanded in Europe by Col. Abel Davis.

Identity of the One Hundred and Thirty-first infantry, commanded by Col. Joseph B. Sanborn, is not retained.

Honor for Reilly's Bucks.

Chicago's One Hundred and Forty-ninth regiment of field artillery, which was commanded in the European fighting by Col. Henry J. Reilly, also is accorded the honor of representation in the new Forty-second division, and will become a horse regiment of artillery in the new army.

Explaining the new organization, Gen. March said: "The announcement which I made before that the army would be retained at a strength of 500,000 men can now be supplemented by a statement of the complete organization of that 500,000 men as an army. Not simply 500,000 men in bulk, but the actual organization.

"The scheme which I have adopted involves the organization of five army corps, comprising twenty divisions of infantry and one cavalry division.

Designation of Divisions.

"The numerical designation of the seven regular army divisions now in France will be retained, and the remaining divisions after the Seventh, running up to the Twenty-first, will have numerical designations corresponding to certain divisions originally raised from the national guard and the national army, and will not be numbered consecutively.

"I have prepared a plan of this entire organization of the army, which gives each separate organization which is included in the divisions and the place in the United States which will be its permanent headquarters and the states from which the men of such divisions will be drawn in the future. As a summary of it, I give the divisions and their permanent headquarters. These camps have been purchased or are in process of being purchased."

Designation of Headquarters.

The list follows:

First division, Camp Pike, Ark.
Second division, Camp Dodge, Ia.
Third division, Camp Lee, Va.
Fourth division, Camp Kearney, Cal.
Fifth division, Panama canal zone.
Sixth division, Honolulu.
Seventh division, divided between Philippines, Alaska, and Mexican border.
Twenty-sixth at Camp Devens, Mass.
Twenty-seventh at Camp Upton, N.Y.
Twenty-eighth at Camp Dix, N. Y.
Twenty-ninth at Camp Meade, Md.
Thirtieth at Camp Jackson, S. C.
Thirty-second at Camp Custer, Mich.
Thirty-third at Camp Grant, Ill.
Thirty-sixth at Camp Travis, Tex.
Thirty-seventh at Camp Sherman, O.
Eighty-first at Camp Taylor, Ky.
Eighty-second at Camp Gordon, Ga.
Eighty-ninth at Camp Funston, Kas.
Ninety-first at Camp Lewis, Wash.

"We have," Gen. March said, "the 500,000 men, and they are authorized under the laws which were passed for the emergency. The organizations which we are now announcing will be subject to future legislation by the congress.

"The organization of these divisions, allowing them to retain the numerical designations of the divisions which had been raised from national army and national guard men, does not interfere with the discharge of any officer or enlisted man who wants to get out. It simply keeps the military history of these units, which is always an inspiration. We are going to keep these records as a part of our military history and the location of the division in the section in which it was raised will give the people of the section a natural pride in that organization which is going to stay right with them."

The decision to raise a special foreign service volunteer replacement force of 50,000 men, Gen. March said today, was based on the discovery made by Secretary Baker and himself on their recent tour of army camps that a large number of men were anxious to enlist in the army if service abroad could be guaranteed them.

A U. S. FLYER'S GRAVE IN FRANCE

The first photograph of a Chicago soldier's grave in France has been taken by the Red Cross and forwarded to the parents of the young hero, Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Burr of the Chicago Beach hotel.

The son, Lieut. Alexander Thompson Burr, an aviator, met his death while engaged in target practice on Oct. 12, at an aviation camp in France. Mr. Burr declared if it had not been for the Red Cross he would have been unable to get any information about the manner in which his son met his death.

"Mrs. Burr and I feel that we can never be grateful enough to the Red Cross," Mr. Burr said. "As soon as our request for information reached the bureau of communications at Washington, word was sent to the other side and a Red Cross searcher dispatched to locate the grave, and, if possible, obtain details for us of the manner in which our boy lost his life.

"What the Red Cross has done for his mother and me in the way of prompt sending of this sacred news, of planting vines and flowers on the grave, and now of forwarding us this photograph, is consolation to us of the highest order. No other organization in the world would or could have done it, I am sure. Words fail me when I think of the beauty of this loving service."

MAKE CHICAGO'S MILITARY PLAN NATIONAL—WOOD

Give 'Sporting Chance' to Boys in Next War, the General Urges.

Returning the snappy salutes of eight soldiers of Chicago's high school army as they swung before him in review yesterday, Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood pledged himself to help make the city's Junior R. O. T. C. plan national as the first big step in Uncle Sam's universal military training plans.

The Central department commander indorsed the Chicago training plan and preparations for a high school summer training camp and at a luncheon in the Union League club urged more than one hundred business and professional men to support the movement. President Jacob M. Loeb of the school board, Capt. F. L. Beals, director of military-physical training in Chicago schools, Supt. Charles E. Chadsey and Julius Rosenwald addressed the luncheon meeting, at which the high school boys drilled before Gen. Wood in the dining room.

Land for Camp Obtained.

Capt. Beals announced that despite lack of congressional appropriation the Chicago school system has secured 450 acres of wooded land at Lake Harbor for a summer camp, at which teachers and students from every part of the country will get initial instruction and training.

"The town of Muskegon has pledged $10,000 a year for lease of this ideal camp land," said Capt. Beals. "The Y. M. C. A. has asked its general headquarters for $7,500 to carry on its end of the work in camp. We need Chicago's moral and financial backing if the camp is to win through to national success."

Good, Sound Sense, Says Wood.

"You have heard good, sound sense here," said Gen. Wood. "We must all get behind this movement so that when the next war comes we will be ready to meet it promptly and effectively. We were fortunatae in being able to make our preparations for this last war behind the allied lines, but there may be no allied lines protecting us in the future.

"On the training of reserve officers will depend the amount of your losses in future wars and in the amount of peace you are to have. We must bring about universal military training for our protection and self-respect. This is a good start. We know we can train the average citizen for duty as a private soldier in six months, but we found vital the need of trained officers for the work. I hope every city and state will take this high school plan up and we can bring about the granting of credits so that when the time of need comes these boys with a period of supplementary training can be made the leaders of their country's forces.

"National preparedness may be long in coming. There are obstacles to be overcome, but it will come coupled with the vocational training that will make for universal service. You know more wars will come. Give your boys a sporting chance by making them strong and efficient and giving them officers who will save them from death on the battlefield."

IT'S A VERY BAD PUN' BUT IT WILL SERVE; "HOW HOUR YOU"

GOOD morning, how hour you?

That's pretty punk, but the idea is that you should have turned the timepiece sixty minutes ahead this morning at 2 o'clock. And if you didn't this will serve as a reminder.

The new time will remain in force until the last Sunday in October, when clocks will be moved back an hour.

The change of time is made necessary by the daylight saving law passed by congress during the war and which is still in effect.

Trains today will run on the changed time.

A caution concerning the daylight saving plan was issued yesterday by Chief Clerk James F. Sullivan of the election board. He asks that the voters be careful to observe the new time schedule, as "otherwise you may find yourself an hour or two late Monday morning or even Tuesday and probably without time to vote." The polls will be open from 6 a. m. to 4 p. m. Tuesday, by the new government time.

LONDON CHANGES TIME.

LONDON, March 29.—Summer time in the United Kingdom will begin Sunday. The clocks will be advanced one hour at 2 o'clock tomorrow morning.

ADMIRER'S TALE ALL LIES, SAYS MRS. C. E. BRITTON

Mrs. C. E. Britton is quite indignant, and her ire is roused particularly over the statements of George Ischida, whom she had arrested for annoying her and who was fined $100 and costs Friday.

Ischada was arrested in a "Holy Roller" mission meeting near State and Congress streets Thursday evening, on Mrs. Britton's complaint. He said then that she had jilted him for Britton, that he met her at the Pacific Garden mission Sept. 9, that she came and sat down beside him, asked if he were looking for salvation, and on learning that he was, said, "God be praised."

He said Mrs. Britton, then Miss Reed, put her hand on his shoulder and became quite friendly with him.

"It wasn't Sept. 9 at all," said Mrs. Britton last night. "That's a lie. His story is a mass of lies. It was Sept. 19. I didn't take to him spiritually at all, never put my hand on him, never sat down beside him. He wrote me two notes in the mission and handed them to me. He kept pestering me even after I was married. I never gave him any encouragement at all. Not the least."

Orders Inquiry Into Tale of Alternating Wife

The matrimonial career of Mrs. Bay Schaufer, formerly of 3529 Lake Park avenue, who is accused of having changed husbands at will, was ordered investigated yesterday by Judge Sheridan Fry in the Court of Domestic Relations. Mrs. Schaufer is believed to be in Kenosha, Wis., and the authorities there have been asked to find her and ascertain if the story told by her husband is the truth. According to the husband, Henry Schaufer, who was called into court on a charge of nonsupport, he believes his wife is now with her second husband, Charles Kettle, whom she divorced several months ago to remarry Schaufer, husband No. 1.

We Want You to Ride
Thousands Praise this New Car
In the Essex

The Essex is being advertised by what people say who have tried it—not by what we claimed. That is why we ask you to ride in the Essex and see for yourself what this car will do.

The qualities in the Essex which appeal most are those very qualities that are most attractive in the light, cheap car and those of the large, costly one. They are comfort, riding ease, endurance, and elegance at a moderate cost for purchase and operation.

Ask any motorist what he thinks about the Essex. His answer is sure to be more enthusiastic than anything we have said. We have tempered all our claims. We knew how strongly the Essex would speak for itself.

Every Essex Sales Room Now Holds Motordom's Interest

Essex popularity is not limited to any one city or locality.

People instantly admire its beauty. They speak of the detail and care with which it is finished. They note its lines and talk of features they have never seen on any but costly cars. Such are their observations.

But their real enthusiasm comes when they return from a test ride. They are not prepared for such easy riding qualities over rough cobblestone streets and worn-out pavements. The Essex does not pitch its passengers about. It remains rigid and firm and free from rattles and squeaks no matter how rough the service.

The Essex is demonstrated on the boggy hills used to prove climbing ability by high-powered and costly cars. Speed is shown over the same course that fast cars are demonstrated. Passengers are told to hold their watches on the speedometer to note the quickness af Essex acceleration.

These are things you will observe when you ride in the Essex. We will arrange for a driving appointment at your convenience if you will let us know.

CLAIM BOY MADE CONFESSION TO ENGINE MURDER

Lawyer for Widow Says Story Was Hushed Up; Bared by Chum.

Facts that may clear up the mystery surrounding the death of Frank J. Horan, engineer of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, who was killed by a "stray bullet" on April 20, 1918, while driving a train through Elmwood Park, were uncovered last night. The outstanding features of the investigations by police, Juvenile court authorities, and attorneys are:

Horan was killed by a bullet deliberately aimed and fired by John Taylor, 15 year old boy. It is said the bullet was fired to avenge a "wronged" gang of Elmwood Park boys.

The Taylor lad, who, until yesterday, was confined in the Cook County School for Boys, has made a confession to railroad detectives and to the head of the boys' home, Attorney P. J. Zisch of Milwaukee declares.

Claims Confession Was Hushed.

The confession is said by Attorney Zisch to have been hushed up to protect the railroad from paying the widow a claim under the workmen's compensation law.

Chicago police, associated with Elmwood Park police, are reopening investigations of the death.

The death of Horan had been called an accident by a coroner's jury in Milwaukee last May, and local police authorities had dropped the case until yesterday, when Mrs. Ethel Horan, widow of the engineer, and her lawyer, P. J. Zisch, appeared in the Juvenile court with evidence against John Taylor, who has been a ward of the court for more than a year.

Second Boy Tells Story.

Mrs. Horan gave the court officials a copy of a confession made by Freddie Hess, a 15 year old Elmwood Park boy. The confession, which bore young Hess' signature, asserted Taylor had confided to Hess that he fired the bullet which killed Horan.

Juvenile authorities immediately ordered Taylor removed from the Cook County School for Boys to a city police station. Unless other investigations interfere, Taylor will be brought before Judge Victor P. Arnold in the Juvenile court on Monday morning.

Mrs. Horan told the following story to the court officials:

"I never believed that the coroner's verdict in Milwaukee was sufficiently based upon facts to be conclusive. Last week a man told me that this Hess boy knew of the murder, and this morning I arrived in Elmwood Park and, with the aid of my attorney, obtained the lad's confession.

Mrs. Horan asserted the railroad company had never paid any attention to her claim under the workmen's compensation law.

Mother Helps Mrs. Horan.

Mrs. Ethel Kantz, mother of John Taylor, sought out Mrs. Horan last night and added her bit to the story.

"My boy was confined to the Cook County School for Boys eight months ago by my request," Mrs. Kantz said. "He was incorrigible and delinquent. Then I heard vaguely of this railroad shooting and I went to the home to see John.

"One night when I was there there were two railroad detectives in the room with John, myself, and the head of the home. The detectives and John talked softly in one corner, and I couldn't hear what they said.

"Soon one of the detectives came over to me and said that John had made a confession to them and that he would have to be detained in the home."

Mrs. Kantz assumes the boy confessed to killing Horan.

Judge Arnold of the Juvenile court was never informed of this, and neither did Assistant State's Attorney Robert E. Hogan know of it.

"The whole thing has been hushed up by the railroad officials to avoid payment of Mrs. Horan's claim," Attorney Zisch said. "I am going to prove that before a coroner's jury. I cannot understand how the coroner's jury in the Milwaukee inquest ever reached a verdict of 'accident.'"

Chief of Police Mil Johnson of the Elmwood Park police department started an investigation into the murder and questioned the Hess youth.

"Freddie Hess told me he had confessed to Mrs. Horan that the Taylor boy did the shooting," Chief Johnson said.

Scoffed at Accident Idea.

Mrs. Horan told a TRIBUNE reporter that her husband had scoffed at the idea of an "accidental shooting" just before he died.

"When he read in the papers that he had been shot by a stray bullet he laughed weakly and then told me that it couldn't have been an accident," Mrs. Horan said.

Horan, according to the evidence brought before the coroner's inquest, was killed by a stray bullet which came from a troop train that was passing in the opposite direction through Elmwood Park.

Had Chased Boys.

"The idea is impossible," Attorney Zisch declared. "We all know that the engineer sits on the right side of the cab and that as he was going in the opposite direction, a bullet fired from the troop train would have had to curve around the engine."

Attorney Zisch asserts that Horan had chased a gang of coal stealing boys from the railroad property just prior to the shooting and that Taylor was picked to avenge the wrongs of the gang. Both the Hess and the Taylor boys have long police records, Chief Johnson asserted.

"I have had trouble with these boys ever since I have been in office," he declared.

Attorney Zisch will ask tomorrow that the inquest be reopened.

Owens and John Courtney, Chief of Police Garrity, Capt. Max Nootbaar, Capt. Patrick Lavin, William Luthardt, W. J. Healy, Robert Redfield, John D. Cary, William Moorhouse, John Donohue, Daniel O'Donovan, John Hetzel, George W. Claussenius, John Vogelsang, Emil Demme, Otto and Max Eitel, A. J. POLICE BULLETS CHECK BANDITS IN THIRD HOLDUP

One Man's Hat Shot Off in Battle, but Five Escape.

A band of five men in a stolen automobile staged several robberies on the south side last night and two of them fought a battle with two policemen.

They stopped "Mike the Greek" Potson, cashier in Colosimo's restaurant, 2126 Wabash avenue, as he was going north in Prairie avenue at Twenty-fifth street in his auto. They took $27, his watch, and his ring, and then they took the car.

They drove to the Standard Oil filling station at 3106 West Sixteenth street, but James H. Goggins, 548 South Monticello avenue, became suspicious, and slammed and locked the door when one of them drew a revolver.

Shooting Breaks Up Robbery.

The quintet next made their appearance at the saloon of William Healy, 3856 Union avenue. Three went in. One stood outside. One sat at the wheel of the car. The three inside got $20 from the cash register, and were about to rob the three customers when they heard shooting outside. Policemen J. P. McGinnis and Charles Hedlund had asked the lookout what he was doing there. He jumped into the car, and fired. The police fired, and heard the bullets "ping" through the metal of the car. They shot off the hat of one of the men, and followed for a block, shooting till their guns were empty. Meantime the other three colored men escaped.

Shortly after this three colored men robbed Herman Zippe, 5335 South State street, and robbed him of $24.

Miss Lulu Galloway, 1708 Winnemac avenue, walking along East Ravenswood park, near her home, was accosted by a young man who walked by her side. He demanded, in a quiet voice, that she give him money, and warned her not to scream. Miss Galloway was just as calm as he, and said she had no money. They walked for several blocks before the stranger suddenly disappeared.

Woman Robbed.

Mrs. Esther Chestnut, 3713 Flournoy street, was robbed of her purse, containing $20, at State and Madison streets. At State and Monroe streets Mrs. Flora McGowan, 114 Scoville avenue, Oak Park, was robbed of her purse, containing $44. The police have been looking for a female pickpocket who frequents these corners.

Late last night the police heard there had been a shooting in Joseph Schillisi's poolroom, 2918 Wallace street. Schillisi said he had fired the shot accidentally and that no one had been hurt. He and Angelo Grazelo, 2710 Wallace street, were arrested.

Lieut. Alan F. Winslow, Chicago aviator, reported to the police that a suitcase, containing some presents from his mother, given him since he returned from France, had been stolen from his automobile, parked in Grant park.

Get $2,211 Pay Roll.

Two men robbed the Midland Hat company of $2,211.10 yesterday morning.

They walked into the office, 844 West Adams street, about 10 o'clock, tied the hands of the two men employés, and then forced Miss Emma Utting, the bookkeeper, to get the bag containing the pay roll money.

The same two men, it is believed, held up the meat market of M. H. Conley, 3452 West Chicago avenue, bound the clerk, George Bauer, and escaped with $300.

WOMAN'S THROAT CUT; LEAVES HER NAME A MYSTERY

Milwaukee, Wis., March 29.—Who is the woman who slashed her throat with a butcher knife on a Milwaukee road train and since has been unable to identify herself?

Police and hospital authorities have been unable to learn anything concerning the woman, the only possible clew being an envelope containing the name and address of Appolonia Wallers, Burlington, Wis., R. R. box 50.

Efforts to identify her through Burlington authorities have failed.

The woman, about 40 years old, was found unconscious aboard a Milwaukee train from Chicago. In one hand she held a butcher knife, while her other was holding the collar of her cloak around her throat.

Physicians declare she probably will die.

The conductor of the train had been talking with the woman when she boarded the train in Chicago. She told him, he said, that her relatives live there and that she had gone there to them. They refused to have anything to do with her, she said.

The Phonograph Made By Musical Experts For Musical People

AMONG the numbers of the Aeolian Company's staff are the world's masters in the art of musical instrument building. The magnificent Pipe-organs built by this firm—the most pretentious and costliest instruments ever constructed—are installed in hundreds of the palaces of Europe and residences of wealth in this country.

The Steinway and the Weber Duo-Art Pianos and Pianolas are unapproached in the realm of the pianoforte. All the productions of this great house are distinctive, distinguished and supreme, each in its field.

The Aeolian-Vocalion is far more than has hitherto been conveyed by the word "phonograph." It is a true musical instrument, designed for, and appealing to, people of cultured taste and discernment.

Its tone has the richness, depth, purity and beauty that people with such taste demand and appreciate. Its cases exhibit the simplicity of true art, the appropriateness to their surroundings, that only knowledge and experience in fine instrument designing can produce.

Its many important and exclusive features, such as the Graduola, giving personal control of tone effects; the Universal Tone-Arm, giving access to all the different standard makes of records, and the Automatic Stop, providing a simple and precise means for starting the music and stopping it at desired points; all add their value to the sum of its completeness.

The three instruments illustrated above exemplify the tastefulness and distinction of Vocalion cases. That in the center is Period Model No. 1497 in William & Mary design. Its price is $340. The instrument on the left is Conventional Model No. 600, Price $225. The one on the right is No. 800, Price $350.

MRS. SEVERIN'S FOES IN ATHLETIC CLUB ROW RETIRE

She Cancels Contract, but Wants $11,267 Back Commissions.

BY LUCY CALHOUN.

To all outward appearances Mrs. William Severin won out yesterday at the meeting of the directors of the Illinois Woman's Athletic club, the board of which has been split up over the question of Mrs. Severin's 40 per cent commission on memberships obtained.

A stormy session had been looked for and Mrs. Severin had gathered her adherents together to aid in defending her position, but the other side never showed up.

Instead of coming to the meeting the "disrupters," as they were termed by the Severin forces, sent in their resignations—four nice little notes signed by Miss Florence Holbrook, Miss Clara Neely, Mrs. Charles W. Shippey, and Mrs. Alma Curtiss.

"Expunge from Record."

The directors present, Mrs. Severin, Mrs. Leona Krag, Mrs. S. H. Hutchinson, and Miss Kate Raclin, voted to "expunge from the record" the action taken at a meeting held March 12, whereby a committee of three members, consisting of Mrs. Severin, Mrs. Eleanor Eckel, and Mrs. Charles Shippey, was appointed to take charge of the club's affairs.

"The appointment of that committee was absolutely illedal," said former Judge W. M. Horner, acting as special counsel for Mrs. Severin. "It is impossible to delegate to any one else the power of directors of an organization. The resolution stated the action of two of the members should be binding on the committee, and as Mrs. Eckel and Mrs. Shippey were together in their conception of the state of affairs, Mrs. Severin would have had nothing to say."

The resolution also provided for the appointment of George Angerstein as attorney for the organization.

Forty Per Cent Cheaper.

By expunging the action from the records Mr. Angerstein apparently loses his new position. The women present at the meeting declared that under Mr. Angerstein's management the club would have to pay 25 per cent commission on memberships obtained, with no expense guaranteed, and they thought that Mrs. Severin's 40 per cent with all expenses paid was a cheaper way.

Although Mrs. Severin's resignation of her contract stands and it was declared no other fiscal agent would be chosen, she still is claiming the 40 per cent commission due on memberships not collected.

"I don't know yet what I shall do with the money," she said. "Maybe I'll give it back to the club."

Books in Good Condition.

R. W. Martin, president of the Commonwealth Auditing company, was present at the meeting, with a statement that the books had been found in good condition.

"The purpose of this meeting," Mr. Horner said, speaking for Mrs. Severin, "was to arrange for an annual meeting, which will be held as early as possible and in which new directors will be elected and some of the by-laws of the organization revised. Because of the fact there has been criticism of Mrs. Severin as president and fiscal agent under her contract of Oct. 1, 1918, and in order to remove any question as to the ethics of her holding two positions, she has voluntarily agreed to cancel her contract."

The former directors of the organization who yesterday resigned declared that they knew nothing of the contract by which Mrs. Severin is said to have collected $9,000 and to be claiming $11,267 more.

Issue Statement.

Mrs. C. W. Shippey, Miss Florence Holbrook, and Miss C. B. Neely issued the following statement of their reasons for resigning:

"Owing to the fact that the management of the Illinois Woman's Athletic club is vested solely in the president and two other officers, who have denied our authority to act as directors, the investigation we were asked to hold has been blocked at every turn. Therefore, although we are cognizant of all facts pertaining to the best interests of the club and otherwise, we feel further interest is time lost on our part.

"Therefore, our resignations were tendered March 29, 1919. Under other management we feel the club might have been a great success and we regret this unfortunate termination."

"Spite work." was Mrs. Severin's comment. She also called her opposers "cave men."

It is expected the annual meeting of the club will be held next Saturday.

PLAN TAG DAY TO HELP BUILD CHICAGO HOUSE FOR WORKING GIRLS

THERE'S going to be a tag day within the next two weeks to provide for the erection of the Chicago House for Working Girls. The idea is to provide a home for girls who are supporting themselves. There will be separate bedrooms, not dormitories, and kitchens, parlors, and dining rooms for groups of girls.

The building will be erected somewhere in the northwest side factory district. The committee, of which Mrs. George McLaughlin is chairman and Joseph M. Cudahy treasurer, is arranging the details. Others on the committee are Mrs. Robert H. McCormick, Mrs. John Borden, Mrs. Edward F. Swift, Mrs. Norman Williams, Mrs. J. B. Waller, Miss Clara Cudahy, Mrs. William S. Monroe, Mrs. James Bremner, Miss Caroline Kirkland, and Miss Rebecca Gallery.

The girls will be charged for board and lodging on a nonprofit basis.

WOMAN SEIZED IN VAIN TO FIND MISSING GIRL

Where is Margaret Eberth, the 15 year old girl who disappeared last Sunday from her home, 2001 South Halsted street? Assistant State's Attorney Robert Hogan and the police are asking.

Miss Nora Taylor, 28 years old, was arrested by the Oak Park police at the home of A. N. Goss, 305 North Lombard avenue, Oak Park, yesterday at the instance of Mr. Hogan, who accuses Miss Taylor of having been instrumental in luring the Eberth girl from her home.

Miss Taylor admitted writing letters to the Eberth girl before her disappearance, but denied that she had induced the girl to go away.

Woman Gets $2,000 for Abuse by Police

Nicholas Hunt, former chief of detectives, and Detective Sergeant Charles Gratton settled the suit of Mrs. Melville Reeves yesterday by paying her $2,000 in cash in open court before Judge Joseph B. David.

Last week a jury gave Mrs. Reeves $25,000 damages for assault, false arrest, and indignities she had suffered at the hands of the police.

1,200 ILLINOIS GUNNERS AT LAST SET FOOT IN U. S.

72d Coast Artillery Unit Claims Health Record of Overseas Army.

BY C. V. JULIAN.

New York, March 29.—[Special.]—The transport Santa Ana, bearing 1,200 Illinois troops out of its total passenger list of 1,446, finally docked at Hoboken today after chasing from Brooklyn to New York and then to Jersey in search of a docking place. It had anchored in the harbor at sundown yesterday, unable to make headway in the dangerous gale that swept New York.

The Illinois men are all of the Seventy-second regiment of coast artillery, back from six months in France without a chance of getting on the firing line. They claim the record of being the healthiest crowd in the American expeditionary forces, having passed through two epidemics of influenza with only six deaths.

Operation During Storm.

A remarkable operation was performed aboard the Santa Ana by Capt. James A. Valentine, a Chicago medical man, who is chief surgeon of the regiment. Dr. Valentine operated on Lieut. Clyde Benson for appendicitis when it was found that twenty-four hours' delay probably would be fatal. The operation was performed as the ship pitched heavily, so heavily that two men had to hold Lieut. Benson during the operation.

The Illinois contingent was sent to Camp Upton and will reach Camp Grant in about a week.

TO CALL PRIEST AS A WITNESS IN NUN DEATH CASE

Traverse City, Mich., March 29.—Examination of Mrs. Stanislawa Lypchinski, charged with the murder of Sister Mary John of the Polish convent at Isadora eleven years ago, was adjourned today at Leland, near here, until April 10.

Three physicians testified at today's hearing that the bones found in a cemetery after being removed from beneath the Isadore church were those of a woman. They also stated the skull had been fractured and that in their opinion a one inch crack in the skull had been made by a blow severe enough to cause death.

When the examination is resumed Father Edward Podlaszewski of Detroit will be called and questioned regarding testimony given by Jacob Flees, the church sexton, to the effect that Father Podlaszewski had ordered the removal of the remains from beneath the church.

John M. Hubbard on Way to Recovery from Accident

Hundreds of Chicago children were gladdened yesterday with the news of the almost complete recovery of their Santa Claus, John M. Hubbard, assistant postmaster, who for years has thus been known to the friendless kiddies of the city. Mr. Hubbard was injured ten days ago in an automobile accident.

CHICAGO LIQUOR IRRIGATING DRY STATES, CHARGE

Philip J. Barry, acting division superintendent of the Chicago bureau of investigation of the department of justice, said yesterday that operatives of the department are taking precautions to prevent the shipment of liquor into dry states.

Barry declared especial difficulty is being experienced in stopping the shipment of liquor from Chicago into Iowa through the towns along the Mississippi river. All sorts of subterfuges are employed by bootleggers, he said, to get liquor into the forbidden territory.

Fish and pickle barrels have been a popular method of liquor transportation, and much liquor has been seized packed in burlap packages.

Liquor valued at $15,000 was seized by federal operatives in Clinton, Ia., a few days ago.

Barry is investigating to determine if shippers in Chicago are in a conspiracy to violate the Reed amendment.

MUNSELL MADE CHIEF OF BANK OF COMMERCE

Reorganize Institution Closed Once by Thefts of W. M. Grissom.

Another slight bump in the rather rough financial road encountered by the Bank of Commerce and Savings during the last two years came Friday with a general reorganization and the election of a practically new set of officers, it became known yesterday.

The resignation of J. E. Dazey, president and also head of the First National bank of Finley, Ill., and the acceptance of another resignation from George E. Kent, cashier and vice president of the Austin Avenue Trust and Savings bank, were features of the shakeup in personnel.

Officers of the institution declared last night that the only reason for the changes was that they strengthened the position of the institution. They insisted that the reorganization was brought about in a harmonious fashion.

E. G. Munsell Made President.

E. G. Munsell, president of the Commercial State bank of Windsor, was shifted from the vice presidency to the presidency. C. L. Peck of the McNally-Peck company, who declared he was absorbing a controlling interest in the bank's stock, became vice president. C. P. Belling, an employé since the bank's organization, was made acting cashier.

Vice President Peck denied that the reorganization bore any serious import.

"The ownership of the stock has changed hands, and it was thought that a change in administration would strengthen us," he said. "Since January I have bought 160 shares of stock in the institution, and I expect to take over the 500 shares held by W. F. Van Buskirk, chairman of the board of directors and former president.

Bringing In New Capital.

"Mr. Dazey stepped aside for Mr. Munsell for the same reason. Mr. Kent's resignation was accepted because of his interest in the Austin Avenue bank, which occupies considerable of his time. I understand that he will devote his entire time to that institution after April 1.

"There has been absolutely no trouble in the conduct of the bank's affairs. We are bringing in new capital, and intend to make the Bank of Commerce and Savings one of the biggest in the city. We are making money now and are in an excellent condition."

Stockholders Made Up Shortage.

State Auditor Andrew Russell closed the bank June 21, 1917, when the Chicago Clearing House association denied it clearing privileges. At that time five directors resigned—A. D. Plamondon, W. O. Duntley, H. H. Latham, John E. Bellot, and A. B. Conover. Investigation disclosed a shortage of between $100,000 and $150,000, due to forged guarantees of commercial paper and fraudulent manipulation of securities.

The stockholders made up the shortage and the bank was reopened.

Grissom Confesses; To Prison.

William Mannon Grissom, cashier and vice president, disappeared. He was arrested Feb. 20 at Seattle, Wash. He was brought back to Chicago.

He confessed to obtaining between $100,000 and $200,000 by fraudulent means. He pleaded guilty to a charge of forgery before Judge George Kersten in the Criminal court, and on March 11 was sentenced to the penitentiary for an indeterminate term of from one to fourteen years.

SPEED BLAMED FOR 2 DEATHS IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Relatives Threaten Suits Because of Bump in Road.

Excessive speed was assigned by a coroner's jury yesterday as the cause of the early morning motor crash in which Dr. Frank T. McGuinn, 31 years old, of 4863 Kenmore avenue, and his brother, William A., 33, of Rock Island, Ill., were killed at the southeast corner of Calvary cemetery and Sheridan road.

Dr. James J. McGuinn, 5850 Kenmore avenue, the only surviving brother, testified Frank and William were returning home from Evanston. A ukulele was found near the overturned car, under which both bodies were pinned.

Spot a "Death Trap."

The place where the accident occurred, witnesses said, long had been regarded by motorists as a "death trap." Between the east line of the cemetery and the lake, the city of Evanston maintains an eighteen foot highway, which at the south extremity of the burial ground widens abruptly into a sixty foot road, maintained by Chicago. At the same point the highway turns sharply to the west.

R. C. Blick, manager of the Ted Snyder Song shop, State and Madison streets, and his wife, were returning to their home at 802 Seward street, Evanston, when, Blick said, he saw the physician's car approaching from the opposite direction at thirty-five to forty-five miles an hour.

The car had been purchased Friday afternoon and the speedometer registered less than thirty-five miles.

Struck Obstruction.

Blick declared the machine seemed to strike an obstruction in the highway, leap into the air, turn over, and crash into a lamp post. It came to rest partly against that standard and partly against a telephone pole a few feet distant.

The obstruction was the covering of an excavation for the Chicago sanitary district, made by the Nash-Dowdle company, contractors, just at the east edge of the road. No special danger signal marked the hole.

W. B. O'Brien, counsel for the relatives of the brothers, announced that suit would be commenced against the city, the sanitary district, and the contractors.

BOY OF 13 WINS $20,000 VERDICT FOR BROKEN LEGS

Fortune, which has dealt hard blows to 13 year old Edmund Brosch, 2021 Ruble street, and his family, smiled upon him yesterday when he was awarded $20,000 damages by a jury before Judge E. M. Mangan in the Circuit court. The award was the amount sought in a suit against Roderick Robertson, 3323 South State street, for injuries suffered in February, 1917, when he was struck by an automobile owned by the defendant. Both of his legs were broken.

Four years ago the boy was awarded $6,000 by a jury for the loss of an arm when he was run over by a beer wagon.

A sister, Mrs. Lucille Zabansky, lost her life in a street car accident several years ago, and his two brothers have suits pending for damages of $10,000 each for injuries sustained in an automobile collision.

Warrant for Chicagoan to Pay $76,000 Income Tax

Oklahoma City, Okla., March 29.—An alias warrant for the arrest of E. B. Shaffer of Chicago in ten days if he does not pay the state $76,000 income tax was ordered by Attorney General Freeling Saturday. A copy of the United States Supreme court decision now in the hands of State Auditor Carter shows Shaffer's appeal in the state suit to compel nonresidents to pay state income taxes was dismissed. Shaffer's time limit is ten days under the law.

WOMEN APPOINT COMMITTEES TO CONSIDER LAWS

End Jubilee Convention by Drafting Plans for Legislation.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

St. Louis, Mo., March 29.—[Special.]—The fiftieth jubilee convention of the National American Suffrage association ended at 1 o'clock today.

The next convention of the association and the newly formed league of women voters will be held in February, 1920. Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout for the Illinois delegation invited the convention to meet in Chicago.

In the meantime the council of the league will be working out definite plans for campaigns for legislation next year. The work on legislation to be indorsed by the league will be done by eight committees—industry, child welfare, citizenship, elections, social hygiene, unification of laws, food supply, and demand and research.

Women's Industrial Reforms.

The committee on industry, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Raymond Robins, already has the league's indorsement of legislation for the abolition of child labor and the compulsory education of all children to the age of 16; for an eight hour day and a weekly day of rest, for the abolition of night work for women and minors, for a minimum wage commission, for equal pay, for equal work, with a chance for women to work irrespective of sex, for the right of workers to organize and bargain collectively through their chosen representatives, for a system of public employment bureaus, for a special bureau of women in industry in each state, and for an international trade commission.

For Compulsory English.

A program of Americanization was indorsed by the league which includes the education of illiterate adults, the chance for women to be naturalized in their own right instead of being dependent upon their husbands for their citizenship, the requirement that English be the language of all schools teaching general subjects, the compulsory publication of lessons in English in all foreign language papers, the establishment of schools of citizenship in every public school both rural and city, and an education qualification for every voter in the United States after a definite date to be determined.

A suitable monument is to be erected in Cheyenne, Wyo., to mark the spot where for the first time in the history of the world women were granted the vote. A committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. Stanley McCormick will consider plans for such a memorial.

Mrs. Charles H. Brook of Wichita, Kas., accepted the chairmanship of the league, a position which will require the exercise of keen political judgment.

WIFE SAYS NEW CONSUMERS' HEAD DESERTED HER

Edward H. Troost, monument builder, with offices at 175 West Jackson boulevard, was charged with desertion in the testimony of Mrs. Caroline W. Troost of Forest Park before Judge Jacob H. Hopkins in the Superior court yesterday. "We were married Sept. 28, 1902, and my husband left me Jan. 2, 1917," Mrs. Troost told the court. "I know of no reason for his desertion." Judge Hopkins indicated he would grant her a divorce and allow her $100 a month alimony.

Troost has figured in Federal Judge Landis' inquiry into the affairs of the Consumers Packing company, which resulted in the jailing of Eli Pfaelzer, former president of the company; Edward J. Ader, its secretary-treasurer; John M. Kantor, sales manager, and several others.

Troost was elected president to succeed Pfaelzer and has been questioned closely by Judge Landis as to commissions he received on stock sales.

USE IDEAS OF ALL STATES FOR NEW BLUE SKY LAW

Experts to Draft a Bill to Safeguard Bondholders.

Blue sky laws of all other states and the advice of the most competent authorities available are to figure in the drafting of Illinois' new securities law to be offered the state legislature as an "emergency measure" for immediate passage to thwart the swindles being perpetrated on the credulous by fly by night promoters.

With the idea of getting the new legislation in effect before the Victory loan campaign is started and to throw a safeguard around the thousands of investors in the four Liberty loans, Attorney General E. J. Brundage and his assistant, Raymond S. Pruitt, who has been in charge of the clean-up of swindlers, will go to Springfield Tuesday. They will confer with Secretary of State L. L. Emmerson and plan to have the rough draft of the proposed act ready by the end of the week.

To Use Best Ideas.

"The good features of all blue sky laws in effect throughout the country will be embodied in this bill, and we plan to have additional safeguards in the shape of penalties which will make it difficult for fake promoters to operate," Mr. Pruitt said yesterday. "We plan to ask that the old act, which apparently is entirely ineffectual, be thrown into the discard and the new legislation substituted."

The secretary of state took summary action against two concerns yesterday.

Cancels Globe Permit.

A notice was sent by him to the Globe Investment Securities company, fiscal agents of the American Truck and Trailer company, ordering it to surrender its blue sky license and prohibiting it from selling securities further in the state. It was held that the securities company alone was guilty of misrepresentations in connection with the sale of the truck company stock and that the latter should continue to be entitled to sell stock.

"The further stock to be sold must be used exclusively to increase production," the secretary notified the company, whose treasurer is Robert M. Sweitzer, Democratic candidate for mayor.

The secretary stated that he had found that the company has contracts for seventy-two trucks, and that, when operating, its capacity will be two trucks a week, which may be increased.

Rubber Concern Barred.

Stock of the Johnson Tire and Rubber company can no longer be sold in the state, under another ruling made by the secretary. He issued an order instructing the company to turn in all its stock salesmen's licenses.

The First Roumanian Oil and Gas company, a Gary, Ind., concern with oil leases in Texas, Oklahoma, and Tennessee, in which a number of foreigners in this district are investors, went on the rocks yesterday. Judge Crumpacker, at Michigan City, Ind., appointed the Hammond, Ind., Trust and Savings bank receiver. The receivership was granted on the petition of stockholders, who alleged that Peter Duma, a Gary councilman and president of the company, with other officials, had confiscated $47,000 of the company funds last summer.

Film Companies Investigated.

The Lafayette Film corporation, successor to the Lincoln Pictures Classic, both "million dollar" Delaware corporations, came under investigation by the attorney general's office yesterday following disclosures that it had accepted Liberty bonds in payment for stock. The complainant was Mrs. Minnie Fifield, 2753 Fifty-eighth court, Cicero, who claims to have purchased $1,000 worth of "Lincoln Film," giving in payment $500 in cash and $500 in bonds. Since that time Lafayette Film has absorbed Lincoln Film.

Literature put out by the Lincoln Picture Classic, of which Henry Belman is president, designated as "dean of American feature picture producers," gives as a director "M. L. Carmody, corporation counsel, attorney at law, Chicago." The attorney general's office is making strenuous efforts to ascertain when a man named "Carmody" was corporation counsel of Chicago. The city archives fail to afford enlightenment.

A statement printed in yesterday's TRIBUNE that the license of the American Discount company, of which Walter L. Githens is president, had been revoked by the secretary of state, was found to be untrue. Secretary of State Emmerson wired that the license is in full force and effect.

WHAT'S A WIFE TO BOLD SEADOG WHEN WAR CALLS?

Six brave sailors at Great Lakes, willing and ready to sacrifice their wives for their country, are being held to await the displeasure of the provost marshal tomorrow morning.

And when the provost marshal gets through with them their wives may take a turn.

These six, when they went into the navy, swore they were single men with never a domestic shackle to keep them at home. And it turns out, so it is said, that every man jack of them was and is married.

The trouble started when the wives started writing. They wanted to know "how about that allotment." The navy authorities wanted to know how about it, too. The sailors were called in and questioned. They thought they couldn't get into the navy if it was known they were married, so they didn't let on, they said. But the allotments must be straightened out and there'll be bitter things said Monday morning.

Y. M. C. A. to Plow 175 Acres for Peace Gardens

In addition to thousands of home gardens which are being promoted by the Chicago Y. M. C. A. it was announced yesterday that arrangements have been made for the plowing, cultivation, and planting of 175 acres of land in large tracts in various parts of the city.

GOLDEN WEDDING

Pioneer Hotel Man and Wife Celebrate 50th Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Brown
SCOTT PHOTO

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Brown, who reside with their daughter, Mrs. Robert S. Haldeman of 6031 Kenmore avenue, will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary on Tuesday. Mr. Brown was born on the Isle of Man in 1836 and came to America at an early age. Mrs. Brown was born in Canada in 1843. Mr. and Mrs. Brown were married in Chicago and have lived here ever since. Mr. Brown was one of the pioneer hotel men of the city. They have had four children, but only one daughter is living. They have four grandchildren.

RECONCILIATION MAY END BATTLE FOR 'ANGEL CHILD'

Parents Spend Week End in Effort to 'Make Up.'

Will Cupid step in and settle the question of custody of 3 year old James Moreau Brown III., which has been worrying Judge Joseph B. David for a week? The judge hopes so—and so does everybody else.

Failing to reach a decision yesterday in court, the jurist suggested that Jimmie's father and mother, Dr. James Moreau Brown II. of Chicago and Mrs. Edna V. Brown of New York City, with Mrs. Josephine H. Lawrence, head of the Cook County Social Service bureau, who has charge of the boy pending the court's decision, spend the week-end together.

Hopes for Reconciliation.

"I think a reconciliation might be possible," said the judge.

"Why don't you try that?" asked Attorney Alexander H. Heyman, who has been trying to reach an agreement over Jimmie's custody for three days.

"Well——" said Dr. Brown, accused of kidnaping the boy from his mother.

"Well—er—all right. Let's try it," said Mrs. Brown. And Mrs. Lawrence, who has been trying to follow Jimmie around for the last three days, smiled.

Jimmie, it seems, just won't stand still. He has been racing all over the courtroom during the hearing and on Thursday routed decorum. Mrs. Lawrence has been taking care of him in the meantime.

"I love him," she said. "He has more pep than I have ever seen in a boy before, but—well, I hope they fix something up about him."

"Almost Fixed Up."

It was almost fixed yesterday. Attorney Heyman suggested the parents be allowed to keep Jimmie for six months each at a time. Then came the question of who was going to have him for the first six months.

Word from Mrs. Brown last night indicated the possibility of a reconciliation.

FRIENDS OF 50 YEARS, CHICAGO PIONEERS, DIE

Mrs. Alethea Owens and Mrs. Adele Locke Here Since the '60s.

Chicago has lost two of its oldest inhabitants, Mrs. Adele Locke, widow of the Rev. Clinton Locke, and Mrs. Alethea Owens, wife of Dr. John E. Owens.

Friends for nearly fifty years, they died within a few hours of each other. Mrs. Owens died at her residence, 2127 Prairie avenue, Friday night. Mrs. Locke died at her home, 2825 Indiana avenue, early yesterday.

Mrs. Locke's husband founded St. Luke's hospital. Its first surgeon was the husband of Mrs. Owens. That was in 1869. The hospital at that time consisted of two rooms over a shop on Wabash avenue. The first patient was an Italian laborer, and the story goes that he was so grateful for the treatment given him that he went out and carved up a friend and sent him to St. Luke's as the second patient.

First Rector of Grace Church.

The Rev. Clinton Locke was the first rector of Grace church, and he held the pastorate for forty years. He was at one time Episcopal dean of Chicago. Mrs. Locke was 80 years old and the mother of Mrs. Fanny Locke Hatton, wife and collaborator of Frederick Hatton, the playwright. Mrs. Locke lived in Chicago for sixty years and was a friend of Mrs. George M. Pullman, Mrs. W. W. Kimball, the late Mrs. Potter Palmer, and numerous others of the well known older women of Chicago. With Dr. Locke she occupied for many years a summer home at Wequetonsing, Mich. She used to be head of a club of cat fanciers in Chicago.

Mrs. Locke will be buried in Graceland cemetery on Monday. Funeral services will be held at Grace church at 2 o'clock.

Owens Funeral Today.

Dr. and Mrs. Owens would have celebrated their golden wedding anniversary next December. Both were born in Maryland. Dr. Owens was in charge of a military hospital during the civil war. Immediately after their marriage they came to Chicago. Dr. Owens was employed by a number of railroads as chief surgeon.

Mrs. Owens' funeral will be held today at the home of Mrs. John Crerar, her daughter, 1901 Prairie avenue. Burial will be in Maryland.

FULLERTON SAYS DOPING MAJORS THIS SEASON IS HARD TASK

BOWEN AND LANE DIVIDE HONORS IN TITLE GAMES

South Side "Lights" Win 10-5, but North Side Bantam Five Cops, 12-6.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Bowen High and Lane Tech split honors in the Chicago High School league minor weight basketball championship double header at Parker High gym last night. Bowen won the lightweight game, 10 to 5, and owed its title to a flourish of basket shooting in the last five minutes.

The north side techs were bantamweight victors, 12 to 6, after an aggressive game which, opposite to the 135 pound contest, was won by team coördination. It was the second year Lane won the bantamweight honor by defeating Bowen. Lane sustained no defeats in the city prep league since starting the season of 1918.

Capacity Crowd Sees Games.

The Parker High gymnasium was packed, mostly by adherents of the two schools. Bowen, being on the south side and nearer the gym, had a little larger crowd, but the cheering was even. Three thousand persons, mainly school youngsters, jammed the "bleachers." Some of them sat on the beams of the building.

The banner game was played first, and was an even fight through the first half, which seemed somewhat slow, and ended 5 to 5. Lane kept the ball in its possession and in Bowen territory for most of the second half, thus checking the south siders' chances to score, and while blanking Bowen in the third quarter ran up a lead of 9 to 5. Dombrowski gave a stylish exhibition of free throw shooting, caging eight of eleven efforts, while the Bowen boys missed eight of ten. This difference, in a tight game, was a major factor in deciding the result.

Scramble All Over Floor.

The lightweight battle was a scramble of passes, long shots, short passes, and dribbles over the floor. Capt. Vandenberg of Bowen was set to the task of guarding Graessle, Lane's fast forward, and smothered the latter's chances to score. Lane's only scorer was Bremer, captain, who played a running guard, being switched from the forward position to guard to give him leeway from Bowen's close guarding defense. Bremer made all the Tech lightweights' points.

Lane got nothing but free throws in the first half, which ended with Bowen slightly ahead, 4 to 3. The Techs made this 5 to 4 in the third quarter, the low scores indicating how closely the rival guards held to their task. Within five minutes of the close Arthur Berry, Bowen's sharp shooting forward, started a flurry of basket shooting. Gevirtz followed him and Capt. Vandenberg clinched it with a third ringer from a bad angle. Lineups:

DEERFIELD FIVE WINS HONORS OF SECOND DIVISION

Deerfield High heavies captured the consolation championship of the Suburban H. S. Basketball league, defeating Evanston, 19 to 11, at Highland Park yesterday. The game meant the title in the second division of the league and was marked by high feeling, which brought hisses for the referee. Evanston was 1918 league champion.

The lightweight game, which was in the first division, scrambled the championship situation, Evanston winning by 15 to 4. Oak Park now leads the first division lights by one game, but has to beat New Trier on Monday to clinch the title. In the meantime there is a threatened protest because Oak Park used Blackmer, a fast forward, who had played on its heavyweight team. The protest alleges Blackmer played lightweight before the stipulated time when such a change in teams is permitted. Lineups:

HANKEL SPEEDS TO EASY VICTORY IN 20 MILE RUN

Averaging six minutes for a mile, George Hankel of the Logan Square A. C. won the twenty mile modified handicap marathon of the Olympic Sports club yesterday. His time was 2:02:22, and he finished a mile and a half ahead of Henry G. Dobler, the other scratch man, whose time was 2:10:28 1-5.

Hankel had made fast time in races up to fifteen miles, and showed he could go the longer distance and finish strong, his time being remarkably fast. His victory entitled him to compete in the annual marathon of the Boston A. A. on April 19, but not caring to try the full route, he surrendered this right to Dobler.

Run on Asphalt Course.

The route was from Kosciuszko park to Humboldt park, then to Niles and return, the course being over asphalt with the exception of about one and one-half miles.

C. Lindner of the Portage A. C. held the lead for twelve miles, with Giacomo Clarizio of the Illinois A. C. close. The latter took the lead, but had to quit because of blisters. After W. Schinske had led for a short period Hankel went to the front and kept increasing his lead.

Big Crowd Along Course.

The course was lined by a crowd estimated at 20,000. Out of eleven starters nine finished. The other runner to drop out was A. L. Parker of Logan Square A. C., who had a bad knee.

The runners finished as follows:

	Hdcp.	Time.
G. Hankel, Logan Sq. A.C.	Scratch	2:02:22
H. G. Dobler, C. Ed. A. A.	Scratch	2:10:28 1-5

Joe Mendes, unattached	6 min.	2:19:10
T. Chakinis, Greek O.A.C.	12 min.	2:31:18 2-5

C. Lindner, Portage Park A. A.	18 min.	3:12:14 3-5

Six Mile Race.

The club will stage a six mile handicap today at 10:30 this morning. There are fifty entries.

In the second division Alex Weber, Toledo, O., won by default, as C. N. Gevan, Chicago, had to leave the city. In the first beaten eight R. G. Biglow, New York, defeated F. B. Jackel, Philadelphia, 6 and 4. Biglow played his best round of the tournament, having an 84. C. L. Farrell, St. Augustine, defeated C. K. Banning, Cincinnati, 5 and 4. SOX BEAT RAIN AND PANTHERS IN OPENER, 3-0

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Fort Worth, Tex., March 29.—[Special.]—In spite of a rainstorm, the White Sox opened their exhibition schedule today with a 3 to 0 victory over the Texas league Panthers. Nine rounds were finished, the last two in a steady drizzle.

Kerr, Cicotte, and Danforth collaborated in the shutout. Kerr started by request of the home management, as he began his professional career in this league. He pitched four innings and allowed three hits. Cicotte worked the next two just for practice, and Danforth finished, striking out three men in the ninth.

Gandil Joins Sox.

Gandil reported to Manager Gleason on the arrival of the Sox here and played first base. Joe Jackson and Leibold led the Sox in hitting, but the doubles of Schalk, Kerr, and Weaver in the third won the game. Score:

Slab Staff a Problem.

Shaping up his pitching staff seems to be the biggest problem that confronts Manager Gleason of the White Sox after nearly a week of spring training. Except for his substitute outfielder and infielder, the new Sox boss will have practically the same regular team which won the world's championship in 1917.

In Haas Gleason has a promising prospect to fill Eddie Murphy's shoes, and the naval aviator may win a regular berth in the garden if he can hit well enough. In McClellan he has a recruit who looks as if he could take the place of McMullin if anything happens on the left side of the diamond.

Faber an Uncertainty.

Faber's condition is giving the boss and some of the players a bit of worry. Although the former Great Lakes yeoman, hero of the 1917 world series, declares he feels well, he doesn't look it.

With Faber in shape and Cicotte repeating his 1917 feat, Shellenback could be counted on a good thirdright hander in spite of his comparative inexperience. Roberson is the best looking of the right handed rookies, and he gave a lot of promise when with the Sox last spring.

Russell's Arm Still Doubtful.

It is feared Tex Russell's arm will not permit him to do any better work the coming year than he has in the last two. The trouble in his left elbow has not disappeared, although Tex declares the arm feels better than last spring, and he can come nearer to straightening it out. If Russell cannot take his turn with Williams in doing southpaw slab duty, Gleason has two recruits of promise in Dick Kerr and Jack Sullivan.

Kerr is a pitcher of experience in the minors, where he established a record that entitles him to a thorough tryout. He is small of stature, about the size of Williams, but proved himself a horse for work in the American association. Sullivan is tall and slender, younger than Kerr, and has had less experience. He was a whale in the army, and helped make the crack Camp Grant team famous. He is a left handed spitball hurler.

MIST SHROUDED ANGELS OF COAST KNOCK OVER CUBS

Players of Ex-Big League Fame Help Beat Bruins in Foggy Opener.

CUB PITCHER BACK

New York, March 29.—[Special.] Sergt. Abraham Lincoln Bailey, Cub pitcher, was among the Chicagoans with the Seventy-second regiment that landed today on the Santa Ana. Bailey will join the team immediately after his discharge from service.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 29.—[Special.]—The California fog might have been the cause of it, but anyway Chicago's champion Cubs weren't quite in championship stride today and the Los Angeles Angels knocked them down in the first exhibition game of the season, 3 to 2. It was a good game of ball—for the Los Angeles folks.

Superb pitching by Bill Pertica, who finished the season last year with the Boston Red Sox, was the real cause of the defeat. The Cubs didn't relish this way of starting off another season against a representative of those Red Sox after what happened last fall. They hit just about as they did in that world's series, excepting in one inning, when they knocked the curves of Mr. Pertica for three triples and a single and gathered only two runs out of the mess. The Angels soon tied the score, and from then on the Cubs seemed to think Carl Mays was pitching.

Driscoll Helps Beat Bruins.

On the other hand, our Phil Douglas wasn't quite primed to engage in a pitchers' battle. A week of foggy practice can't shape a fellow up to deal out hooks and spitters, and Phil tried to depend upon fast ones, slow ones, and medium done ones, placed high, low, and intermediate. At that he might have gotten away with it if he had practiced long enough to gain control.

It was a couple of passes and one error that wrecked the game for Douglas. Young Paddy Driscoll of Great Lakes and Purple football fame was directly responsible for the defeat of the champions, too. This athletic star came up in the sixth inning with three Angels on the bases and two out. He fouled off a couple of good ones and then refused to bite on Phil's mixture of shoots just outside or just inside or just too high or just too low. The result was Paddy got a base on balls and forced over the winning run. Mr. Phil was so mad that he quit the game after that and Harry Weaver finished.

Bump Into Old A. L. Stars.

In the second inning the Cubs did all their business. Charley Pick opened up with a drive to right for three sacks and jogged in when King Lear lined one to right center for three bags. Bill Killefer poled a single, sending Lear in, after which Douglas slapped into a double play. Flack next walloped a three bagger, but the fun ended when Hollocher skied.

In the last half of the same round Jack Fournier and Sam Crawford, two ex-American leaguers, raised ned. Jack was safe when Hollocher made a bum peg to first, and Sam hit one over Paskert for three sacks, sending Jack home and jogging in himself when Driscoll grounded out.

Fluke Hits and Walks Win.

No more business was done until the last of the sixth, when two fluky infield hits and two bases on balls gave the locals the winning tally. Score:

Notes of the Cubs

Jack Fournier doesn't know yet whether he belongs to the Angeles or the White Sox, but he's stringing along as an Angel until he hears otherwise.

Wade Killefer tried to steal second on brother Bill in the third, and Bill's peg nailed him by a step.

The only movie stars seen at the game were Dustin and William Farnum.

A one ring circus, camped on the vacant lot next to the ball park, was a counter attraction. However, about 2,000 fans attended the game.

Frank Chance, peerless leader of a decade ago, watched the game from a box seat and had his picture taken with Boss Mitchell in front of the Cub bench.

The talk among the Los Angeles players is that Fred McMullin will not report to the White Sox, but will do semi-pro stuff here.

OFFICIAL recognition of athletics by the United States army and navy has been generally commented upon, but the importance attached to sports and competitive games probably is appreciated only by those who have been active in the work with the American army overseas.

In a general order by Gen. Pershing through James W. McAnires, chief of staff, issued from headquarters of the American expeditionary forces in France shortly after the signing of the armistice, these significant paragraphs occur:

"The commander-in-chief directs the attention of all concerned to the importance of encouraging the development of general and competitive athletics and all kinds of entertainment for keeping up the morale, fostering and developing organization esprit de corps, and improving the physical fitness of the army.

"All commanders will, so far as consistent with military duties, encourage in every way possible athletic sports and competitions of all kinds, especially those in which the greatest number of participants are actively engaged.

"With a view to making it possible for the men who so desire to take part in the athletic activities herein provided for, G. O. 207, C. S., these headquarters, is so modified as to authorize all commanding officers to excuse from military training, in excess of four hours per day, all the men of their command who take part actively each day in any of the athletic sports approved by the divisional or unit athletic officer. The provisions of this paragraph shall apply only to those organizations that have completed one month's complete course of training under G. O. 207."

Attention of "Specs" is called to the fact that the 10 per cent tax on sporting goods, incorporated in the revenue bill passed by congress, does not fall where it was intended.

Instead of taking toll from professional sports and wealthy sportsmen, figures are produced to show that athletic goods used by devotees of professional sports constitute only one-half of 1 per cent of the total manufacture of the country.

Another set of figures shows that the "kids"—boys under 21—buy between 60 to 70 per cent of the sporting goods production. This 10 per cent luxury tax thus becomes a hardship on the youngsters, many of whom can ill afford the tax and increased cost burden, and, in consequence, do without much of the paraphernalia from which they derive physical exercise and health.

The figures adduced seem rather high, contrasting the cost of the boys' equipment with that of golfers, hunters, trap shooters, tennis players, and other amateur sportsmen, even allowing for the fact there are a greater number of "kids."

The amount of revenue to be derived is estimated by experts as $1,200,000. This amount is picayune in these days of big figures and lavish congressional expenditures if it interferes the least bit with the healthful pastimes of our youngsters.

Why not amend the law, so that no article selling under $1 be taxed. This would include balls, bats, and gloves used by boys, tennis balls, and the less expensive makes of golf balls, while not exempting the more expensive equipment of those well able to pay the tax.

MAROON RALLIES TIE ROGERS PARK IN BATFEST, 6-6

After staking the Rogers Parks to a five run lead in the first inning the Maroon ball team came back to earth and fought the semi-pros to a 6 to 6 draw at Stagg field yesterday. Paul Hinkle attempted to pitch for Chicago, but was pounded merrily. A homer helped the semi-leaguers to their five runs. Then Terhune took up the hurling job and stopped the visitors. It was Terhune's second appearance on the slab in three days.

In the fourth the Maroons started their counter attack and pushed over three runs. Sproehnle's timely three bagger was the big blow in that drive. One of Vollmer's four singles was the deciding punch in the three run rally which tied the game in the eighth.

JUNIOR SOX WIN WITH ONE HIT, 1-0

Dallas, Texas, March 29.—[Special.]—The White Sox seconds beat the Dallas Marines today in a game that was handed to them on a platter. In the ninth inning Conroy won the game with the only Sox hit after errors had put two men on.

Conley hurled a great game for Dallas. He struck out ten. He is a former Baltimore Federal and Cincinnati Red. Charley Hollocher's big brother played second for Dallas.

UNCERTAINTY IN RETURN OF STARS MAKES PROBLEM

But Sage Will in Cold Percentages Predict Final Standing of Teams.

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON.

HUGH S. FULLERTON

Doping the major league pennant races this season is one of the hardest mathematical tasks of recent years. We are working not with unknown quantities, as we were last year, but with worse; with uncertain quantities and, still more aggravating, we must figure some quantities which never before have had a part in the dope.

The uncertainty as to the return of some thirty-two major league players, or rather uncertainty to the time when they will return, is the worst feature of the entire dope. We know now how the teams will be shaped up when all the men who are wanted get back and we are certain this spring that the great mass will remain with the teams.

System Good in Bad Season.

Last season it looked as if the dope went wrong all over. Yet the fact is that last season, more than any other, proved to me that the system of doping which I evolved a score of years ago is good. The tests came when the constant changing of players changed the dope almost every day.

During the fall, when teams were being shot to pieces, I tried the plan of doping team strengths once a week and it worked well. Of course all the dope made in the spring went by the board because, not only did the players change, but the position value changed with them. This year we will have to reverse the method. Instead of a constantly decreasing team strength we will have a constantly increasing one.

In ordinary years, as I have often shown by figures, each position on a ball club has its value regardless of the man who fills it. The pitcher, for instance, is 36 per cent of the defensive strength of his club; the catcher, 14 per cent, the other positions less, the position value depending upon the number and the kind of chances to make plays.

The defensive value of the pitcher, for instance, varies with the strength or the weakness of the opponent's attacking strength. Last year the attacking strength of the teams in both American and National leagues decreased steadily from June to the finish, and rapidly after Aug. 10. At the close of the season the pitcher was more than 50 per cent of the total defensive strength of any team.

Pitchers Count in Wartime.

In July, when the demands of the army and navy began to take the players, the dope showed plainly that whichever of the leading clubs was lucky enough to retain its pitchers would win. Chicago and the Red Sox won because their star pitchers were not called to the colors until the fight was over.

The dope in the world's series was entirely on pitchers, and it showed that whichever manager made the best or the luckiest selection of pitchers would win. The difference in team strength was not enough to give either team the advantage.

So closely together did the two teams figure that, before the series started, I stated that the dope indicated that if Barrow opened the series with Ruth against Vaughn the Red Sox ought to win, and that if he tried to start with Bush against Vaughn the Cubs would win. In other words, the entire series seemed to hinge on the result of the first game, and that game upon which pitcher Barrow selected.

Pitcher's Value Increases.

This year, as the teams now promise to open the season, the pitcher figures to be 42 per cent; the catcher, 16 per cent, and the value of the other seven players (defensively) is reduced accordingly. The individual value of a great hitter, or walter, is enhanced by the absence of several of the truly great pitchers.

The only plan upon which I can hit is to divide the season arbitrarily into two sections. I am figuring that by June 1 the teams will reach their normal strength for the season. Therefore, I am figuring with different sets of dope figures—one from April 23 to June 1, and the other from June 1 to the finish, and by adding the final figures together I reach the team strength for the entire season.

It is rather involved, but I think it will get closer to the real strength of the teams than to attempt to figure the teams at their best all the way through.

Condition of Service Players.

There is another quantity which is almost unknown. That is in what condition the returning players who have been in army and navy service will be. Those I have seen and talked with are in better physical condition than they ever have been during their baseball careers, and they will get into proper playing condition far more quickly than their fellows who were not in service will do.

The fellows who have engaged in hard work at essential jobs also are in better condition than is usual at this time of the year.

It may be that some of them have suffered physical ailments or wounds that will hamper their activities. Gowdy, for instance, was gassed. Klepfer of Cleveland was wounded; Elmer Meyers was reported once in hospital, but this was not confirmed.

From reports from the various clubs the essential players have not suffered and we must figure them on their known abilities, and take a chance that they were not disabled or slowed up in any way.

I am figuring roughly now that the major leagues will be close to 12 per cent below normal strength at the start, and within 5 per cent of the strength of three years ago by June 1. There is not a chance that the American league can be as strong at any time this season as its average of the eight years preceding the war, but the National will, by June 1, be better than its average during the same period. Neither league will develop much playing talent, as the number of new players being tried out is less than a quarter the usual number.

Small Squads; Better Baseball.

The one element which promises to make for better baseball is that the managers will have small squads to work with during the spring training season and will not waste time uselessly on experiments, so that, while individual strength of teams may be low, teamwork certainly will be better during the early season than it usually is.

The short season offers another problem. The teams must settle down to real work earlier than usual and the late start gives them a chance to do so. This, of course, is hard on the weak clubs, who in ordinary seasons have a chance to win games early in the season from the clubs that can beat them regularly later. The team which starts in best condition, or one which has luck during the early season and piles up a lead, will have a much greater advantage than usual.

Sharp Surprises in Sight.

As far as I have gone in the dope the indications are for some sharp surprises. In the American league neither the White Sox nor the Red Sox seem to outclass their league as they appeared to do a year ago.

The Washington team is slipping back slowly, Detroit is fading in strength year by year due to the wear and tear on its great players, while the Yanks show sharp gains everywhere excepting in the essential element of speed. The team will be a hard one to beat, but is too slow at present to figure in the finals.

St. Louis is spotty and uncertain, and needs bolstering, while Cleveland and the Athletics are the probable serious trouble makers. Mack has built up a speedy team, strong on defense, and he has added a lot of punch. If his pitching staff can be built up, the team again looms up as strong.

Giants and Cubs Favorites.

In the National it looks like New York and Chicago as favorites, one because of punch and the other because of pitching.

Cincinnati appears to have dropped back badly in the dope, although the final figures may show greater strength than I expect. The Cards are uncertain and not at all satisfactory. Brooklyn has a world of pitching strength if it can get it back from the army and navy, and Boston promises to revive considerably.

Pittsburgh is the dark horse. Bezdek has developed talent down there and he has the knack of keeping his men hustling. Coombs appears to have a terrible task ahead of him to make a real team out of the material now at his command.

New Managers Affect Dope.

To make the doping worse, there are new managers to consider: Gleason, with the White Sox; Coombs, with the Phils; Moran, with the Reds, are improvements. Moran was not a failure at Philadelphia. Conditions over which he had no control forced him out.

Coombs is a thoughtful, smart man who knows baseball and is past master of the art of pitching.

Gleason really is a big interrogation mark. As an assistant he was a marvel and he can control men. Besides that he is an idol with the White Sox and those who cannot see it that way will have to climb fences. But how he will handle the team and prevent the feuds which ruined it last year from breaking forth again is not certain.

Method of Making Comparisons.

This system of doping, which seems intricate, really is simple, excepting that it requires a lot of figuring. Any one can do it. This is the system: Figure that if offensive and defensive strength of teams were equal neither ever could score a run.

By figuring the number of bases advanced over the men retired, you will find, upon averaging eight teams over several seasons, that offensive work is 64 and defensive 36 of the total value of the team.

Remember we are not comparing players. The values are arbitrary and are position values, not values of individuals. Ty Cobb may be worth 900 as an outfielder and .036 as a catcher. Figure each of the nine players as one-ninth of the offensive value to start with.

Then figure this way: If the average player's offensive value is 7 (one-ninth of 64), how much is Cobb above average? Figure the number of hits, bases on balls, steals, runs, runs batted in, etc., he makes above average and add to the average.

Figures Carried Out to 700.

To get the figures finer I carry it out to 700 (it makes no difference whether it is 7, 70, or 700, so long as the ratio is maintained). In figuring defensive values figure the pitcher 36, catcher 14, first base 8½, second, 10½, short, 9½, third 5, left 5, center 6½, right 5 (I explained that I am changing those values for April and May, then going back to them later).

When you get each player figured on both offensive and defensive, collect them into teams, figure each team twenty games against each other team, allowing for pitchers who probably will work against them, and you can get pretty close to where each team ought to finish.

I'm up to my eyes in figures worse than the income tax. I'll give you mine day by day, starting with the first basemen in the next article.

Roth, Gregg, and Witt of Mackmen Hold Out

Philadelphia, Pa., March 29.—[Special.]—There will be some absentees when the Athletic infielders and outfielders join the batterymen at Shibe park Monday. Bobby Roth has been silent a week, and it is not known if he will report. Vean Gregg hasn't answered Mack's letters or telegrams, and is virtually counted out. Lawton Witt hasn't come to terms, and has been scratched off Mack's list.

METEORS FLASH TO TITLE HONORS IN BASKET MEET

Seward Park Five Beats I. A. C. Reds in Final of A. A. U. Play, 32-26.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Taking the lead one minute after the start of the game, playing aggressively, and aided by the general all around play of Earle Watson, Seward Park Meteoers defeated the I. A. C. Reds last night at Second Regiment armory, 32 to 26, and won the Central A. A. U. 135 pound basketball championship.

The plucky little Vincennes A. C. five won from the Chicago Hebrew Institute Reds, 25 to 22, and took third place. This game was close and interesting all the way, but the winning five deserved victory because of consistent play throughout.

Long Shots Feature Final.

The final game was replete with long shots, but the clever passing of the Meteors more than offset the long shooting game of the tri-color club quintet. The Meteors attempted long shots only when their men were covered, and at this style of shooting Watson and Peace were the most deadly.

Both teams were compelled to play two games Friday night and a semi-final contest yesterday afternoon. The strain told on the players in the final contest. They were dead on their feet and the struggle was slow.

Watson Cages First Basket.

Shortly after Referee Immenhausen blew his whistle the Meteors worked the ball down to the floor. It was cleverly passed by Holleran to Watson, who caged a neat basket. L. Carlson followed shortly after with a free thrown for the I. A. C., but Watson put the Meteors in the lead by four points by scoring a field basket and free throw. From this stage Seward maintained a commanding lead, and the half ended with the Meteors on the long end, 16 to 7.

The tri-color five took a brace at the start of the second half. Becker scored two clever field baskets and G. Carlson caged one from the center of the floor, placing the Reds within three points of their rivals. Peace and Watson then came to the Meteors' rescue with two field baskets and a free throw. I. A. C. substitutes were rushed into the game, but the Meteors always kept the lead by a safe margin and won a well earned victory.

Third Place Battle.

The Vincennes A. C. and Institute Reds played an interesting game. Vincennes led at the end of the first half, 11 to 6, but the institute came strong in the second period and at one time tied the score at 22 points, but when Brunner scored a field basket and Sanders shot a field basket the game was clinched.

In the semi-final games I. A. C. Reds won from the Vincennes A. C., 29 to 20, and the Seward Meteors had little trouble in winning from the Institute Reds, 37 to 13. Lineups:

Woods and Waters by LARRY ST. JOHN

SOUTH WIND AND QUICK WATER PAPERS.

DAWN on a bass stream is an event. First comes a hush that tells that something important impends—crickets, katydids, and other night singers are silent. Then comes a graying in the east; birds stir and twitter uneasily. The tip of the sun comes up over the nearby hills looking, to put it prosaically, like the yolk of an egg from which a day is being hatched. The earliest riser of them all, the friendly robin, says "cheerily," "cheerily" and a new world lies before us as bright as a coin fresh from the mint—a new world waiting to be explored by adventurous anglers.

Mighty are the preparations of anglers about to float down stream. Rods are rigged up, the duffle is stored in the boat, and one of us has run back to camp for the last time for some forgotten piece of tackle. Finally the boatman, with a sigh of relief, pushes off, we shoot around the bend at the head of the island, and at last leave civilization and sleepy townsmen behind to grub for their dollars. But not us! We are gentlemen adventurers, if you please, prospecting for lusty fishes! We make our first casts just as the rising breeze lifts the low hanging mists.

The love of rivers is bred in the blood and bone of the human race. Primitive mankind very early, if not from the first, made his home in river valleys and like Will o' the Mill he probably wondered what there was down stream that attracted the water and the traffic that way, so he set out to learn.

All the early marchings and counter marchings of the man tribe were down stream and that is why most of the big cities of today are on or near rivers, and many of them at the mouths of rivers. Men floated down stream—"going down to the sea in ships," the old records put it—long before they ever set sail on the oceans. So when we anglers go floating down a river we are following an urge the first men found irresistible—every angler is at heart an explorer, an adventurer, even though he confines his operations to the creek that flows through his father's lower forty.

The life of the individual reflects the life of the race, which accounts for the fact that normal boys are savages and have little respect for property rights and truth. By the same token, boys "come honestly by" their love for water (except on necks and ears), especially rivers, that has always been the despair of fond parents. Many a mother has gone to her deserved rest hugging the delusion that she "broke" her youngster of going "down to the river"—it simply cannot be done. As long as there are rivers there will be boys who will assume ownership over them. Thrash a boy for going swimming or fishing and what happens? Why, he goes swimming or fishing again for consolation.

Be patient with the boys. And wives of anglers, be patient with your older "boy"—for he IS a boy, grown tall, and perhaps slightly bald, who will never outlive the love of waters that sing as they run their ways to the sea. Don't be jealous; he doesn't love you less; he is merely answering the ages old call of the river.

Ecclesiastes surely must have had anglers in mind when he said, "Time and chance happeneth to them all," for no one gambles so much on circumstances as those who go a-fishing. Wind and sun and cloud and the mood of the fishes must all be reckoned with and some old fishermen say that even the phases of the moon influence "fishermen's luck"—many are the days we go forth in the morning with our hearts full of expectation and come back at night with our creels empty of fish—days to be dedicated to nature and the time charged to experience and fresh air.

Often when we go a-fishing in July the guide tells us we should have come in June—"everybody was getting 'em then," he says. Or if we come in June he tells us what to expect in October. To listen to the tales of grizzled anglers and guides one is made to feel that he was born just a generation too late—twenty years previous "you could dip four pounders out with a dip net," but if you will refer to the angling books and outdoor publications of that day you will hear the same story with the time set back another twenty years.

As far back as records go, old men have cackled against the evils of the present generation and the fact that fishing, among other things, was much better "in the good old days." Old Leonard Mascall, in his "Boke of Fishing with Hooke and Line," way back in 1590, condemned the practices of his day and predicted an early demise of fishing in Great Britain, but British anglers still catch fish—when time and chance are with them.

After making due allowance for ignorant slaughter in these same "good old days," the destruction of our wooded lands, the increase in anglers, and the fact that reminiscent old fishers always remember their killing and forget their blank days, we are almost ready to believe this: Fishing is not what it used to be and it never was.

WHITING OWLS TRIM DETROIT AND TIE SERIES

With Old Championship Five Intact, Hoosiers Cop Easily, 34-12.

Whiting, Ind., March 29.—[Special.]—With exactly the combination that won the National Amateur Athletic union basketball championship by beating the University of Utah by one point in 1916, the Whiting Owls ran over the Detroit Rayls, 34 to 12, in their second game for intercity basketball supremacy in the new local gymnasium tonight. In 1916 the present Owl combination represented the Illinois A. C. The Rayls beat Whiting at Detroit a week ago, and the deciding game will be played at another city, probably Chicago.

Rayls Off in Lead.

The Owls paid the expenses of Gus Frieling clear from New York to add the punch and smoothness of the old I. A. C. attack. The Rayls got off to a flying start, leading, 3 to 0, before the first point made by the locals, and having a margin of 5 to 1 before Whiting really began. Then the Detroiters were stopped dead. Whiting led at the half, 19 to 7, and showed a brilliant passing game.

Game Draws Overflow Crowd.

The gym was packed to the window ledges, and 200 rooters had to be turned away. Twenty-five hundred saw the game. Lineup:

Mermaid 100 Yards Title to Miss Boyle of New York

Philadelphia, Pa., March 29.—[Special.]—Charlotte Boyle of New York tonight captured the 100 yard national swimming championship in the Philadelphia turngemeinde pool. In a remarkable exhibition she came within 2 seconds of the world's record for the distance. Her time was 1:08 3-5. Miss Boyle represents the Women's Swimming association of New York.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST by A. R. METCALFE

THE problem which confronts the third bidder when the first two players have passed is exceedingly difficult. Very good or very bad hands are easily disposed of, but in most cases the third player finds himself with a mediocre hand containing no definite bid. Still, it is important in this position to give some information to your partner, particularly if a no-trump bid by fourth hand appears inevitable.

This does not mean that the third player should bid on a worthless suit, but that he should sometimes make a bid which no other position would warrant. A favorite ruse under these circumstances is to bid no trump in the hope of deflecting the fourth player into a suit declaration.

The most bizarre bid of this sort the writer has ever known was the following. It was the beginning of the rubber game and the first two players passed, third player holding the following cards:

S—Q, J, 8, 4.
H—J, 10, 7, 3.
C—J, 7, 5.
D—4, 3.

He bid one no trump for the following reason: If the next player, north, bid either major suit, west might be able to save the game, and it would probably be difficult for north to make game in a minor suit.

North bid two diamonds, but east, having four diamonds, including king, queen, and ten, doubled. North then switched to two no trump and made four odd.

Players should learn not to spoil a good thing.

The deal which follows occurred at the Chicago Whist club during the last week:

West secured 9 tricks.

West did not expect the no trump bid to hold. That it did was due to the fact that east had a comparatively strong hand.

The feature of the play was the manner in which west handled the club suit. It was necessary to unblock with the ten in dummy. North could have only two clubs, one of which might be the knave, and the declarer could not afford to finesse until the third round.

BRICKIES BEATEN IN TITLE ROUND OF SOCCER PLAY

Put Out of National Cup Fight by Champion Bethlehems, 5-0.

Bethlehem, Pa., March 29.—[Special.]—Bethlehem Steels, holders of the national challenge cup soccer championship and three times winner of that classic, today eliminated the Chicago Bricklayers in the semi-final game, 5 goals to 0.

The contest was played in Taylor stadium at Lehigh university. A forty mile an hour gale tore across the field most of the time and made play inaccurate, but notwithstanding this Bethlehem showed to good advantage at all times and won easily. The visitors had only two real tries at goal.

Bob Miller Makes Three Goals.

Bob Miller was easily the star, his three goals being of the sensational order. Whitey Fleming was not far behind with two goals, but was at a disadvantage because Chicago had two men on him most of the time. The same was true of Ratican, who was completely covered.

Two of the goals were made in first half, the first by Fleming on a corner kick after three minutes of play. This quick work took the starch out of the visitors, but they played desperately.

Short Passes Puzzle Losers.

Most of the playing took place in Chicago territory. Because of the high winds play was almost entirely confined to short, choppy ground passes, and in this Bethlehem completely mystified Chicago with clever footwork. Lineup:

FIGHTERS WRITE OWN RING 'OBITS' BY 'CONFESSIONS'

Jack Johnson and Fulton Pass On to Oblivion as Pair of "Trimmers."

BY RAY PEARSON.

When a boxer hollers "fake" after he has finished on the losing end of a scrap he writes finis to his boxing career. Since pugilism became a popular institution many years ago this has proved the rule, because the fans will not countenance such a man in the game.

There have been two examples of this that will go down in the history of the game for the year 1919. Fred Fulton, the Rochester (Minn.) heavyweight, provided one, while Jack Johnson, former heavyweight champion of the world, provided the other. Now Fulton is through and so is Johnson, but in the case of the Negro he was through anyway.

Wait Long Before Squawking.

In the two cases this year in which a scrapper let out the squeal one waited for something like six months to pass before he "cleared his conscience." In the other a matter of four years elapsed before Jack Johnson "bared his soul" and told of how he had laid down to Jess Willard at Havana, Cuba.

Followers of pugilism in the main never will believe a loser who claims that he was a party to a fake bout. Take Fred Fulton's case. Six months after he was knocked out in the first round by Jack Dempsey in a ring at Harrison, N. J., he came across with a story that he had framed that contest. He said it was set for the bout to go the limit of eight rounds, and that according to the arrangements there was to be nothing that resembled a knockout. Then he added that the terrible thing happened. Dempsey had deliberately double crossed him and knocked him out before he even had started fighting.

What happened to Fulton after he exposed the so-called fake? He found that promoters didn't want him; that they wouldn't give him a chance to make a living in the boxing game. Fulton was forced to come out with another statement of a far different sort. This statement was to the effect that Fred Fulton had retired from the boxing game, that he never would enter the ring to box again. So closes the career of the Rochester giant in pugilism.

Jack Johnson's Case.

Now take Jack Johnson's case. When he landed in Havana recently the first thing he did was to burn up the cables with a statement that his bout with Jess Willard in Havana four years ago, in which he lost his title to the Kansan, was another one of "those things." He said that Willard did not beat him on the square; that he (Jack Johnson) laid down in the twenty-sixth round and wasn't knocked out. But there was a weakness to this statement by the Negro. He didn't say he was handed extra coin for doing the "high dive."

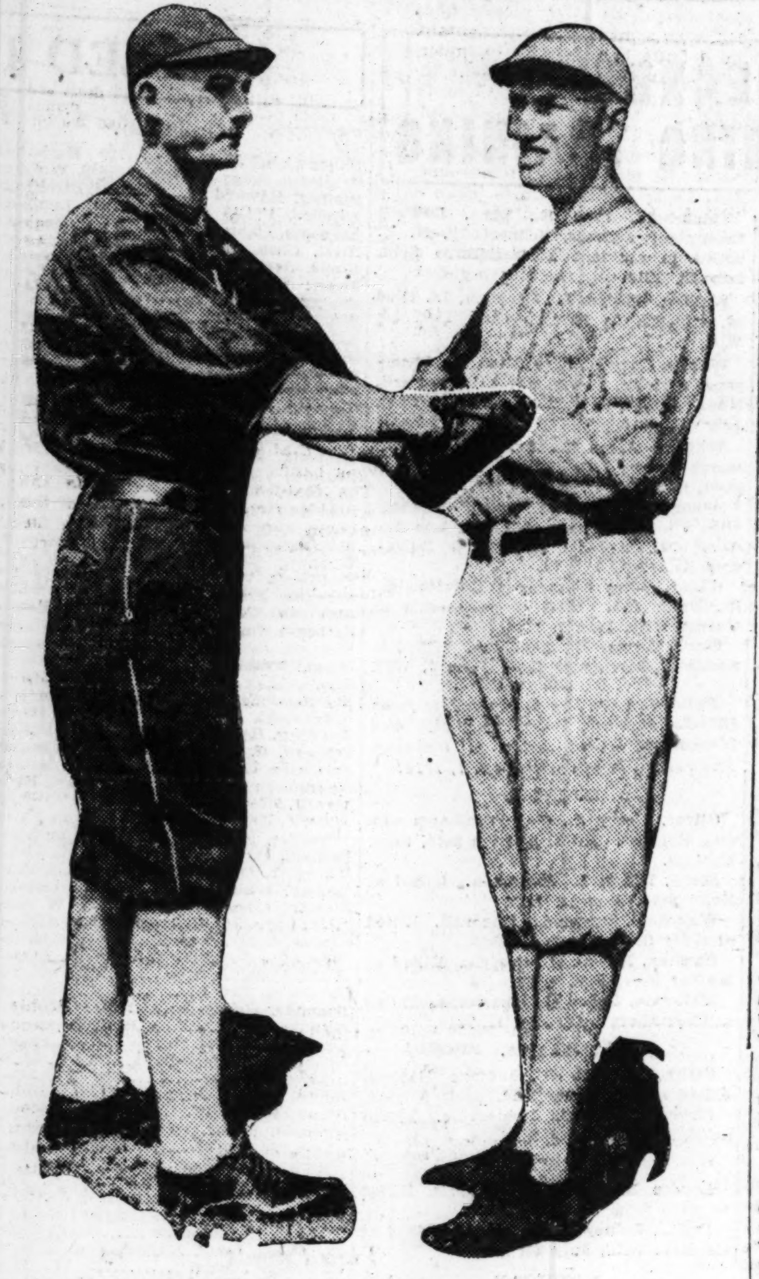
Now, the followers of boxing have long had a suspicion that there might have been something that wasn't on the "up and up" in that battle, but as a result of this "confession" the fans are more willing to believe now that the Negro was beaten on the level than before he "squealed."

Johnson May Have Quit.

Talking with a few of the fellows who are boxers and others who are fans gives us the impression that Johnson didn't do himself any good when he hollered. It is the general belief that the Negro may have "taken it" at Havana, which, in other words, means that he took the easiest way out of that scrap, in order to escape being knocked out. He probably was not knocked out, but he was so exhausted from the beating that Willard had handed him that he went down to escape a trip to dreamland.

WHITE SOX PROSPECTS

Here Are the Most Promising Recruits to Date with Kid Gleason's Squad at the Mineral Wells Training Camp.



HENRY, 1B; HARGROVE, INFIELD.

Fred Henry and "Pat" Hargrove are two of the most promising White Sox rookies. Both are confident they will eat at big league tables this summer. Both were with the Sox on the training trip a year ago. Henry adorned the bench a while later on, but both were sent back for more seasoning.

Henry is a rangy, left-handed person. First-basing is his long suit. Since Gandil came to the Sox there always has been a substitute first sacker hanging around to provide against emergencies. Gandil is supposed to have weak props, you know. All Henry has to do to land the job as understudy to Gandil is beat out Runge, a Chicago semi-pro who is pastiming with the Sox now. Henry came from Newport News, Va.

Hargrove is a shortstopper whom Manager Rowland dug up from Charles City, of the Central association, back in the fall of 1917. His showing on the 1918 training trip warranted another trial with the Sox. This spring he looks much better, the experts report.

MINORS SELECT MEN TO FIX AGREEMENT WITH BIG LEAGUES

BY JOHN ALCOCK.

Arrangements to conduct the minor leagues independently of the majors were advanced a step at a meeting here yesterday. The National Association of Minor Leagues appointed a committee to meet with the national commission, if necessary, to decide just what relations shall be maintained between the majors and the little fellows.

Secretary John H. Farrell of the national association, President Thomas J. Hickey of the American association, and A. R. Tearney, president of the Western and Three Eyes leagues, were named as the committee. Tearney was made chairman. He explained the business of the committee as follows:

"When the break with the majors was effected at the joint meeting in New York, we merely entered into a verbal agreement to respect contracts and territorial rights. If the national commission desires to have the agreement reduced to writing we shall be glad to arrange a meeting."

Any agreement covering both contract rights and territorial claims would preclude the possibility of a baseball war between majors and minors. The actual business of such a conference would be to agree upon some method by which a minor league player could be taken over for trial in the big circuits without causing trouble between the clubs involved.

Tearney is likely to retain the presidency of the Western league. William Rourke of Omaha and Edward J. Hanlon of St. Joseph, two Western club presidents, said the league magnates had had no assurance that former President Dickerson would be back from France in time to take the post this season.

NORTH AND SOUTH OPEN GOLF TITLE GOES TO BARNES

St. Louis Pro Scores 298 for 72 Holes Play at Pinehurst.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 29.—[Special.]—James M. Barnes of the Sunset Hills club of St. Louis won the North and South open championship title at Pinehurst today, leading the field by a margin of two strokes and finishing with a total of 298 for the seventy-two holes. Michael J. Brady of the Oakley Country club, Boston, took second money with a total of 300 and was followed by Patrick J. Doyle of Deal, 301, and Robert G. MacDonald of the New Evanston club, 302.

In the first round Brady had a 75 and Barnes 72, both passing Doyle in the race and tying for the lead at 223 for fifty-four holes, with Doyle following at 226 and MacDonald at 228.

Hagen Finishes Eighth.

Barnes did not do as well in the final round as in the morning, but his 38—37—75 proved an easy winner, as Brady took a 77 and the best that Doyle could do was to equal Barnes' 75. MacDonald had a 74, but it did not improve his position. Walter Hagen, whose title passes to Barnes, finished eighth at 310.

Charles H. Hoffner of the Philmont club of Philadelphia played the best golf of the day, leading the field in the morning with 32—39—71, and tying with MacDonald and Tom McNamara at 74 for the leadership of the second round. Hoffner beat Barnes by two strokes on the two rounds and pulled himself from fifteenth to sixth position.

Stiles Leads Amateurs.

Hoffner, with 71—74—145, and Barnes, with 72—75—147, were the only players to break 150 for the final thirty-six holes. Edward Stiles of the Washington Golf and North Hills club led the amateur fields with a total of 319.

Jock Hutchinson has resumed his duties at the Glen View club. He found the strain of four southern tournaments, one of which he won and in one of which he was second, too much for him, and so decided not to play in the United North and South open tournament at Pinehurst. His assistant this year at Glen View is Ramsey Hunter, recently of the aviation corps.

Robert A. Kasper has been awarded the progress cup at Ridgemoor, his nearest competitor being G. A. H. Scott. The cup, donated by K. I. Sherman, goes to the player showing the most progress during the year. Under the tutelage of McElhatton and despite his Red Cross activities, Kasper succeeded in cutting 17 strokes off his score.

For the first time in its history the Belmont Golf club is planning a weekly schedule. Heretofore its events have been confined largely to holidays, but this season there will be something doing each week. At the end of each month there will be an event for women players, followed by a dance. Mere man will no longer be monarch of all he surveys. The officials are: President, Carl Heinzen; vice president, Ross F. Bergh; secretary, W. J. Doherty.

RIDGE GOLF CLUB READY TO START IMPROVEMENTS

Taking advantage of favorable weather conditions, the Ridge Country club, located at One Hundred and Seventh street and California avenue, will start work on improving holes 4, 5, 6, 7, 12, and 13. These are located on the low portion of the property.

The improvements consist of adding traps and bunkers designed by W. B. Langford, which will add considerably to the sporty character of the course. Under favorable conditions the work will be finished by May 1, giving the members eighteen modern holes which call for good play.

The four holes to be altered on the out round measure 435, 390, 335, and 425 yards, while the twelfth and thirteenth measure 330 and 355 yards.

These were comparatively plain holes last season, but the changes planned stiffen the drives considerably, while the defenses around the greens call for accurate pitches.

The course has a yardage of 6,105, with a par of 73. The eleventh hole calls for the heaviest artillery, being 620 yards in length.

Final League Games for Indoor Ball Teams Today

Final games on the regular schedule of the City Indoor Baseball league will be staged this afternoon, two of the battles having an active bearing on the post-season race for the Tearney medals, which go to the champions. The games are at Hebrew institute between the home team and the Dodger Trainings, and at Hamlin park between Crescents and Holstein Reserves.

KEMPAS IN FIRST GAME TODAY.

The Kempa A. C. has reorganized for this season with Frank J. Kempa, who has recently returned from oversea duty, as manager. Manager Kempa has booked the American boys for a practice game this afternoon at Iowa street and Western avenue.

CUEISTS' LEAGUE TO HAVE BRANCH IN EVERY STATE

National Body Will Have 2,000,000 Members; Tourney This Week.

Under the direction of the national billiard advisory board, a state association is being organized in each of the forty-nine states. Organizations already have been completed in Missouri, Arkansas, and Tennessee, while Michigan formed a temporary organization last week. Missouri already has a membership of 100,000. Indiana will be next in line.

When all the state organizations are formed the national association will have a membership of over 2,000,000. Delegates from each state association will attend the annual meeting. One of the main objects will be to rid billiards of objectional features, which in some states have brought adverse legislation.

National Tourney This Week.

The first national amateur three cushion championship staged by the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players will be held this week at the Amateur Billiard club in New York. Patterson of the Chicago Athletic association will compete.

The annual meeting of the N. A. A. B. P., of which George B. Dryden of Chicago is president, will be held tomorrow night at the Liederkranz club.

Lundgren Leads League.

With eight games to play, Ernie Lundgren of Menk & Reading's is leading the Chicago league race, one game ahead of Charley Le Gros of the Casino room. Le Gros has won his last eight games and looks like a strong championship possibility. Maupome, who is a close third, has six games to play, five of them on his own table, so he is apparently as well off as the two Chicago leaders. His defeat of Morin, 60 to 50, in fifty innings was a feature of the week.

Thirteen Teams Enter A. A. F. Basket Tourney

Thirteen teams are entered for the 125 pound basketball championship tournament of the Amateur Athletic federation, which will be held April 2, 5, 7, 9, and 12 at Sinai Social center. Drawings will be made Monday at Sinai. The field: Association House No. 1, Association House No. 2, Sheridan Park, Sinai, West Side Seminoles of Park Center church, Fuller Park Reds, Cornell Llenrocs, Olympics A. C., West Side Y. M. C. A., St. Andrews Church Clovers, Mason Park Crescents of Evanston, Independent Alphas, Bessemer park.

The Centennials passed the old mark by one point, with 969, and bested the Chicago Rifle club squad, which tied the 968 record.

In the third contest of the round the Chicago Engineers and the Hawthorne Rifle and Gun club tied with 949.

DE ORO RETAINS BILLIARD CROWN BY 150-94 SCORE

Cushion Champion Beats Copulos in Final Block of Match, 50-38.

Detroit, Mich., March 29.—[Special.] Alfredo De Oro, going under easy sail, outplayed Gus Copulos, the Detroit champion, 50 to 38, in the final block of their world's championship three cushion match tonight and retained the title, 150 to 94.

Like many others who have faced the veteran Cuban, Copulos found the strategy of the champion too much for him, and played much below his usual form. The young player, who is a former Chicagoan, incurred one of the worst defeats in the history of the championship.

Starting the block with a lead of 44 points, De Oro counted twelve points in his first twelve innings, Copulos gathering four. This placed the New Yorker beyond reach of defeat, and he took matters easily the rest of the route, counting thirty-eight points, while the Greek challenger was making thirty-four.

The block went sixty-eight innings, being the longest of the three. De Oro next will meet Bob Cannefax of Chicago, the prospect being that the match will be staged at New York. Scores:

A Man's Judgment is only as Good as his Information

If you knew the Cadillac as Cadillac owners know it, you would recognize their excellent judgment.

Most of them have owned other cars. Yes, including the very kind of car you are driving. So they have that information on which to base their judgment.

And then they have months or years of Cadillac experience—information which has matured their judgment of motor cars.

One man may not arrive at this quality of judgment without living the experience himself.

While another man—you, perhaps—may acquire the judgment speedily and less expensively by seeking information.

It is undoubtedly true that a man's judgment is only as good as his information.

We are headquarters for information about the Cadillac. And every Cadillac owner is a branch office.

Chicago's Roll of Honor

THE war department having announced the practical completion of the casualty lists of United States soldiers and marines during the period of America's participation in the great war, The Tribune" this morning presents a tabulation of the names of Chicago boys who died in battle, who died of wounds sustained in battle, and who died of other causes in our fighting service abroad.

The list is compiled from Gen. Pershing's official reports as published from day to day, beginning with Nov. 4, 1917, and continuing to date. Through a mistaken policy of the authorities at Washington, the addresses of the men in the casualty list were withheld for a short time at the outset. This error made it impossible to make the list full, but it is believed to be approximately complete.

The total casualties reported covering Chicago and immediate vicinity (of date March 29) are approximately:

Killed in battle	860
Died of wounds	457
Died of other causes	511
Lost on transport	3
Wounded	5,243
Missing	416

The total of those who at this time comprise the city's honor roll of known dead is 1,831.

When Chicago builds its Hero Memorial, in whatever form it takes, it is expected that the conspicuous feature—the roll of dead, of those who gave their lives to make our nation and the world safe from tyranny—will be essentially the list which is printed herewith.

In the following lists all names, except where otherwise designated, are of private soldiers. Marines are marked by a star (*) before each name.

RICKENBACKER, ACE OF ACES, FIRED LAST SHOT OF WAR

CAPT. EDDIE RICKENBACKER of Columbus, O., dean of American aces, is believed to have fired the last shot of the war. He was given the honor of making the last flight over the German lines before the armistice became effective.

Rickenbacker left his hangar at 10:45 a. m. on Monday, Nov. 11, for his last flight. At exactly 10:59 he passed over a German transport column and held the trigger of his machine gun down for a minute.

In that time he poured several hundred rounds of bullets into the boches, who scattered before him.

Gen. Liggett on Nov. 17 decorated Rickenbacker, Lieut. Louis Simon, also of Columbus, and five other aviators with the American Distinguished Service cross.

Both Rickenbacker and Simon were granted medals by the French government the week before the armistice.

BIG JOBS STILL DONE IN FRANCE BY BLACKHAWKS

Member Writes That the Idea All Returned Is an Error.

BY LIEUT. PAUL WILLIAMS.

[Special Correspondent of The Tribune.]

LE MANS, March 4.—Pinned on the wall of the orderly room is a streamer from a metropolitan daily in type as big has a rifle cartridge. It reads:

CHICAGO WELCOMES 86TH.

Up at headquarters is another:

LOOP ROARS TO BLACKHAWKS.

There have been many similar headlines. The faithful reader easily could have gained the impression that just about all of the men who left Camp Grant with the Eighty-sixth were home again. Especially, in the face of interviews from some careless minded artillerymen, that all we left over there were A. W. O. L.'s or venereals.

Plenty Are Left There.

But within pistol shot are enough Blackhawks to roar back at the good old loop so lustily that it ought to feel like about 3:30 o'clock on a June morning.

Some seventy-seven officers and 2,300 men, dyed in the mud Blackhawks, are still banded together in two well organized outfits which would make whoever it was repeat it: "Men of Illinois, I envy you." They are located at Le Mans, capital of the American embarkation center. It might be said, almost, that they are the American embarkation center.

They operate the forwarding camp with a capacity of 28,000 and the classification camp, which can shelter 12,000. They take care of the neck of the bottle through which all homeward bound troops must pass. They are not all A. W. O. L.'s because their work is being done efficiently.

Used Up in Replacements.

Way back in the first week in October some fighting replacements were needed in that most stubbornly fought over sector of the terrible front—the Argonne—and G. H. Q. took the best men of the Blackhawk infantry organizations. When requisitions for riflemen had been filled there had "parteed" some fifty officers and more than 8,000 men. Some of them were nursing wounds in the base hospital at Bordeaux five days later. A few thousand are in the army of occupation. The rest are just here.

What G. H. Q. left of the infantry arrived in Le Mans on Nov. 10 and 11. They were to stop over for a couple of days for assignment for the front. On Nov. 11 something happened. Two days later the officers of the One Hundred and Seventy-first brigade met at headquarters. They were told the remnant was to be consolidated into the Third provisional training regiment, Lieut. Col. W. P. Coleman, Three Hundred and Forty-first infantry, with three officers and eighty men to a company. The same thing happened to the One Hundred and Seventy-second brigade. It became the Fourth provisional training regiment, Col. H. A. Hanigan, Three Hundred and Forty-fourth infantry.

Two Regiments Organized.

The Third and Fourth provisional training regiments were organized on orders written before the Germans quit. They were to have trained replacements. The Third provisional did not do much for a long time but keep fit and clean up—phew, it was some job—a Belgian camp.

Col. Hanigan's outfit moved to Montfort, not far from Le Mans. The colonel took with him his old adjutant, Capt. J. M. Bowlby and Capt. Gordon K. Gould, supply officer. Maj. W. H. King Jr., and Maj. John H. Smale, battalion commanders in the Three Hundred and Forty-fourth, were assigned to like capacity in the new regiment. The First and Second battalions were composed of men and officers of the Three Hundred and Forty-fourth, the Third battalion was made up from the Three Hundred and Forty-third.

The order authorizing these regiments stated they were "to be selected with a view of securing the best training personnel available." After six days at Montfort the regiment moved to a Belgian camp about twelve kilometers from Le Mans. The barracks were so filthy the men lived in pup tents. Three days later it marched to the forwarding camp. It was a few scattered buildings in a sea of mud. Conditions were bad. The regiment was sent there to improve them. The word "training" was dropped from its name. Everybody pitched in with no regard for time. When Le Mans was made the embarkation center, construction work was begun in the camp on a large scale.

The proposition became too large for the number of officers and men in the regiment, and others were sent to aid them. Today the camp has barrack accommodations for 21,000 and a tent area for 7,000 more.

What Third Regiment Did.

Now for the Third provisional regiment. On Nov. 14 it entrained for Montfort, where the Fourth provisional was encamped. It marched eight kilometers and was billetted in three villages. Headquarters were established at Le Breil. A couple of Sundays later the regiment marched to Perigne l'Eveque. That's where that Belgian camp was. It was in the same condition as the one the Fourth provisional wouldn't live in. Men of the old Three Hundred and Forty-first and Three Hundred and Forty-second chased cooties and other things for four days, living in their pup tents in the meantime, and made the barracks habitable for humans.

About the first of the year the regiment moved to La Suze, which had been headquarters for the Three Hundred and Thirty-first infantry. The companies were distributed over a large area in such a manner as to billet, clothe, and feed a maximum of 16,000 casuals and hospital evacuates until they could be assigned.

LABEL 'MADE IN GERMANY' TO HAUNT GERMAN

Allies to Make Teutons Put Mark on All Exported Products.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, March 29.—Great Britain and France are bringing strong pressure to bear to include a provision in the economic section of the peace treaty requiring that every article exported from Germany must be stamped with the name of the country of its origin.

In other words the old Teuton slogan "Made in Germany" will be perpetuated by compulsion so every purchaser in the outside world will know where the goods offered for sale came from.

It is understood the Americans, in order to get away from any appearance of boycott, favor a rule by the league of nations that every country shall mark every manufactured article for export with the name of the country making the article.

Circumvents the Germans.

Economic investigators returning from Germany report that the German manufacturers unanimously are agreed that their only chance of competing in the foreign market lay in camouflaging their products as far as possible. The first step in that direction was a unanimous agreement to stop marking goods with the old familiar label "Made in Germany."

During the war England, France, Canada, and Australia popularly agreed to boycott German goods after the signing of peace. It is realized, however, that if such actions are carried out, it will militate against Germany doing enough business to pay the reparations bill and also will endanger and perpetuate hatred against the Teutons and keep the fires smoldering, as was done between France and Germany since 1871.

Boycott May Die.

Because of the decision of the allied and associated governments practically to maintain a blockade prohibiting Germany from exporting goods similar to those normally emanating from Belgian and French industries until such time as those industries are rehabilitated and able to compete fairly with similar German industries, it is hoped that the French and British public will not insist on maintaining the popular boycott against all enemy products.

German products must be so labeled out of deference to the popular demand of those French and British people, who are bitterest against the foe. This decision is expected to elicit a strong protest from the German manufacturers, but the French and British are determined that it shall be carried out.

THE CHICAGO DAILY JOURNAL says:

For Mayor:

Robert M. Sweitzer

A mayoralty campaign of unusual interest is closing.

It is unfortunate that not one of three leading candidates measures up to the high standard that a majority of the voters would require for chief magistrate of this city if their choice were not restricted.

Mayor Thompson does not deserve a second term. His war record brought shame to every loyal citizen of Chicago. He cannot escape it; nor can he explain it. In the days of the nation's greatest crisis, when the fate of the world's civilization hung in the balance, he brought reproach upon every citizen of this patriotic city.

When the most important of all national issues—those nearest every fireside, those for which Americans have fought and died since Plymouth Rock—were at stake, he took an easy bypath. He separated himself from the mass of his fellow citizens, on the pretext that as a city official he had nothing to do with the affairs of the nation.

After such a spectacle, his misguided advisers have prevailed upon him to make the national question of tariff his chief issue of the present campaign. This reveals the humbuggery of the city hall crowd.

The chief thing that the voters will ask about the other candidates is: Which has the best chance to defeat Mayor Thompson?

In The Journal's judgment, the answer is Robert M. Sweitzer.

Like thousands of voters, The Journal has watched the battle from afar, to determine which candidate seemed to merit victory. The public has turned toward Sweitzer.

Mr. Sweitzer is very popular, personally. He has the advantage of the only support sufficient to combat the political machine back of Mayor Thompson. The Journal believes he can be elected if he is supported by those voters who have reserved judgment until this time. The Journal does not pretend that he is the ideal candidate, but he is the strongest man in the field.

He has a fine record as county clerk, the only public office he has ever held. That office has been free from scandal since Mr. Sweitzer took charge of it, and its affairs have been conducted in a businesslike manner.

During the stress of America's participation in the war he evaded none of his obligations as a patriotic citizen.

He is indorsed by so tried and trusted a champion of public right as former Governor Dunne.

He has the approval of such a national representative of his party as Senator Lewis.

He has given pledges of a square deal between the people and utility corporations, and those pledges have been made publicly and with every evidence of sincerity.

Civic and business leaders, without regard to party affiliations in previous mayoralty campaigns, have declared for Sweitzer, and base their support of him on their belief that he will protect the public from greedy utility barons.

The Journal believes Mr. Sweitzer's pledges and accepts the endorsements of his backers, among the best elements of the city's citizenship. It believes he will make a good mayor.

Mr. Hoyne has an enviable, indeed a brilliant, record as state's attorney; so good, in fact, that The Journal thinks he should complete his present term. It is no disparagement of Mr. Hoyne to say that most of those independent elements necessary for his success have accepted Mr. Sweitzer.

Taking the situation as it stands, The Journal believes that all voters who want to raise the city from the present low level of municipal affairs should vote for Robert M. Sweitzer.

SNIPER CUPID GETS 2 'TRIBUNE' MEN OVERSEAS

British Maid Wins Heart of Scribe and Actress Takes "Ad" Man.

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, March 28.—First Lieutenant J. Loy Maloney, Ninety-fourth aero squardon, passing through Paris recently on his way back to Coblenz, surprised his friends with the announcement that during a few days' leave which he had spent across the channel he had captured an English bride. She was Miss Hilda Gladys Blackburn, daughter of Frederic G. Blackburn of Manchester. They were married March 17. They met at a dance given for American aviators en route to France on Nov. 27, 1917.

MEMBER OF "TRIBUNE" STAFF.

J. Loy Maloney, who was a TRIBUNE reporter before he went to war, isn't the only TRIBUNE employé to find romance in the war. There's First Lieutenant Thomas J. Cochrane Jr., for instance, who worked in the advertising department, formerly a member of the old First Illinois cavalry, now with headquarters troop of the Thirty-third division.

"I should be bothering you for a job sometime in June," he writes his old boss, W. E. Donahue, manager of local advertising, "maybe sooner."

There's Wonderful Girl.

"The reason is none other than that I have become engaged to a very charming and wonderful girl. Let there be no doubt on the subject she is an American—a regular one. She is attached to the division from the 'Y.' She is the leading lady in the Thirty-third division theatrical troupe which just now is touring France."

Yes, that's all he says about her. He doesn't even mention her name. But she is Paula Temple.

Illinois Opens Campaign on 1919 Auto Licenses

Springfield, Ill., March 29.—Secretary of State Emmerson today sent notice to chiefs of police in Illinois towns of over 500 inhabitants asking them to arrest immediately all owners of automobiles who have not taken out 1919 licenses for their machines or made application for license.

Despite an exceptionally heavy early rush for licenses, the secretary estimates that there are over 125,000 delinquents in the state. Licenses taken out now total 281,733.

SEEK MEXICAN TRADE.

Washington, D. C., March 29.—Passports have been issued to over fifty members of the San Antonio, Tex., Chamber of Commerce to go into Mexico, it was learned at the state department today. These business men are entering Mexico for the purpose of establishing trade relations.

WOMAN'S DRESS AND AUTO FIGURE IN IOWA MURDER

Sioux City, Ia., March 29.—A mysterious murder was committed last night near Perkins, Sioux county, Ia. This morning farmers found an abandoned automobile in the road and fifty feet away in a field was the body of a man, probably 30 years old, a stranger in the neighborhood. He had been killed by a bullet wound in the head. An empty cartridge, a partly emptied whisky bottle, and a woman's dress were found in the automobile, which bears an Iowa number. Initials on his clothing are "C. C.," and a Sioux City address was found on a piece of paper in a pocket.

Seattle Buys Traction System for $15,000,000

Seattle, Wash., March 29.—Seattle city officials will turn over $15,000,000 in utility bonds to traction heads today in exchange for the Stone-Webster street car system. Municipal operation of the entire line will begin Tuesday.

SEEK 170 MORE TONS OF CLOTHES TO FILL QUOTA

Red Cross Appeals for More Help in Drive for Sufferers.

"People in the war devastated regions of France and Belgium are literally in tatters.

"Dazed and hopeless, they wander back to the blackened piles of ruins which were once their homes. They will perish unless America comes to their rescue at once. Herbert Hoover and his helpers will feed them, but until they are able to rebuild their homes and harvest a crop, America and the Red Cross must clothe them."

Harvey Gibson, Red Cross commissioner in France, cabled the word picture which yesterday sent Chicago workers on the double quick to supply the 250 tons of clothing that must be dispatched from this district by next Sunday if the city is to meet the needs of suffering Europe. Eighty tons of clothing have already arrived in the big warehouses.

Swift School Leads.

At a north side warehouse yesterday, unloading forces were scattered by a big van, loaded with clothing and carrying "excess" in the form of proud pupils of the Swift school, who came as a guard of honor to the prize collection they had gathered. The name of Swift was at once posted at the head of the growing list in the school contest. Tilden Technical High school comes second with 600 packages. Delano school has collected 125 packages, Wicker Park, 115, and Libby, 109.

"It's like a basketball tournament," declared a youthful worker from the Swift school. "We've got the pennant now and they got to go some to beat us out."

Donations are sent to the schools by parents and later sent to the Red Cross warehouses for immediate shipment to France, Belgium, Roumania, Serbia, and other war ridden countries.

"Must Speed Up."

John W. Scott, vice chairman of the Red Cross organization, with headquarters at 902 Michigan avenue, said yesterday:

"The response to the Red Cross appeal so far has been splendid and it must be speeded up to meet the need and to put the quota over next week."

Gold star mothers joined the campaign last week, parting with the wardrobes of their boy heroes to help war sufferers. More than a dozen such donations were recorded.

A new station will be opened tomorrow in the Board of Trade building to serve office building patrons.

All automobile owners in the city are asked to volunteer tomorrow in the "gasoline drive."

BEG YOUR PARDON!

THE TRIBUNE yesterday quoted John J. Ridgeway, former Pacific coast representative of the New York Rubber company, as telephoning the Associated Press that he was locked up in room 1328 at the Morrison hotel. G. Harvey Fitch Jr., Chicago representative of the United Toy Manufacturers, said yesterday that the room number alluded to was in error. He says that he occupies 1328 at the Morrison.

THE TRIBUNE yesterday referred to W. N. Furthman in the bond sale acquittal case as secretary of the Electrical Engineering company. W. P. Stuart, president and treasurer of the company, said yesterday that Furthman had not held the office of secretary since a year ago. M. N. Sapp is the secretary, he said.

MASON TO TESTIFY IN DRAFT CASE.

United States Commissioner Lewis F. Mason and Assistant United States District Attorney John E. Madigan left for Greenville, S. C., last night, where they will be witnesses for the government against Louis A. Findiesen, 10617 Mackinac avenue. Findiesen is accused of interfering with the draft.

SIX AVIATORS ORDERED HERE FOR MAIL ROUTE

Oliver J. Sproul, who is in charge of the Chicago end of the aerial mail service soon to be established between Chicago and New York said yesterday four Curtiss planes will be in Chicago by April 10, preparatory to starting the actual service April 15.

Six pilots will be in Chicago in a few days to enter the air mail service. The Chicago office will have charge of the air mail service between Chicago and Cleveland. The stops between Chicago and New York will be at Bryan, O.; Cleveland, Clarion Pa., and Bellefonte, Pa.

Workmen are engaged now in draining Ashburn field, where the air service will have headquarters. The planes will alight in Grant park until Ashburn field is put in condition.

Auburn, Ill., March 29.—Two miners were killed in an explosion at the Panther Creek mine, four miles north of here, early today.

POLICE SPOIL BOYS' BUFFALO HUNTING TRIP

Exploits of dime novel heroes led Willie Clark, 12 years old, and his chum, Walter Jackson, 13 years old, to run away from home. The boys were on their way west to hunt buffaloes when they were arrested at the Northwestern station. Their parents told Judge Arnold in the Juvenile court yesterday that the boys were incorrigible and ran away from home on two other occasions.

"Where did you get the idea of hunting buffaloes and fighting Indians?" the judge asked.

"We read about it in books."

Judge Arnold found the boys were addicted to reading "Diamond Dick" stuff.

Many a motoring party touring through the country, is haunted by an unseen passenger—FEAR—DREAD that a tire will blow out, like the blast of a gun shot.

BUILDING MEN'S CREDIT BUREAU HERE UNDER FIRE

Legislative Price Probe Hints at a Combine to Keep Costs Up.

William E. Dee, president of the Chicago Building Material Credit bureau, 133 West Washington street, and also president of the William E. Dee company, dealers in sewer pipes and building materials, was called as a witness at the legislative investigation into the high cost of building yesterday.

He admitted that while each of the building material concerns have their own attorneys and credit men, Charles Woodward, manager of the credit bureau, was paid a salary of $15,000 a year.

The committee is seeking to establish whether this bureau has operated in any way as a price fixing organization.

Woodward testified his services were in credit work and for work as an attorney in lien matters.

The commitee has determined to get at the bottom of this situation.

Probe Plant Shut Down.

Among the questions put to Woodward, showing the trend of the committee's thought, were these:

"Did you during the spring of 1917 call at the office of Dolese & Shepard, endeavoring to get them to shut down their lime plant so that competition would be removed?

This was denied.

"Did you have an entrance from your private office into the office of the building material exchange?"

"There was an entrance there."

"Were you ever called into the private office of the exchange for consultation?"

Woodward said that he had been asked concerning exchange of Liberty bonds.

"Is it not a fact that the agreed upon prices were printed in your office on your office mimeograph?"

"No."

Former employes of the exchange will be called to testify.

Lumber Next on List.

The committee adjourned at noon to meet again at the Hotel La Salle next Friday morning.

"We hope to get through in two or three weeks," said Chairman John Dailey. "The question of resumption of building operations seems to rest on prices in four basic materials, clay products, steel, lumber, and cement.

'We consider this evidence concerning the operation of the credit bureau highly important. We will get after the lumber question soon. There is no evidence showing a cement trust, but all indications toward such combinations will be fully investigated."

GIVES W. S. STAMPS AS BONUSES.

The American Radiator company yesterday purchased $24,000 worth of war savings stamps, to be distributed to its employés, as bonuses and dividends.

CHADSEY PUTS RESPONSIBILITY ON PRINCIPALS

Superintendent of Schools Charles E. Chadsey told the principals of Chicago schools at their weekly meeting yesterday in Fullerton hall that they are the ones upon whom he depends to make Chicago the greatest school center in the country.

"As the principals, so the schools," declared Mr. Chadsey. "The principals are the centers of community interest. Everybody comes to them with the troubles of the child, which are the troubles that concern most people the most.

"Every educator regrets loss of the time when he could be in close personal touch with the children—the students. I regret that I will be unable to visit classrooms and watch what the teachers are doing and what the students are doing, and therefore I must depend upon my district superintendents, and, in the last analysis, they depend upon you principals to get them the informtion."

BOY OF SEVEN KILLED IN GAME OF TRENCH WAR

Elwood Unger, 7 years old, died yesterday, as many of his most admired heroes died, playing the game of war.

Elwood lived at 6849 St. Lawrence avenue. He and several companions were holding the American trenches in the vacant lot at 5830 Champlain avenue. The dugout collapsed. Elwood was buried.

The boys tried to uncover him and couldn't. They called for help. A number of men uncovered the little soldier and one rushed with him to a doctor's office, but it was too late.

Couldn't Agree 2 Years Ago, Try Marriage Again

Two years ago they were divorced. Yesterday Judge A. Sterling Pomeroy remarried Thomas A. Sheridan, for many years a detective sergeant at the Warren avenue station, and Miss Hazel Blakeslee of 17 North Karlov avenue. There will be a honeymoon trip to California.

"The first time we just couldn't agree," said Mrs. Sheridan yesterday. "Now we know everything will be all right, don't we, Thomas?"

"Yes, yes," smiled Thomas.

200 WARRIORS GET HELP FROM JUSTICE BUREAU

Jobs, Food, and Shelter Only Part of Work Undertaken.

More than two hundred returned fighting men tested the quality of Chicago's new "bureau of justice" at 120 West Adams street yesterday, and found it performing 100 per cent of the service functions promised by Gen. Leonard Wood.

A sergeant with a world of confidence, two wound stripes and but 50 cents in cash, led the advance. He appeared after noon to acquire the job he wanted. It was on file but its plant was closed until Monday. The sergeant faced two nights and one day with his half dollar as capital. Last week he would have been directed to some distant service station where he might or might not find shelter.

"Sittin' Pretty."

"Easy," said the soldier interviewer who had steered him to the right job. "Fall in with me buddy."

One flight up they obtained a Salvation Army order for lodging at the army hotel Saturday and Sunday. One half flight down they found a Red Cross order for meals.

"Sittin' pretty," remarked the big sergeant to the doughboys and sailors who operate the bureau machine. "This is a real city."

Naval Officer Assigned.

Capt. Frederick B. Bassett Jr., commandant of the Ninth, Tenth, and Eleventh naval districts, visited headquarters and made arrangements to assign an officer for duty in the bureau each afternoon. He will be ready to adjust any complaint brought to him by discharged sailors. Communications received yesterday from a number of cities promised coöperation with the bureau.

Among other job opportunities received at headquarters was one calling for 200 men to help lay out a government proving ground at Savannah. Applicants will receive 43 cents an hour, but must finance themselves for one week after they get on the job. The quartermaster department will furnish lodging.

Opportunities for a number of experienced salesmen, draftsmen, mechanical engineers, and other technical workers were received. A score of applicants were placed.

"Instead of a working force of twelve job collectors, we can now operate with more than 600 men canvassing the industrial and business field," announced Dudley Walker, manager of the bureau. "This help comes from the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, whose 600 collectors have volunteered to help."

FIND MAN WITH SKULL FRACTURED.

An unidentified man, fairly well dressed, was found unconscious with his skull fractured early yesterday alongside railroad tracks at West Eighteenth and South Sangamon streets. He is believed to have been hit by a train.

U. S. FOUND JOBS FOR 4,000,000 IN LAST 14 MONTHS

Washington, D. C., March 29—[Special.]—More than 4,000,000 persons have been placed in employment through the United States employment service since its reorganization in January, 1918, the department of labor announced today. Approximately 3,000,000 were men and women found for war industries up to the signing of the armistice, while the other million have been mostly soldiers, sailors, and civilian war workers placed in peace time jobs.

Contributions of funds and personal services received during the last week, the depahtment also announced, assures that the United States employmentment service can continue at least 60 per cent of its former offices until congress appropriates funds.

Harry A. Wheeler of Chicago, president of the Chamber of Commerce, has issued an appeal to each member of the national chamber urging that they get in touch with each nonresident soldier seeking employment in their town, find out where he belongs, communicate with the Chamber of Commerce in his home city, and, on receiving assurance that it will take care of him, provide funds for his transportation home.

ATLAS MERGER DENIED.

United States manager of the Atlas Assurance expresses the belief that rumors of the possible merger of the Atlas and the Phœnix Assurance, cabled from London, are without foundation. Such a merger was negotiated some years ago, but the British court of chancery held that it could not be effected because of the peculiar charter of the Atlas.

Ashamed to Smile

The embarrassment of an unhealthy mouth is invariably the result of Pyorrhea, that insidious disease of the gums and teeth with which 75 per cent of all men and women in the world, past thirty, are afflicted. Pyorrhea is responsible for painful, bleeding, spongy, receding gums—loose teeth, decayed teeth, loss of teeth.

PYROS

FOR PYORRHEA

(The Million-Dollar Secret Formula)

—Is perhaps the most powerful and most efficient remedy for this pyorrhetic condition of the gums and for teeth and mouth cleansing yet discovered. It is non-alcoholic and non-poisonous.

PYROS—the result of sixteen years of research and chemical experiments—is a penetrant of such power that it goes right thru the tissues of the gums, teeth and teeth sockets, kills the trouble-causing germs, heals and makes firm the gums and purifies and sweetens the breath.

If you have pyorrhea stop it with PYROS. If you haven't, prevent it with PYROS. Use it as a tooth cleanser to guard against the nerve-racking tooth and gum scraping, the tapping of pus cavities and the severe treatment necessary to stop pyorrhea—unless YOU DO use PYROS.

Denver's most prominent dentists use and recommend PYROS for the most advanced cases of pyorrhea.

Most drug and department stores have PYROS for pyorrhea in $1.25 bottles. Ask for it and insist on getting PYROS and none other. If your druggist can't supply you, we will.

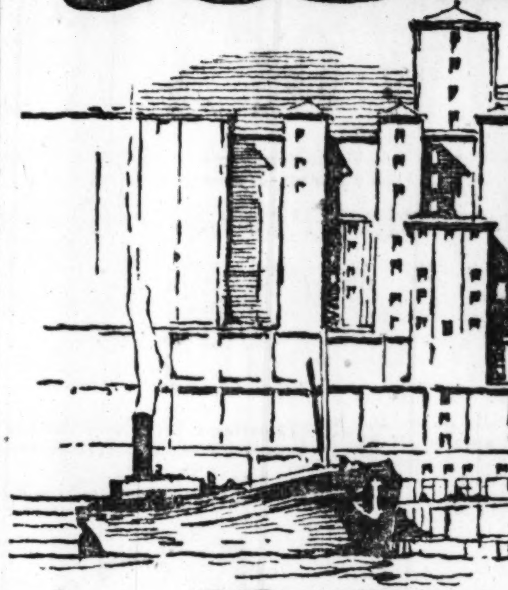
eat more macaroni made of wheat

a most economical food



The total actual storage capacity of country and terminal elevators is 500,000,000 bushels.

THE world was at war and many nations starving. It was then our government ordered—"Save Wheat". Now—the need no longer exists. The ban is lifted. You may eat wheat,—all you choose!

Eat wheat because it is plentiful. Eat wheat to reduce the huge surplus remaining after we shall have taken care of all demands—including those of allies and neutral nations.

There are four good reasons why you should eat macaroni. It is made of wheat. It is economical. It is nourishing. It is appetizing. There is no cheaper or better food.

A pound of round steak costs 40 cents and is 80 per cent water. A pound of macaroni costs less than half as much as round steak,—and there is no waste. And the macaroni has nearly double the amount of energizing value!

Macaroni is the nearest "all-wheat" food. Hence it is strong in gluten, the "meat of the wheat". And it is gluten which makes blood, flesh and bone in the human body. Good for all the family. Particularly good for children.

Get the macaroni habit, and you will be better fed, better nourished. Heavy foods clog the brain. Don't eat meat on hot days. Eat macaroni with cheese, fish, poultry, vegetables or mushrooms.

You can eat macaroni every day and never tire of it. Try it during this Lenten season. Eat macaroni through the summer. Learn how really good it is—how tempting—how appetizing.

Directions for Boiling

Use two quarts water, two teaspoons salt, one half lb. of Macaroni. Let water come to boiling point,—add Macaroni and boil vigorously 12 or 15 minutes—until tender. Macaroni must always be boiled as directed before use in any combination.

Baked Macaroni and Cheese

One half lb. Macaroni, ½ cup thin white sauce, ½ cup grated American cheese, ½ cup buttered bread crumbs, 1 teaspoon butter for baking dish. Mix Macaroni, white sauce and cheese. Pour into buttered baking dish. Sprinkle over with buttered crumbs. Bake in moderate oven until golden brown—about 20 minutes.

Tomatoes with Macaroni

One half lb. Macaroni, 2 cans of canned tomatoes, (or 5 medium sized fresh tomatoes skinned), ½ teaspoon salt, few grains pepper, ½ cup soup stock. Cut tomatoes fine, add soup stock, salt, pepper and Macaroni. Let come to boiling point and simmer 10 minutes.

BIG DEALS IN LOOP REAL ESTATE MAKE MARKET LOOK ROSY

HEAR FEDERAL RESERVE BANK SEEKS A BLOCK

Record Breaking Lease and Big Sales Are the Week's Features.

The week's real estate market was of a fairly sensational character. Developments in the downtown district offered a striking contrast to the moribund character of the market for a long time past.

These developments included a record breaking building lease of one of the most prominent State street corners, further information pointing clearly to the fact that the Illinois Trust and Savings bank is the prospective lessee of the Grand Pacific hotel property, and the purchase by the Old Colony Life Insurance company from David Mayer of the Lombard hotel property at the southeast corner of Quincy and Wells streets.

There is a report current that the Federal Reserve bank is behind the purchase of the Lombard hotel property as a part of its reported plans to acquire the entire block bounded by Jackson boulevard, Quincy street, La Salle and Wells streets, thus emulating the example of the Continental and Commercial National bank in owning an entire block.

Largest Building Lease.

The State street lease covers the Frederick Ayer building at the southwest corner of Monroe street, and has the distinction of being the largest building lease in the history of Chicago. The building is a five story and basement structure on a lot with 120 feet frontage on both State and Monroe streets, and has been leased by the Orpheum Theater company, owned and operated by Jones, Linick & Schaefer, from the Ledyard trustees for fifteen years from May 1, 1922, at a rental which, with taxes and insurance, will, it is said, aggregate about $3,000,000.

Plans are said to have been prepared by Architect Thomas Ryan of New York City for a combination theater and office building to cost $1,000,000, to cover the 120 feet as well as the twenty-two feet adjoining, owned by the lessees and now occupied by the Bijou theater, giving a frontage of 142 feet. The proposed theater will, it is said, have a seating capacity of 3,500, and will be one of the finest playhouses in the country. John Dorr Bradley of Aldis & Co. represented the trustees, while E. F. Keebler & Co. represented the lessees. Keebler & Co. will have charge of the new building.

In addition to large outside interests in theaters and film concerns, Jones, Linick & Schaefer own and operate the Rialto theater on State street, just north of Van Buren, where they have their general offices. They also own McVicker's theater and leasehold in Madison street, the Randolph theater on Randolph street, near State street; also the Orpheum and Bijou, both on State street between Monroe and Adams streets. Allen G. Mills represented the Ledyard trustees in a legal way, while Andrew J. Ryan of Ryan, Condon & Livingston represented the lessees.

$600,000 for Property.

For the Lombard hotel and leasehold interest the insurance company is said to have paid $600,000. The lot is 55½x115 feet, while the hotel is an eleven story fireproof structure. The property adjoins that previously acquired by the company on Quincy street, running through to Jackson boulevard, 50x165 feet, thus giving the company an L-shaped plot comprising 14,580 square feet, making an attractive holding for improvement.

It is stated that plans have been prepared by Architect C. A. Eckstorm for a sixteen story office building on the Jackson boulevard frontage, in connection with which it is proposed to add three stories to the eleven story Lombard hotel. A large part of the proposed building will be occupied by the company with its main offices.

The Lombard hotel was erected by Mr. Mayer in 1914 after plans by Graham, Burnham & Co. The ground was leased in two parcels in 1913 and 1914 for 198 years at an aggregate graded rental of $20,000 to $30,000. W. A. Pridmore represented both parties.

In connection with the report that this property was acquired in the interest of the Federal Reserve bank it will be recalled that the bank recently acquired the last half of this block. The market developed a number of interesting transactions in addition to those mentioned, showing, as a whole, not only a large movement of property but also a broadening tendency.

Pay $90,000 for 5 Year Lease on Movie Theater

A lease has just been closed by the owners of the Ziegfeld theater property, 624 South Michigan avenue, with Messrs. Fred Linick and R. L. Jacoby for a period of five years, beginning May 1, 1919, for a guaranteed rental of $90,000 for the period. The lessees agree to improve the premises and conduct a high grade moving picture house.

Linick and Jacoby are now successfully operating seven picture houses throughout the city. Louis Grollman represented all parties.

DO NOT WAIT FOR LOWER BUILDING COSTS—STRAUS

Commenting on the building situation, S. W. Straus of S. W. Straus & Co. said yesterday:

"Reports from all parts of the country indicate that building conditions are at least one year behind normal demand. That these estimates are conservative may be judged from the fact that total building work in the United States in 1916 was $980,000,000 and in 1917 $700,000,000, while various canvasses of the situation indicate a present building deficit far in excess of $1,000,000,000.

"With this strong pressure back of the market, and the accepted cut in steel prices for the balance of the year, stabilized conditions are being manifested everywhere in the country. Although structural steel represents less than 20 per cent of construction costs, the determination of a definite price basis has placed the whole situation on a solid footing. It was generally felt that after-war steel prices would be much lower, as this commodity advanced more in price during the war than other building materials.

"Meanwhile there are indications that lumber may be expected to advance in price eventually. This expectation is based fundamentally on a tremendous demand as a result of the building shortage and a largely decreased production. In 1918 there was a shrinkage of 3,000,000,000 feet, as compared with 1917 production. Furthermore, all indications point to a vindication of the views of those who have been contending that there will be no general reduction in wages. In the steel industry, for example, it is announced that price reductions will not be made at the expense of labor.

"Current reports indicate that pending building projects throughout the country have reached more than $500,000,000, which amount will be greatly increased within the next few weeks under the stabilized conditions that now are being rapidly brought about. In the metropolitan district of New York new projects have been increasing at the rate of $5,000,000 a week since March 1.

"A tremendous shortage of homes exists in Canada as well as in the United States. The Dominion and provincial governments are working on a plan to lend $32,000,000 to prospective home builders. This sum would provide housing facilities for 500,000 people. In New York City there is an estimated housing shortage equal to the normal requirements of a city of 300,000 population.

"General conditions, therefore, indicate that nothing is to be gained by holding off for lower prices now, and that the unusual building activities which must continue over a period of many years before normal requirements are met has definitely begun."

Real Estate Board Stand on Senate Bill Explained

The following statement, which defines the attitude of the Chicago real estate board toward senate bill 105, was issued yesterday by John Lyle Vette, attorney for the board:

"The Chicago real estate board is in favor of some amendments to the bail bond law, which will cure the existing evils, due to a law passed in 1917 making bail bonds a lien on the real estate scheduled therein. Several bills designed to remedy the situation have been introduced in the legislature. One of these, senate bill 105, provides in substance that bail bonds shall no longer be a lien on the real estate scheduled. The other bills retain the lien principle, but purport so to qualify it as to remove the existing difficulties. If a bill of the class last mentioned can be passed the Chicago real estate board will be satisfied to have the lien principle retained, but if for any reason such a bill cannot be passed, then the board will support and urge the passage of senate bill 105."

WAR TAXES MAY BREAK UP VAST LOOP HOLDINGS

Fees, Once Considered Best of Investments, Now Pay Little.

The recent publication in THE TRIBUNE of the statement that the trustees of the Marshall Field estate are desirous of disposing of all the real estate holdings of the estate in the downtown district, especially fees, because of the meager net returns obtained, as the result of the heavy burdens imposed by the income tax, aroused much general interest. However, this was not among real estate men, especially those operating in the downtown district, as they have been cognizant of the attitude of the trustees in this matter for several months.

It has been common knowledge that these properties have been netting only between 1 and 2 per cent, and that the trustees were anxious to dispose of this property and invest the proceeds in 3½ per cent nontaxable Liberty bonds.

Practically all of the fees are on a 4 per cent basis, but because of the income tax, the net amounted to only 1.32 per cent last year, according to the trustees; the tax absorbing 67 per cent of the gross earnings. Feeling that they are working more for the government than the Field estate, they decided, quite naturally, to make a change.

Offered on 5 Per Cent Basis.

It is said they have been offering some fees on a 5 per cent basis, and, in the opinion of some brokers, it may be necessary to make it 5½ per cent to effect sales. However, none have been made as yet, or at least made public, and in this connection it is interesting to recall that before the war these fees offered an ideal form of investment, being exempt from taxes and all charges, which were met by the lessee, while now they present the most unsatisfactory form of investment, except their absolute safeness.

Regarding the value of the Field estate holdings in the downtown district, it is probably safe to say they are nearer to $100,000,000 than $40,000,000, unless their values are conceded to have been cut in two as compared with pre-war values.

It may also be said that the rapidity with which they and other large estate holdings were augmented during the decade or more preceding the war caused them to be looked upon as a really serious menace by many thoughtful people. Bearing this in mind, may it not be said that anything like a breaking up of these huge holdings, may be taken as a healthy sign?

May Form Corporations.

However, so long as the present heavy taxes prevail, there does not promise to be much of an investment demand for these holdings, unless their earning powers are materially increased, or holders are willing to make concessions, such as will prove attractive to investors. At present the outlook is not exactly encouraging, especially if the proposed general tax rate is marked up to $2.35, as now seems probable.

It has been suggested that a way may be found for making these properties a popular form of investment through the formation of corporations which, under the laws of this state, may be organized for the ownership and operation of one piece of property, thus distributing the earnings among many stockholders. They would have to pay the sur tax, so that no particular advantage accrues, except that the larger the income, the larger the tax.

At present, however, the earnings of most of the downtown properties are hardly large enough to make them attractive to investors.

Another suggestive feature of the downtown market in an investment way is the fact that owners of leaseholds do not seem to be disposed to buy the fees of the properties, despite favorable terms in many instances.

Unloading Mortgages, Too.

Reverting to the Field estate, it may be said that real estate is not the only form of investment which the trustees of the estate are said to be ridding it of, as they are also seeking a market for the numerous large real estate mortgages it holds, and which come under the provisions of the government's tax schedule. It is understood, however, that little progress has been made by the trustees in this direction, as persons with sufficient means to purchase those securities seem to be equally impressed with the comparative superiority of the nontaxable 3½ per cents.

FLAT PROPERTY TRADES REVEAL LIMITED DEMAND

$142,500 Rogers Park Sale Leads Week's Activity.

Apartment property made a rather indifferent showing in the week's market, both in respect to the aggregate movement and the character of the properties involved.

The most important of these was the sale by Mertie G. Grover and husband, Edwin O., of Western Springs, to Sandfrid Tarnstrom of the Lincoln apartment hotel at the northeast corner of Lunt avenue and Paulina street, in Rogers Park, for an indicated consideration of $142,500, subject to an incumbrance of $102,500. The building, which is on a lot 100x172 feet, is a three story structure, erected about three years ago, containing eighty-two apartments of one to three rooms, with kitchenettes. The apartments are furnished, and the building is said to be filled, and to have a gross annual rental of about $35,000. It was a cash transaction.

Hyde Park Flat Sale.

The high grade three apartment building at 1131 East Fiftieth street, being 257 feet west of Woodlawn avenue, north front, 40x207 feet, has been sold by Edward M. Bertha to Charles Johann for an indicated consideration of $45,000, subject to an incumbrance of $25,000. The apartments contain eight rooms with three baths, and the building is said to have a gross annual rental of $6,300. In exchange for the equity the purchaser conveyed the six apartment building at 6131-33 Woodlawn avenue, lot 50x166 feet, west front, at a consideration of $20,000, clear. Fred M. Lorish of W. K. Young & Bro. was the broker.

The fourteen flat building at 3841 Grand boulevard was sold by J. R. Hunter to Thomas W. Lewis of Aurora for a reported $50,000, subject to $14,00, the seller taking in part payment a farm of 320 acres near Huntley, Ill. Rollo Shanks of Hoy Bros. represented both parties.

$49,000 Transaction.

L. M. and Andrew Gustafson have sold to John Halgeson the flat property at the northwest corner of University avenue and Sixty-second street, 70x85 feet, for an indicated consideration of $49,000, subject to $27,000.

The flat property at 4627-33 Winthrop avenue, lot 100x77 feet, west front, has been conveyed by M. M. Ball to Joseph W. Story for an indicated $40,000, subject to $18,000.

The twelve flat building at the southwest corner of Sixty-second street and Rhodes avenue, lot 66x124 feet, has been sold by Louis J. Kaiser to August Marcucci of Lincoln, Ill., for a reported consideration of $43,500, subject to an incumbrance of $25,500. The purchaser conveyed in part payment a farm of 240 acres in Mitchell county, Ia. Clyde A. Kirk of William Kirk & Co. was the broker.

$132,000 Paid for Big Rogers Park Building

The thirty-six apartment building situated at the southeast corner of Greenleaf and Greenview avenues, in Rogers Park, has been sold to Adolph and Vera Lauter and Jacob Winkler for $132,000. It brings a rental of $20,000 a year and is subject to an incumbrance of $65,500. The purchasers conveyed in part payment the Nicolet hotel, 664 North Clark street, at a consideration of $55,000, subject to a mortgage of $24,000, at 5½ per cent. The balance of $35,500 was paid in cash. Stafford & Trankle conducted the negotiations.

WEEK'S DEALING IN RESIDENCES SHOWS ACTIVITY

$60,000 Site on Sheridan Road Is Sold for Improvement.

The week's market developed much activity in residence property, including both Chicago and north shore property, mostly improved, but with one notable transaction in vacant involving the construction of a fine residence.

One transaction of much interest was the sale by Mary A. Ryan, widow of the late Timothy E. Ryan, to C. Hollanbach of the attractive residence property at the southwest corner of Sheridan road and Thorndale avenue. The lot fronts 100 feet with a depth of 150 feet and is improved with an attractive large three story fourteen room dwelling, with a large ballroom on the third floor and a garage in the rear. A nominal consideration is given in the transfer, but the property is said to have been held at $85,000. Madden Bros. were the brokers.

$60,000 For Home Site.

A transfer in vacant involving the erection of a fine dwelling was the sale by Edgar J. Uihlein to Charles L. Bastian of the property at the northwest corner of Sheridan road and Surf street, 100x142 feet, for an indicated cash consideration of $60,000. It is stated Mr. Bastian will improve as indicated, but probably not until next year. Callistus S. Ennis & Co. were the brokers.

In a south side residence sale Mrs. Esther B. Roy, wife of Maj. Ervin L. Roy of Cross, Roy & Saunders, has acquired from Mrs. Marjorie Mason Horton, the new nine room brick house and garage, lot 49x177 feet, at the southwest corner of Fifty-seventh street and Woodlawn avenue, for a reported consideration of $32,500. James J. Parker was the broker.

A sale of high grade Sheridan road residence property was included in the transfers filed for record. It covers the property 151 feet north of Granville avenue, lot 75x200 feet, west front, extending back to the lake, improved with an attractive twelve room brick dwelling and a garage. The property was conveyed by Nettie E. Gunder to Mrs. Hattie Diamond, wife of Jesse Diamond, for an indicated cash consideration of $60,000, according to the revenue stamps on the deed. The purchaser gave a trust deed to the Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings bank to secure a loan of $50,000, ten years at 5½ per cent.

Residence Property Sales.

Two interesting sales of north shore residence property were reported, in one of which Charles D. Loper, secretary of Mullen & Co., wholesale woolens, has purchased from Norman S. Hope the nine room stucco residence at 821 Prospect avenue, Winnetka, on a lot with a frontage of 100 feet. A nominal consideration was given, but the property is said to have been held at $20,000. Frederick B. Thomas represented the purchaser and McGuire & Orr the seller.

Mr. Thomas also sold for Emory C. Andrews, vice president of Phillip Ruxton company, manufacturers of inks, to William W. Winship the nine room residence with garage on Cumner road, near Chestnut avenue, Kenilworth, with lot frontage of 116 feet, for an indicated consideration of $12,000.

Unfair to Traction Investors.

The annual report of the Chicago Surface lines, issued a few days ago, proves beyond doubt that one of the two large operating companies is facing bankruptcy, the other one is earning practically nothing for its stockholders, and a holding company is in a dangerous position.

The report covers a period of six months before the big advance in wages ordered by the war board and six months after that advance took effect. The results are evidently an average of the two periods. Present net earnings must be about as much lower than those shown in the report, as the latter are lower than those of the preceding year.

In the last year the lines earned one-third less than in the year before. The Chicago City railway's share of the receipts is barely 5 per cent on its capital valuation. As the stock is included in the valuation, this means 5 per cent earned on stock, compared with 5 1-3 the year before, and indicates that present earnings are much less than 5 per cent on stock.

The Chicago Railways' share of the receipts probably will figure out at a fraction more than 5 per cent on capital valuation, but not all the bonds are included in this valuation. The conclusion is inevitable that only part of the bond interest is being earned now and nothing whatever on the shares.

The expected denial of higher fares in Chicago is in line with recent decisions of rate making authorities in several of the large cities. Three New York traction companies are in receivers' hands, as are those of Pittsburgh and New Orleans. San Francisco's company is being reorganized, and St. Louis is not earning interest charges. This is only part of the list. The authorities are, in effect, requiring investors to transport people for less than cost.

Great Northern Power.

C. E. B.—The Great Northern Power company owns a large hydro-electric plant and supplies power to Superior and Duluth, selling at wholesale for lighting, street railway and other purposes. Gross and net earnings have increased steadily, but interest charges have grown at about the same rate. First mortgage bond interest usually has been covered with a margin of only one-third. The report for 1918 is not yet available. The franchise in West Superior is indefinite, but that in Duluth expires in 1928, while the bonds do not mature till 1935. The bond are of only medium grade.

Brief Answers.

J. G.—The bonds of Morris & Co. outstanding to the amount of $10,700,000 are secured by first mortgage on plants. Net quick assets must be kept equal to at least 100 per cent of bonds outstanding. Interest is covered many times over. The bonds are a conservative investment.

J. W., Jamestown, N. D.—The Midvale Steel and Ordnance company earned 29 per cent on its $100,000,000 of stock, compared with 34¼ in 1917.

J. A. F., Minneapolis, Minn.—The Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron company is subject to violent fluctuations of earnings and its common stock is highly speculative. Earnings in 1918 were 15 per cent on common. For several years preceding the war an average of less than 1 per cent was earned.

The Secret of Success in Farming
Sears, Roebuck and Co. Chicago

Profits That Lie Hidden In Your Farm

And How to Get Them Out

Why do so many experienced farmers fail to gather in the full profits their farm offers them? It's because they haven't learned to avoid the costly mistakes that cut into profits—they haven't learned the methods used by men who average, per acre, 90 bushels of corn, 85 bushels of oats, 50 bushels of wheat, 2 bales of cotton and other crops equally good. The average farmer is making costly mistakes every day and is not getting the amount of profits he COULD get, merely because he doesn't heed the experience of others—the wonderful results achieved by experts thru new methods he lets pass by—and one year plays "follow master" after the other, doing the same things, the same way, with the same results.

Write for This Book

Mail coupon today for valuable free book, "The Secret of Success in Farming." Prepared by Sears, Roebuck & Company, and chock-full of valuable information about how you can solve your building problems, treatment of seed, pointers on raising livestock, how to use fertilizers effectively, making and maintaining a rich soil, how you can learn the methods which produce, to the acre, 47 bushels of wheat, 80 bushels of oats, 240 bushels of potatoes, 310 pounds of butter fat per year, $2,000 yearly side-line profits on hens, and much other important information. Don't miss this valuable booklet, also containing sample pages of FARM KNOWLEDGE.

Pooling Worth-While Methods

Just as we have the physician who specializes on one particular branch of medicine, so we have the farmer who specializes on one particular branch of farming. No one farmer can learn thru his own experience as much about all branches of farming as all these specialists together have learned. When you consider that farming experts have learned and can teach you how to increase your corn production by an average of two ears to every hill, and that this means 90 bushels to every acre, then you will begin to realize what FARM KNOWLEDGE, written by over 100 of America's greatest farming authorities, will mean to YOU.

At an expense of over $50,000 for editorial material alone, the successful farming experience of these recognized authorities in all parts of the country has been collected by Sears, Roebuck and Company and placed within the covers of FARM KNOWLEDGE. No theories. No guesswork. No wild ideas. All tried and proved methods and systems which have actually increased crops, boosted profits, and have made money for the men who now disclose the facts.

CATTLE RECEIPTS SMALLEST SINCE HOLIDAY WEEK

Only 1,000 Arrive, and Sell at Unchanged Prices.

WEEKLY AVERAGE PRICES

LIVE STOCK.

Average prices for native beef cattle, hogs, sheep, and lambs at Chicago for week:

	Cattle.	Hogs.	Sheep.	Lambs.
Last week	$16.10	$19.42	$14.50	$18.80
Prev. week	16.10	19.50	14.50	19.60
Cor. wk. '18.	12.90	17.10	14.90	17.60
Cor. wk. '17.	11.35	15.10	11.80	14.00
Cor. wk. '16.	8.80	9.60	8.35	10.60
Cor. wk. '15.	7.45	6.85	7.10	9.20
Av. '11-'18	$ 8.85	$10.10	$ 8.15	$10.20

Cattle receipts for the last week totaled only 41,200 head. Barring the storm week of last January and Christmas week of 1918, the total stands the smallest since August, 1917. The supply, compared with a total of 98,278 received the week ending Jan. 11, the largest week so far this year.

Trade is expecting a few more fair sized days' receipts, but after that they look for moderate arrivals. With farm work started in many places and to be increased with warmer weather, feeders are expected to be too busy to ship stock. At the same time feeder buyers are anxious to get cattle in their feed lots before urgent work is under way. During the week this caused a very firm undertone for medium cattle, as some buyers competed with killers to get the strong weights.

Only 1,000 cattle arrived the closing day of the week and the few on sale went at unchanged prices. While receipts for the week figure close to 17,000 less than the previous week, outgoing shipments were only 1,400 less. This shows the keen outside call. Better conditions in the east and the increased feeder demand was responsible for the strong finish to the market, and while this lasts the trade looks for the firmness to continue.

Practically all the sheep and lamb arrivals were direct to packers from other markets. During the week killers had about one-third of the arrivals direct from other points. This enabled them to force sharply lower prices. These direct arrivals are expected to move for some time yet, which gives the trade a bearish opinion of the market in the near future.

Receipts of hogs were estimated at 8,000 and about one-half of the number were received direct by packers. But the layover supply was practically as large as the fresh receipts. Demand was fairly good and best clearance of the week was effected, only 1,500 remaining unsold at the close.

The day's hog top at $19.65 was 10c lower than the previous day, while some lightweights showed as much as 10c to 15c advance, the latter equaling top for heavyweights. General range of prices was the narrowest of the season.

Average price for the day at $19.42 was 4c lower than Friday, comparing with $19.68 previous Saturday, $16.90 a year ago, $15.43 two years ago, $9.45 three years ago, and $6.93 four years ago. Estimated average weight for the week at 232 pounds was 3 pounds less than previous week, and 7 pounds less than a year ago.

Week's receipts of hogs at 175,300 were more than 20,000 larger than previous week, but over 53,000 less than a year ago. Eleven markets received 40,000, against 50,000 previous Saturday, and 55,000 a year ago. Total for the week at these markets was 614,000, or 4,000 more than previous week, 112,000 less than a year ago, but 166,000 more than the eleven year average for corresponding week from 1908 to 1918.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 17,000 cattle, 48,000 hogs, and 17,000 sheep, against 20,769 cattle, 49,926 hogs, and 10,747 sheep corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts, 53,000 cattle, 175,000 hogs, and 58,000 sheep.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, March 29.—Cotton yarns today were quiet. Fruit of the loom bleached muslins advanced ½ cent to 20 cents, with a guarantee that the price would be no lower before June 1. Finished cottons sold in small lots for immediate shipment. Dress goods were quiet, linens advanced, and burlaps were firmer.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Reports received from all parts of the country regarding the state of trade show that a gradual improvement is going on. There is a steady growth in the feeling of optimism. This is ascribed to the fact that the economic disturbances they have been feared are not materializing. The result is that there is a continual increase in the general feeling of confidence over the outcome.

Announcements has been made in London that an order for 500,000 tons of steel rails for reonstruction work in northern France has been placed with American manufacturers.

The prediction is being made in some quarters that large rail orders are to be placed within the next few weeks. Holders of Lackawanna Steel are confident that they will benefit in case these orders are placed.

While discussing prospects for the coming year John N. Willys said yesterday that the outlook was never brighter for the automobile and farm tractor industries. He expects that production will reach 175,000 cars during 1919.

Exports of gold coin or bullion are forbidden in an order in council which has just been issued in London.

During the last week thirty-seven additional merchant vessels have been allocated to merchant routes and to European food relief by the United States shipping board. Two vessels were released to owners.

The announcement by the New Jersey Zinc company of a new price schedule, which ranges from 1 to 2½ cents a pound below present prices for zinc oxide, has been interpreted as the forerunner of fresh impetus for building operations throughout the country.

Officials of railroads operating east from Chicago and St. Louis report traffic as being about steady, as compared with preceding weeks. The car situation is easier than it has been for some time. Traffic on southern railroads is light as compared with a year ago.

COTTON TRADE NEWS

NEW YORK, March 29.—A weak tone prevailed in cotton most of the day with realizing sales a feature. The buying was by spot houses and Liverpool, but was insufficient to support values and the close was at losses of 11 to 17 points on the active trading futures, while May was strong and closed 3 points higher. Trading in old deliveries was light, with prices 20 points higher to 5 points lower. News from the south was unsettled. Frost was reported in Georgia, while in the western belt weather conditions were more favorable. Prices follow:

TAXES

and

Non-Taxable Investments

You will be taxed on your personal property as of Tuesday next, April 1st.

Although this tax as levied on your principal seems small, it in reality takes a very large part of your income. In some extreme cases one's total income from investments is taken by the State. In many cases incomes are cut in two.

The average personal property tax rate for Chicago this year averages $6.01 for each $100 of assessed valuation, property being assessed at one-third of the actual value. On this basis, for example, the tax on $1,000 of a 6% taxable investment selling at par would be $20.03. After deducting this tax, the income is actually reduced from $60 to $39.97, leaving a net investment yield of less than 4%.

In a great number of cases your investments can be changed from taxable securities to equally sound investments which are not subject to the personal property tax when held by residents of Illinois.

Why not switch your investments to these Illinois tax free securities and save from 20% to 50% of your yearly income?

You have only Monday and Tuesday in which to arrange this.

The tax question is growing more important yearly and many of the wealthiest and soundest security holders in Chicago are confining their investments very largely to these securities.

We have for many years specialized in Illinois tax exempt securities and have compiled a representative list of such investments.

We will be glad to aid you in every way in your selection and suggest that you come in to see us Monday, as Tuesday is the last day. In this way many can save a large proportion of their income.

NOTE: We have been informed that the larger part of the Chicago tax paying public have not had this important point brought to their attention, and we have therefore endeavored by this advertisement to be of service to you and add new customers and friends to our clientele.

SHORT SELLERS OVERPLAY HAND AND ARE CAUGHT

Prices Advance in Last Hour and Close at Highest.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Short sellers of the early part of Saturday were overconfident and sold too much corn and oats on the break and had to cover in the last hour. The situation in the pits was reversed during that time and prices advanced and closed at the best of the day, with gains of 1⅞@2¾c on corn, the latter on March and the former on July, while oats gained ¼c on March and 1⅛@1⅜c on other futures in Chicago. Outside corn markets were up 1¾@3c, with St. Louis leading. Oats advanced ½@2½c, May in Winnipeg leading. Rye futures in Minenapolis gained 4⅜c and barley 2½c for the day.

Closing trades compared with a week ago show corn 5¼c higher for March, while May was up ¼c, and other futures off ⅜c. Oats lost 2½c to 5c, the latter on March. Pork gained 5c to 17½c, lard 12½c to 30c lower, and short ribs 7½c higher on May and 2½c lower on July.

Corn in Sharp Rally.

Corn futures were weaker and lower early with March and May off about 2c at the low point, while the deferred deliveries dropped 1⅝c to 1½c, the latter showing stubborn resistance to pressure. Scattered liquidation was in evidence in the near deliveries, but offerings were absorbed on resting orders, and when oats started upward corn followed. At the top prices were up 3⅞c to 4¾c, March leading, with the close about the top. March finished at $1.59¾, May at $1.47⅝, July at $1.37¼, and September at $1.31.

There was general selling by the local element early, and many went short on the break, only to cover when prices started upward. Week end evening up was also a factor.

Country offering were not large, and shipping sales 5,000 bu, with 12,000 bu delivered on March contracts. Sample values were 1c to 3c lower early, and closed firm with futures. Receipts, 95 cars. Weather conditions over the belt were favorable for field work, but the weekly forecast for the region of the great lakes was for unsettled conditions.

Export Talk Bulges Oats.

Talk of export business in oats, coming at a time when the market was slightly oversold, resulted in a scramble on the part of shorts to cover. A bulge of 1⅛@2⅜c from the low point followed, with the close at the top, March being 62c, May 63¾c, July 63c, and September 60c.

Local cash handlers placed little faith in the report of export business, and it turned out to be 49,000 bu sold at New York to fill a cargo. This news, however, did not reach the trade until after the close. Domestic call showed improvement, with sales of 75,000 bu. Sample values were 1@2c lower, with receipts 73 cars. Cash handlers refused to follow the advance in futures, and standards at the last were quoted at ½@1c over May.

Exporters Buy Barley.

While there was some inquiry for rye from the seaboard the basis was not given out, and no sales were reported. Spot prices were unchanged to 1c lower, with No. 2 at $1.60@1.62. This grade sells mainly at 1@2c under May, which was quoted at $1.64½ at the last. Receipts 17 cars. Milwaukee was unchanged, and Minneapolis 4@4½c higher. The northwest had 145 cars.

Seaboard exporters were keen bidders for barley, and there was a fair amount of malting grades sold, said to have been at $1.14 track, Baltimore. The demand continued after the close. Spot prices were 2@3c lower, with a slow demand. Sales were at $1.03@1.18. Receipts 98 cars. Milwaukee and Mnineapolis were 2@3c lower. The northwest has 60 cars.

Flax seed at Duluth closed 7@12c higher; May $3.75, July $3.63; September $3.35. Winnipeg 13½@14½c higher; May $3.48½, July $3.39. The three markets received 36 cars.

Clover seed was strong. Country lots, $30.00@45.00 per 100 lbs. Toledo, 25c higher at a new record figure of $30.25 for March, per bu of 60 lbs. Timothy seed unchanged. Country lots, $7.00@10.00 per 100 lbs.

Provisions Rally at Close.

Offerings of provisions were light, especially at the close, when a little buying appeared and with the advance in corn prices moved up and finished at the best of the day, with gains of 80c to 90c on pork, 25c to 30c on lard, and 37½c to 40c on short ribs. Packers' brokers took May and July at the last. Combined shipments of lard and cured meats for the week were 46,284,000 lbs, against 47,744,000 lbs the previous week, and 19,300,000 lbs last year. Hog prices were irregular and arrivals small. Packing here since March 1 was 535,000 hogs, or 192,000 short of last year. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

The grain trade was treated to a surprise in the last hour in the way of a bulge of over 4c in corn and 2c in oats. The local element were bearish; and, in an effort to force prices down, oversold to an extent that left them in position to be easily scared. It only required the mention of a larger eastern demand for oats, which was construed by many in the trade as meaning that an export demand existed. It started a general scramble in oats, which was followed immediately in corn, with the close around the top prices.

The only business in oats that was confirmed after the close was a message from Brainard, which said that 49,000 bu spot oats had been sold at New York to fill out a cargo. At the same time he and others were trying to resell oats. It was said that the Wheat Export company, which has 13,000,000 bu of oats bought, has canceled a round lot with the Quaker Oats company, the seller, and the latter was a free seller of May here early in the day. The government which is supposed to be long 6,000,000 bu of oats, part of which were held here, is moving out its holdings, and the shipments of 1,628,000 bu for the week, compared with receipts of 989,000 bu, was largely the result of this movement. It looks as though the visible supply of oats will show a decrease for the week.

The Board of Trade will be closed Tuesday, April 1, owing to the municipal election. St. Louis and Peoria will also close.

Local shorts reduced their open interest in corn and oats materially on the bulge yesterday. Most of the trade, however, are looking for a break on Monday, and were buyers of bids after the close. There was also a fair business in offers late in the day.

The board of grain supervisors of the Canadian commission at Ottawa dealing with the necessity of an export license for the clearance of barley from Canada are anxious to meet the wishes of the grain trade, and have asked Ottawa for a ruling which is adverse to export business. The reply from Ottawa yesterday said grain to European neutrals is still restricted by the arrangements of the allied powers. Exporters must obtain an import guarantee from the consignee, which requires approval in London.

"There is a noticeable increase in the volume of July and September transactions in corn and selling of May and buying of current futures by houses with eastern connections," says Logan & Bryan. "The trend of values during the coming week will in our opinion pivot on foreign developments and the attitude of cash and export interests."

F. W. Donaldson applied for membership in the board of trade and G. W. Badger posted his membership for transfer.

B. A. Eckhart, who came through Kansas within a few days, says he has never seen a more perfect wheat crop. There are no bare spots. He believes that the government will eventually make a price on wheat that will reduce the cost of living to the general consumers and thinks $1.50 will be a fair level for the 1919 crop.

Grain receipts at Chicago the last week were 3,281,000 bu, or 125,000 bu more than the previous week and 2,575,000 bu, or 43.6 per cent short of last year. There were small increases in receipts of corn and oats for the week, but they were the lightest at this time in many years, both being below 1,000,000 bu. Provision shipments 57,262 tons, the largest on record at this season, being 33,443 tons in excess of last year.

"Kankakee sold a lot of corn to go to Indianapolis and Cincinnati, bought from farmers at $1.45," said a Sheldon (Ill.) message to Logan & Bryan. "This corn is too high to take a risk on and is being sold to arrive. Indianapolis bid $1.49 for ten day shipment."

Argentine corn can be laid down at Liverpool at around $1 per bu based on the quoted freight rate, and the April in Buenos Aires. The latter closed yesterday at 48½c, while Broomhall claimed the freight rate was 37½@39c per bu. Corn from South Africa to Liverpool was 36c per bu.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Cash wheat prices showed little change in any of the leading markets. Offerings remain light. Local arrivals, 11 cars.

Cash corn was weak and 1@3c lower early with futures, but rallied with the latter, and some sales were made at unchanged prices, with the finish averaging 1@2c lower. St. Louis was 2@3c lower, Kansas City unchanged to 2c lower, Peoria 1@2c lower, and Peoria 5c lower.

Cash oats were 1@2c lower at Chicago. Standards sold at 1@1¼c over May early, with a few selected cars at high figures, but at the last ¾c over May was paid, cash handlers refusing to follow the upturn in futures. St. Louis was ½@1½c lower, Kansas City unchanged, and Milwaukee 1½@1¾c lower. Cash grain prices in leading markets follow:

INSURANCE NEWS IN ALL BRANCHES EAST AND WEST

Term Plan for Farmers' Cars Takes Effect on Tuesday.

BY THOMAS R. WEDDELL.

The new rates, rules, and forms for writing farmers' cars on the term plan are to take effect April 1. The plan is limited to farmers living upon and operating farms, the insured automobile to be domiciled on farm property. It is not permissible to transfer the coverage to any location other than farm property. It is to be issued only for a term of three years, with provision for automatic diminishment at the rate of 3 per cent per month for the first twenty-four months, and 1⅓ per cent per month for the remaining period of the contract. The commission is limited to 20 per cent. The rate for new cars is $2.50 for the fire and lightning hazard; $1.50 for the theft hazard, and 50 cents for the tornado risk, with a combined rate of $4.50. For automobiles one year old and not over two years old add 50 cents to the rate, and for automobiles two years and older add $1 to the rate. Farmers' cars are to be written on the cash plan only, with no notes for premiums.

STRIKE INSURANCE.

A mutual company has been organized in the east to issue strike insurance policies. Its rates are based upon data covering the last thirty years, the basis rates being calculated for the principal industries, with variations, according to conditions in different localities. The policy will cover monetary loss sustained by an employer because of strikes, including the amount of the annual fixed charges during the period of complete or partial idleness, the pro rata of net profits sacrificed during the period, and the legal expense to the employers, if any, arising out of the strike.

LIFE UNDERWRITERS MEET.

The officers and executive committee of the National Association of Life Underwriters held their mid-year meeting yesterday at the Hotel La Salle. Reports were received of association conditions in the various sections of the country, and President J. K. Voshell of Baltimore made a plea for cooperation in his increased membership campaign. The visitors were the guests of the Chicago Life Underwriters' association at a dinner in the evening.

INSURANCE NOTES.

George Chappell, general manager of the Royal, arrived in New York yesterday, and the appointment of a successor to C. F. Shallcross as eastern manager and United States attorney is expected soon.

Cory, Moorhouse & Co. have been given the Chicago general agency for the Republic Casualty.

Frederick Richardson, United States manager of the General Accident, sailed for Europe yesetrday. It is reported that the company may enter the surety line.

The Insurance World chart, covering fire, casualty and miscellaneous insurance companies, is the first to make its appearance for 1919.

TALK OF THE STREET

The annual report of the United States Steel corporation will be made public on Monday, and according to forecasts the surplus will be close to $500,000,000. There is reason to believe this is a small overstatement, but it will give the shareholders an opportunity to see how near the surplus account is to the market price of the shares.

Sentiment at the close continued to be encouraging for further bullish activity in the industrial specialties, particularly the food, oil, leather, and motor groups. John N. Willys' announcement, in which he declared the outlook for automobiles and farm tractors was never brighter, had some influence on the motor issues, which were higher.

The street has again taken a bullish attitude toward the oil stocks. The Sinclair issues have been taken up by insiders, and little difficulty has been experienced in advancing the price. Sinclair Gulf has for some days been a leader on the New York curb and yesterday advanced to 47½, a quotation that passed Sinclair Oil.

It was thought at the opening yesterday that United States Steel common would continue to mount. As it did not do so, traders began selling and succeeded in cutting the price to 98⅝, a decline of 1⅛ points from the previous close. Meanwhile there were rumors from Washington that the department of justice would soon dismiss the trust suits against the Steel corporation and the Corn Products company. These suits are now before the United States Supreme court.

The street professes a lively interest in the United States Food Products corporation, formerly the Distillers' Securities corporation. The concern is to be regarded as a food products affair, a change of business which is expected to enlist the interest of an entirely new set of investors.

The announcement by the New Jersey Zinc company of a new price schedule which ranges from 1 to 2½ cents a pound below present prices for zinc oxide is interpreted as a forerunner of a fresh impetus for building operations throughout the country.

Free Booklet

Behind every investment there should be adequate security. In a pure investment the security represents a definite property value. In order to get security, however, the investor must always give up participation in the earnings and the increased value of the property which constitutes this security back of the investment.

This Book Deals with the Highest Form of Investment —Security Plus Ownership

In the Waterbury investment are united the two great principles of wise investment—Security and Ownership. These principles are thoroughly explained in this little booklet which has been written with great care for the purpose of making clear to prospective investors the exact status of the Waterbury investment as to security and participation in profits and the increased value of the property constituting the security.

The Waterbury investment is one which we have carefully consummated step by step. By the Waterbury principle you and 999 others may acquire a protected interest in an organization which should pay you in a very few years an annual return as great as would be the annual return on an investment of $50,000 at current interest rates.

This Booklet Is Absolutely Free to You and Will Expain What We Have Called Our "Endowment Plan" in Detail.

NEW YORK BANKS SHOW DECREASE IN LOANS MADE

Treasury Department Balances and Surplus Also Lose.

New York banks in the last week showed another large contraction in loans, $47,519,000. The treasury department at the same time reduced its balances by $33,122,000, so that there was some reason for the temporary 7 per cent rate for call funds, which the money market experienced in the latter part of the week. The total loan item at $4,817,000,000 compares wtih deposits of $4,087,000,000, so that the credit extended exceeds the deposits by $730,417,000, a difference that is made up in the capital of the banks.

Reserve Is Decreased.

The surplus reserve, as the result of a loss of $15,067,000 in cash, decreased $14,358,980. The item now stands at $29,307,560, a rather low level. The figures follow:

Bills Discounted Decrease.

In the Chicago federal reserve bank district the weekly figures show a decrease of $1,340,950 in bills discounted for member institutions. Apparently the banks outside of Chicago have been reducing their loans at the reserve institutions since Chicago banks in the last week made a material increse. The bank reduced by $8,038,970 its bills bought in the open market, but rediscounts for federal reserve bank increased $7,554,000, so that the net changes averaged nearly even.

The treasury department drew out most of its deposits, according to the published figures. Only $918,231 remains, the withdrawals in the week having reached $42,218,671. Federal reserve notes showed a decrease of $1,387,080. So far as the figures indicate the banks in the disrict appear to be in favorable condition for meeting Victory Liberty loan requirements.

Brokers' Loans Increase.

An outstanding feature in the eastern securities situation continues to be the small increase in brokers' loans in the face of a bull market.

Inquiry among a number of leading stock exchange houses shows that there has been practically no expansion in brokers' loans since the lifting of restrictions by the money committee on Jan. 25. A majority of the houses interrogated showed no change from the January figures. A few showed a slight increase, while the largest gain by any one was 5 per cent.

The fact of increasing activity on the buying side of the exchange without an increase in loans means purchases for cash. There is good reason to believe that the suggestion made a short time ago that foreign financial interests were buying securities in the New York market was well founded.

SHARP REACTION IN MARKET ON PROFIT TAKING

Corn Products Advances to the Highest Figure Yet Reached.

The New York Times.

New York, March 29.—[Special.]—Many traders sought to convert paper profits into cash in today's short session of the stock market and as they tried to do most of it in the last half hour prices left off in the midst of a fairly sharp reaction.

Previous to the increase of realizing sales there had been evidenced an active demand, resulting in the establishment of several new high records for the current movement. Corn Products was worthy of special mention in this respect because its advance reached a figure never touched before. Viewing the business of the week, it was not surprising that considerable selling occurred at the end.

After a short period of wabbling during the first two days the market moved forward with a fair amount of vigor until Friday, when prices of various issues gained in a spurt. A quick rise is frequently followed by a quick reaction, and yesterday's dealings followed precedent. The character of trading indicated the presence of professional participants who were able to record good profits for the week.

Sentiment Is Confused.

Sentiment in regard to securities appeared much confused, that is, confused over prospects for the immediate future. Emphasis has been laid in recent days on the probability that bank loans for stock market purposes would show, if a thorough canvas were made, little increase during the last two months.

This expectation is based on data acquired from a number of banks, and also, it must be said, on general comment in banking circles. If loans have not been increased to any great extent it would seem as though prices have been lifted chiefly by the in and out trading of professionals, comparatively little stock being taken and financed for the "long pull." No account is made in this, however, of the possibility of extensive purchases for cash nor of speculative commitments, which are so heavily margined as to relieve brokers of recourse to the loan market on the scale of other periods.

Observers of the market who feel that the professionals have supplied most of the business of late naturally have doubts of the permanence of the upward movement. Their skepticism so far has had little weight in commission houses, however, for the fact that the market was continually forward looking has overshadowed all suppositions of an adverse order.

Domestic Influences Felt.

Domestic influences have been most influential in shaping the course of quotations, but it would be strange if foreign events could proceed much further without reflection in securities. Yesterday's news of additional subjects to cause difference at the peace conference received attention in the street, together with evidnce of incrased unsettlement in Germany. The relative indifference of the market to developments overseas has seemed to be the result, in part, of the feeling that greater progress has been made on the peace treaty and the league of nations than the cables have told about.

CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

Trading on the local stock exchange disclosed considerable profit taking in Swift International, though at the opening the buying was heavy and the price rose 2½ points to 65. The last quotation was at 62½. There is no reason as yet to believe that the packing house interests have parted with any considerable amount of their heavy purchases. The packers began early and the fact of holding the shares purchased has enabled the market to rise to its present height.

Swift & Co. shares on a moderate volume of trade rose quickly to 142, a gain of 5 points from the previous day. Libby-McNeil showed but a fractional rise. Wilson & Co. appeared to follow the general trend and advanced to 85, a gain of 1⅝ points.

There was again small buying in Connecting Railways preferred, advancing the price 1⅛ points to 9¼. This compares with 6¾ a few days ago. Union Carbide, after advancing fractionally, sold off, closing at 65⅝. Stewart-Warner was up on small buying, while there was a fair business in Booth Fisheries common, resulting in a fractional advance.

OF ACCOUNTS SOLD US BY ONE CONCERN IN ONE YEAR

Your profit is in your turnover, and reduction of overhead—not in carrying Accounts.

The above concern uses our service to care for its excess wants during its two heavy seasons—Spring and Fall. During a part of the Summer and Winter it did not have a dollar of our money.

Without this extra resource its creditors would have had to wait for their money until the debtors paid their Accounts—or the concern would have had to run the risk of straining its credit in order to handle the volume which it did.

By exchanging its Open Account Assets for Cash, it kept its indebtedness down by discounting its purchase bills, or buying for cash—and owed no more money than usual. In addition to the extra selling profits on its increased volume, it made its discounts—TWO EXTRA PROFITS.

WOULD YOUR CREDITORS PREFER THAT YOU SELL YOUR ACCOUNTS AND IMMEDIATELY PAY THEM, OR KEEP YOUR ACCOUNTS AND NOT PAY THEM UNTIL YOUR CUSTOMERS PAY YOU—SOME DAY?

Have Some Backbone

The volume of building business now held back by petty fears will become an avalanche when it is loosed, as it soon must be.

In the rush, some men will get their buildings and some will not. The underbuilt conditions cannot be filled overnight.

If you have confidence in this country, and some of the backbone that made the country what it is, you will start now on your plans for needed improvements, and begin to build as soon as the plans are drawn.

Dear Sir:

In accordance with your request, we have made a very careful test of the Shine'Off with the result that we were able to remove all shine from a number of pieces of hard worsted and blue serge on which we tried it. We were able to remove all evidence of a scorch from a piece of white serge and in using it for removing spots on a number of different kinds of materials, we found it worked very successfully.

The satisfactory results obtained by us in a number of experiments, has justified us in ordering a box of it for use in our factory.

Yours very truly,

Gentlemen:

My experience with "Shine-off" will probably be of interest to you. When I first heard of it I secured a cake and to find out just what there was to it I took a suit that had been discarded because of the shine, and removed the shine myself and then sent it to be cleaned and pressed with the result that it looked as good as new.

I then took an overcoat of very hard Scotch material that cost $90.00 and was in perfect condition, except that from the friction against the leather in automobiles, it was so shiny that it was unfit for wear and had a tailor use shine-off on it and then clean and press it. The coat came out with all the original appearance and I have worn it all winter.

Twenty-five cents worth of shine-off and about two hours work saved a suit and overcoat for a full season's wear. I certainly will always use it.

Yours truly,
J. H. Phillips

Gentlemen:

When I first used Shine-Off, I was very skeptical. But I took a three piece dress of excellent material and which I could get a great deal more wear out of but which I had discarded because it was so shiny. I could not in respect to myself wear it any longer.

I went to work on it, determined that if it was a possible thing, I would get that shine off both waist and skirt. I followed the directions given with the cake of Shine-Off and the results were astonishing. It took every bit of shine off that dress and raised the nap. When finished and pressed, it looked like new. I have used Shine-Off many times since with the same result.

I can certainly recommend Shine-Off to all my friends.

Very truly yours,
Marie R. Anderson

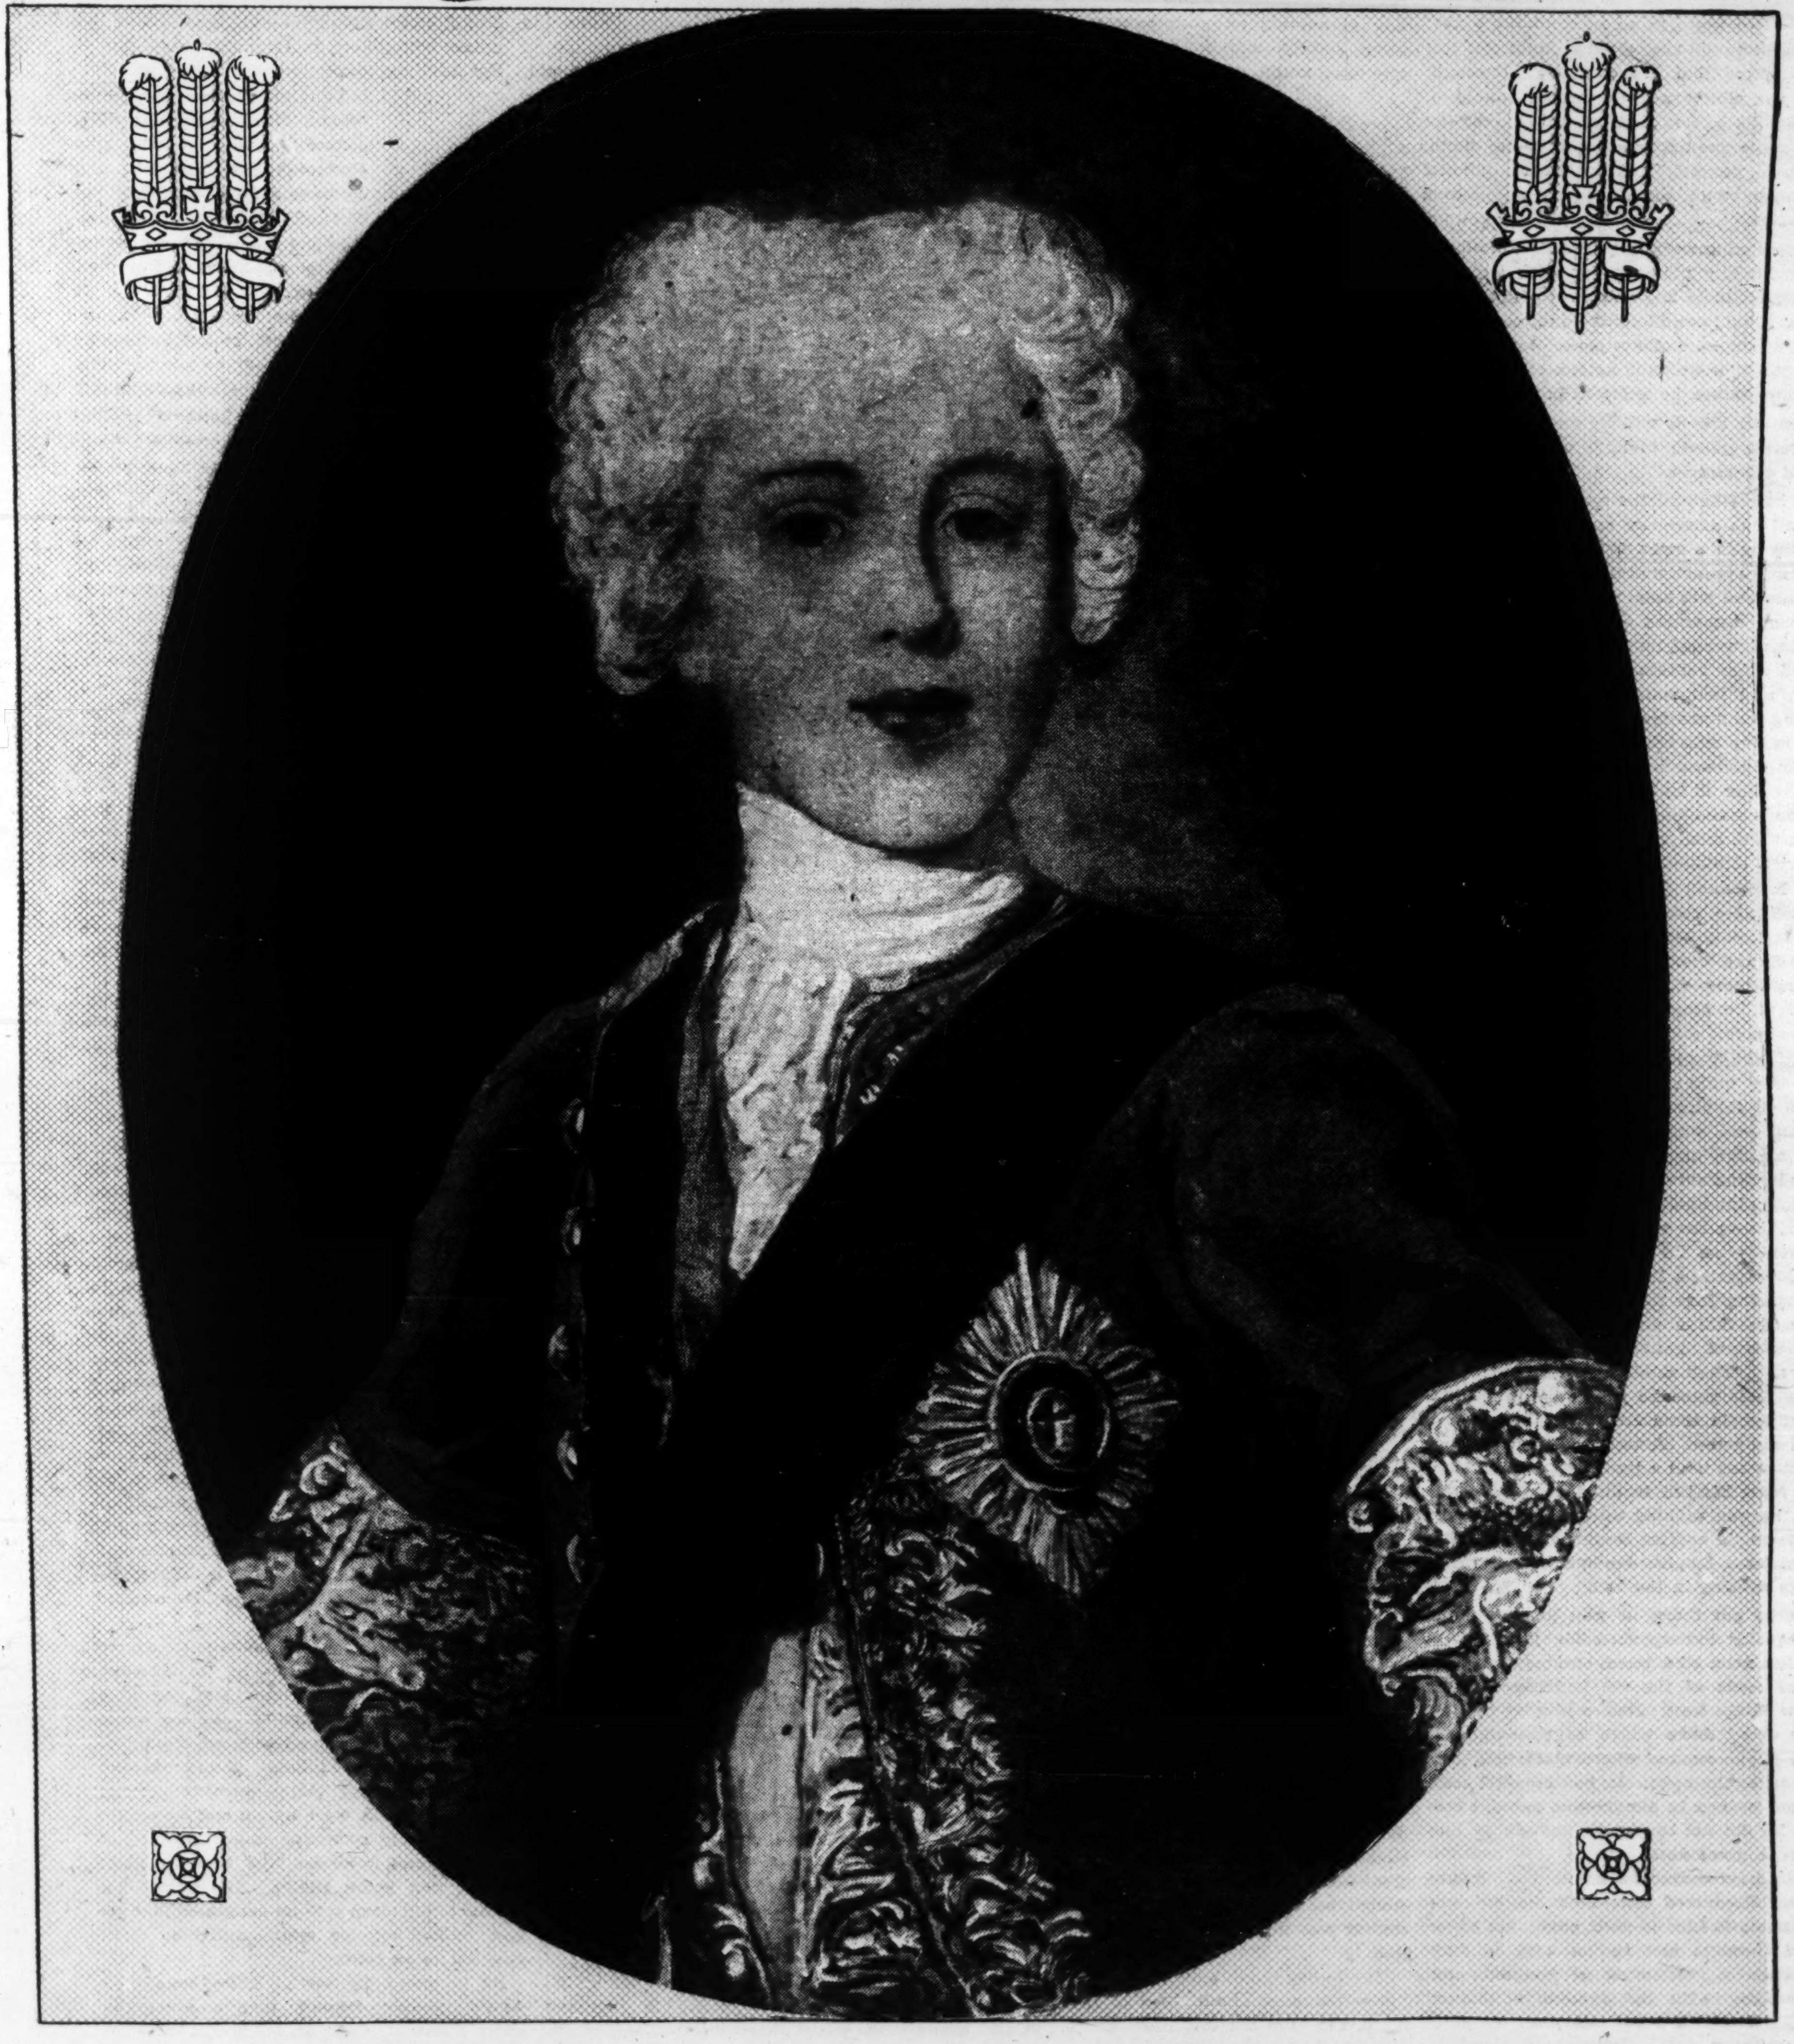
Prince Charles Edward Stuart

FROM A PAINTING BY LARGILLIERE



BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

CHARLES EDWARD LOUIS PHILIP CASIMIR STUART is known best to history under the name of the "Young Pretender" or the "Young Chevalier." He was the grandson of King James II. of England and the elder son of James, the "Old Pretender," by whom (as James III.) he was created at his birth Prince of Wales, the title he bore among the English Jacobites during his father's lifetime.

Charles Edward was born at Rome on Dec. 31, 1720. He was brought up at his father's miniature court in Rome with James Murray, Jacobite Earl of Dunbar, for his governor, and was taught by various teachers, among them the learned Chevalier Ramsay, Sir Thomas Sheridan, and the Abbé Légoux. He became quickly conversant with the English, French and Italian languages.

In 1734 he had his first taste of fighting with his cousin's troops when the Duke of Liria, later the Duke of Berwick, going to aid Don Carlos in his struggle for the crown of Naples, went through the successful siege of Gaeta. At the back of all the young prince's plans and acts during the following years was the persistent idea of regaining the crown of Scotland and England for the Stuarts. In 1744 Charles Edward was in readiness to invade Britain with a strong force of French soldiery, but a storm scattered the transport fleet. In July of the next year he sailed for Scotland and reached, practically alone, the Bay of Lochnanuagh on the west coast of Inverness-shire.

A group of the Highland chiefs rallied to the Stuart standard and for a time the Young Pretender fought a winning fight through the country. But English armies were raised to combat him and on April 16, 1746, he was decisively defeated at Culloden. From this last battlefield Charles Stuart made his way through countless trials and dangers back to France. Arriving on foreign soil, he continued his plotting, but his schemes were futile. However, he was thought so dangerous by the English that at the conclusion of the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle in October, 1748, every member of the house of Stuart, himself included, was to be expelled from the French dominions. Charles quietly disappeared.

During the following years Charles wandered about Europe in disguise, unfriended, and not playing well the part of a prince. He drank heavily, and his marriage with Princess Louise of Stolberg in 1772 was so unhappy that in 1780 she left him and entered a convent. Charles, left alone, summoned Charlotte Stuart, the child of Clementina Walkinshaw and his illegitimate daughter, to him. She was created Duchess of Albany and declared legitimate, and nursed him till his death in 1788.

Nicholas Largilliere, the painter of this youthful portrait, was a French artist and celebrated as a portrait painter.

The Teenie Weenies.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

THE Teenie Weenies receive a great many letters from boys and girls from all parts of the country asking the little folks to come and visit them. The Teenie Weenies are so busy each week getting ready for the Sunday paper they never have the time to visit their friends, so the Lady of Fashion suggests this plan as the next best thing.

She suggests that the boys and girls cut out the Teenie Weenie pictures on this page, paste them on cardboard, and they will then have a full set of Teenie Weenie dolls.

"It isn't because we don't want to come and visit you," the Lady of Fashion says. "We just can't; our pictures will have to visit you in our place."

"This is the way to make the dolls stand up," says the Old Soldier, who has given the matter much thought. "First you cut out each Teenie Weenie with a pair of shears. Cut along the black line around the figure and then paste it on cardboard and allow it to dry.

"When it is dry you carefully cut away the cardboard along the black line about the figure. When the Teenie Weenie picture has been pasted to the cardboard and cut out, you lay the figure on another piece of cardboard and with a pencil trace around the edge of the lower half of the figure.

"Cut this out along the line which you have traced and bend it a little about a half inch from the top. Now put a little paste on the top part which you have bent and paste it to the back of the figure from which it is traced."

The figure marked "Back of Old Soldier" will show you how the back of each Teenie Weenie doll will look when finished.

VARICK'S LADY of DREAMS

by Elizabeth Jordan

She Seemed a Good Deal More Than That to a Practical Young Man.

VARICK laid down the book with which he had beguiled an hour of the night, turned off the electric light in the shaded globe that hung above his head, pulled the sheets a little nearer his chin, reversed his pillow that he might rest his cheek more gratefully on the cooler linen, stretched, yawned, and composed himself to slumber with an absolutely untroubled conscience.

He was an eminently practical and almost rudely healthy young man, with an unreflecting belief in the existence of things he had seen, and considerable doubt concerning those which he had not seen. In his heart he regarded sentiment as the expression of a flabby nature in a feeble body.

From all this it will be seen that Varick was not a person to have unusual psychological experiences.

He had fished all the morning and played golf all the afternoon, and he had finished the day with a swim in the club pool, subsequently appearing at dinner with a showily red face and wet hair, to argue fiercely over the soup concerning the merits of a horse his cousin wanted him to buy. Then he had played a few rubbers of bridge at 5 cents a point, and had retired to his own rooms bearing some nineteen dollars in good American money reluctantly bestowed upon him by his opponents in the game.

Altogether it had been a fairly pleasant day, very much like most of the other days in his untroubled life.

Varick stretched his athletic young body luxuriously between the sheets, yawned once more, stared into the semi-darkness, heard a distant clock strike 2, and wondered mildly why he was not more sleepy. There was a dim light burning in the hall beyond his bedroom, and by its reflection, through the transom over the door, he could see quite plainly the various pieces of furniture around him—his dressing case, with its array of silver toilet articles, the solid front of his chiffonier, the carved arms of his favorite lounging chair, even the etchings and prints on the walls.

Suddenly, as he looked at these familiar objects, a light haze fell over them, giving him for an instant the impression that a gauze curtain had been dropped between them and his eyes. They slowly melted away, and in their place he saw the streets of a tiny village in some foreign country which he did not know. A moment later, in what seemed at the time a perfectly natural transition from his bed in an Adirondack clubhouse, he was walking up the streets of the little town, in correct tourist attire, looking in vain for a familiar landmark, and with a strange sinking in the heart.

How he got there, or why he was there, was equally incomprehensible to him. It was high noon of a warm summer day, and the red roofs of the old buildings seemed to glow in the heat. Before him, at the end of the street down which he was walking, was a public square where marketing was going on in the open. It was crowded with men and women in picturesque peasant costumes he did not recognize, though he had traveled a great deal.

As he drew nearer he heard them speaking, but discovered that their tongue was as unknown to him as their garb. He knew French, German, and Italian well; he had, in addition, a smattering of Spanish, and was familiar with the accents of Slavic tongues. But this babel that met his ears was something new. Taken in connection with the rest of the experience, the discovery sent a cold chill down the spinal column of Mr. Lawrence Varick. For the first time in his debonair life he was afraid, and admitted it inwardly, with a sudden whitening of the lips.

"It's so infernally queer," he told himself, uneasily. "If I could remember how I got here, or if I knew anything about the place——"

"Have you classified them?" asked a voice at his elbow. It was feminine, contralto, and exquisitely modulated. The words were English, but spoken with a slight foreign accent. With a leap of the heart Varick turned and looked at the speaker.

She was young, he saw at once—22, 23, possibly 24. He inclined to the last theory as he observed her perfect poise and self-possession. She was exquisitely dressed; he realized that despite the dimness of masculine perception on such points, and, much more clearly, saw that she was beautiful. She was small, and the eyes she raised to his were large and deeply brown, with long black lashes that matched in color the wavy hair under her coquettish hat. As he stared at her, with surprise, relief, and admiration struggling in his boyishly handsome face, she smiled, and in that instant the phlegmatic young man experienced a new sensation. His own white teeth flashed as he smiled back at her. Then he remembered that it was necessary to reply to her question.

"I—I—beg your pardon," he stammered, "a—a thousand times. But to tell you the truth, I'm—I'm horribly confused this morning. I—I don't seem, somehow, to place myself yet. And I can't understand what these people say. So, when you spoke English it was such a relief——"

He stopped suddenly and turned a rich crimson. It had occurred to him that this incoherent statement was not quite the one to win interest and admiration from a strange and exceedingly attractive woman. What would she think of him? Perhaps that he was intoxicated, or insane. Varick's imagination, never lively, distinguished itself during the next few seconds by the stirring possibilities it presented to his mind. He grew redder, which was unfortunate, and shuffled miserably from one foot to the other, until he noticed that she was looking at him with a glance that was entirely dignified yet very friendly. It had an oddly sympathetic quality in it as well. His spirits rose a trifle.

"You must think me an awful duffer," he murmured, contritely. "I'm not always like this, I assure you."

"I know," she assented. "I understand. Walk on with me. Possibly I may be able to help you."

He bowed assent, and the two walked toward the crowded square.

"You're awfully good," he said, feeling reassured, yet still boyish and embarrassed. "I don't want to be a nuisance, but, if you'll just put me right, somehow—start me on a path that will lead me home——"

The entire idiocy of this struck him. He stopped again, then burst into his contagious youthful laughter, in which she instantly joined. The mellow contralto and the clear tenor formed a soft and pleasant duet, but Varick noticed that not a head in the crowd around them turned their way, nor did an eye of all the peasant throng give them a glance. He spoke of this to his companion as they continued their walk.

"The most surprising thing to me in all this—unusualness," he said, "is the cool manner in which these beggars ignore us. You know how such people gape, usually; but not a soul among all these people seems to know we're here."

She looked at him with a gentle amusement and sympathy in her brown eyes.

"That is not surprising," she said quietly. "For, you know, we are not here—really."

Varick stopped for the second time and stared at her, with a repetition of that new and annoying sinking in the region of his heart. Her words were certainly disconcerting, but she herself was delightfully human and most reassuringly natural. She had walked on, and he tried to fall into her mood as he overtook her.

"Where are we, then?" he asked, with a short and not especially mirthful laugh.

Her smooth brow wrinkled for a moment.

"I don't know," she said, frankly. "That is, I do not know this place, where we think we are, though I have been here before, and the experience does not frighten me now. But I know where we really are. You are asleep somewhere in America, and I—but, O, my dear, my dear, you're going to wake!"

That clock that was somewhere struck three. Varick, sitting up in his bed with eyes staring into the darkness, saw again his familiar room, the dim light, the silver, the dressing case, the pictures. He sprang to the door opening into the hall and tried it. It was bolted, as he had left it. So was the other door leading into his sitting room. The darkness all around him still seemed full of the words he had just heard—where?

"O, my dear, my dear, you're going to wake!" And her eyes—her smile——

Varick got into bed again, in a somewhat dazed condition, with a tremor running through him. Very slowly he straightened himself out, very slowly he pulled up the bedclothes. Then he swore solemnly into the obscurity of the room.

"Well, of — all — the — dreams!" he commented, helplessly.

As the months passed, after Varick got back to town and into the whirl of city life, he recalled his dream, frequently at first, then more rarely, and finally not at all. It was almost a year later when, one night, lying half awake, he saw again the fine, transparent, screenlike veil enshroud the objects in his bedroom.

It was winter, and a great log was burning in the large fireplace. He had tried to choke the flames with ashes before he went to bed, but the wood had blazed up again and he had lain quiet, awaiting slumber and blinking indifferently at the light. His bedroom overlooked Fifth avenue. There was a large clubhouse just opposite his house, and cabs and carriages still came and went. Varick heard the slam of carriage doors, the click of horses' hoofs on the wet asphalt, and congratulated himself on the common sense which had inspired him to go to bed at 11 instead of joining the festive throng across the street.

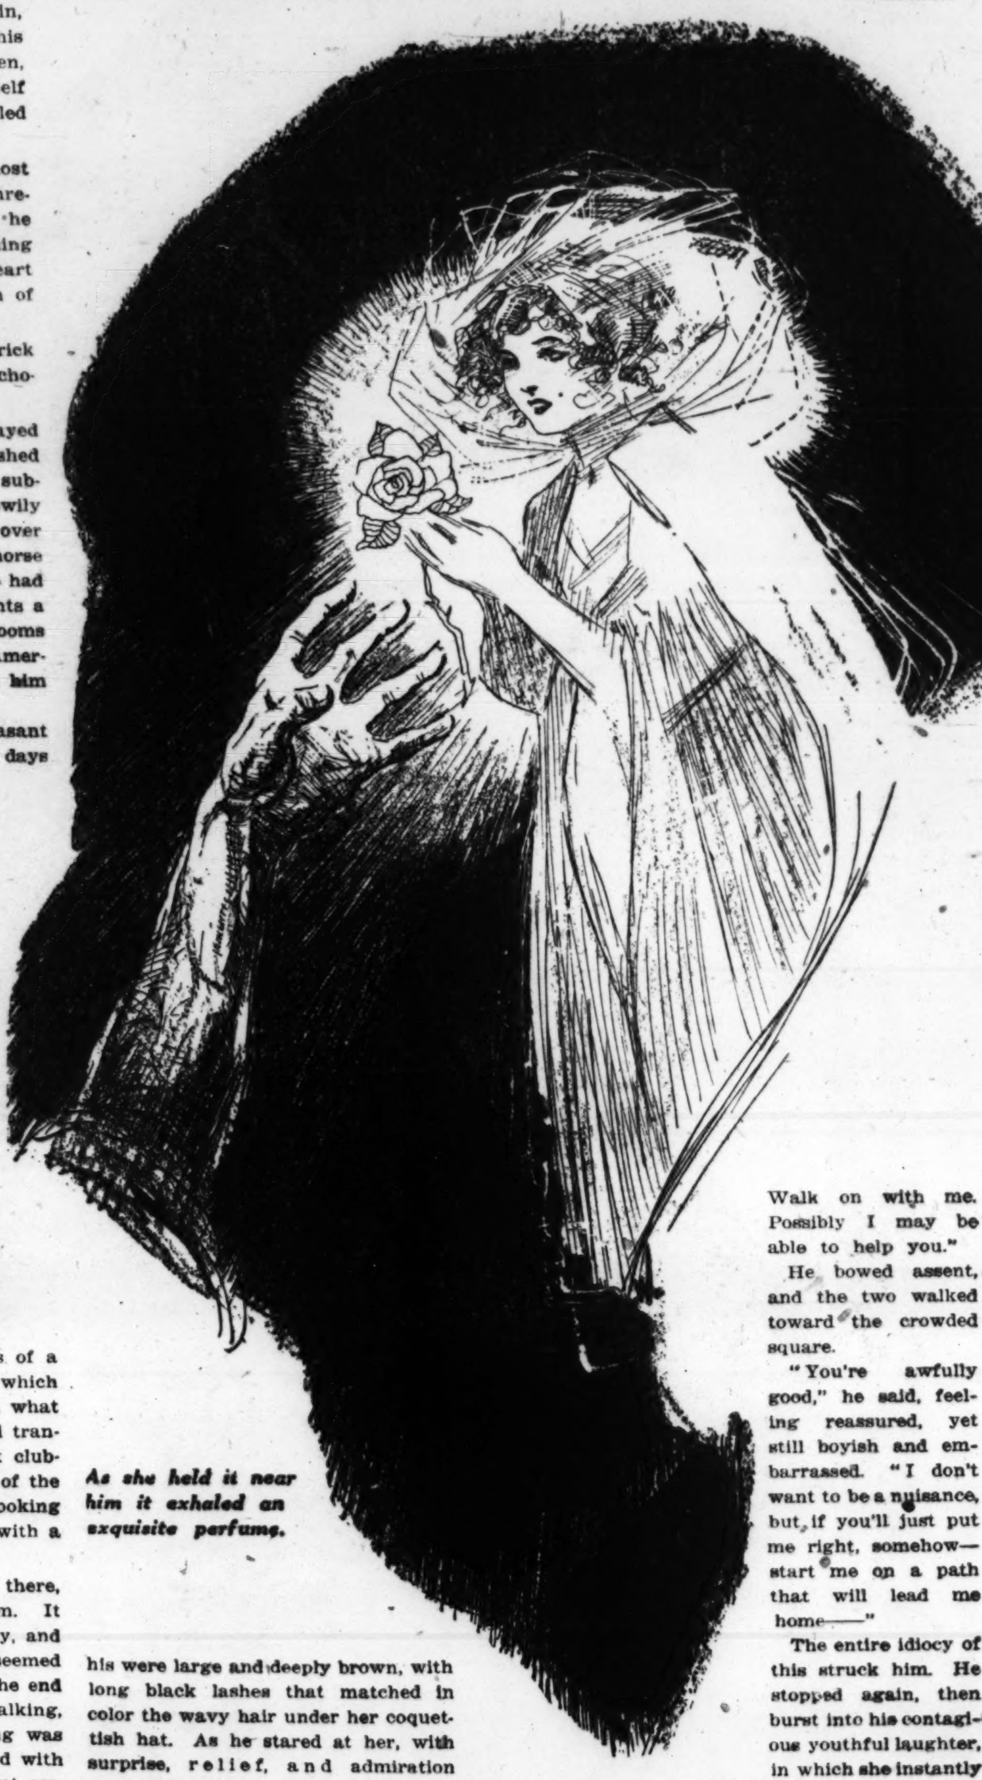
He had dutifully spent the morning in his father's offices, and then, with a waning sense of virtue, had run out of town for a late luncheon and a trial of hunters. Tonight he was pleasantly tired, but not drowsy. When the curtain fell before his surroundings, and he saw them melting imperceptibly into others quite foreign to them, he at once recalled the similar experience of the year before. With a little quickening of his steady heartbeats, he awaited developments.

Yes, here was the old town, with its red roofs, its quaint architecture, its crowded, narrow, picturesque streets. But this time they seemed almost deserted, and the whole effect of the pleace was bleak and drear. The leaves had dropped from the trees, the flowers had faded, the vines that covered the cottage walls were brown and bare. He was pleasantly conscious of the warmth of a sable lined coat he had brought from Russia two years before. He thrust his gloved hands deep into its capacious pockets and walked on, his eyes turning to right and left as he went.

At intervals he saw a bulky masculine figure, queerly dressed, turn a corner or enter a house. Once or twice one came his way and passed him, but no one looked at him or spoke. For a moment Varick was tempted to knock at one of the inhospitably closed doors and ask for information and direction, but something—he did not know what—restrained him.

When she appeared it was as suddenly as she had come before, with no warning, no approach. She was at his elbow—a bewitching thing of furs and feminine beauty, French millinery, and cordiality. She held out her small hand with a fine camaraderie.

"Is it not nice?" she asked at once. "I was afraid I should arrive first and have to wait alone. I would not have liked that."



As she held it near him it exhaled an exquisite perfume.

— ONE of THREE —

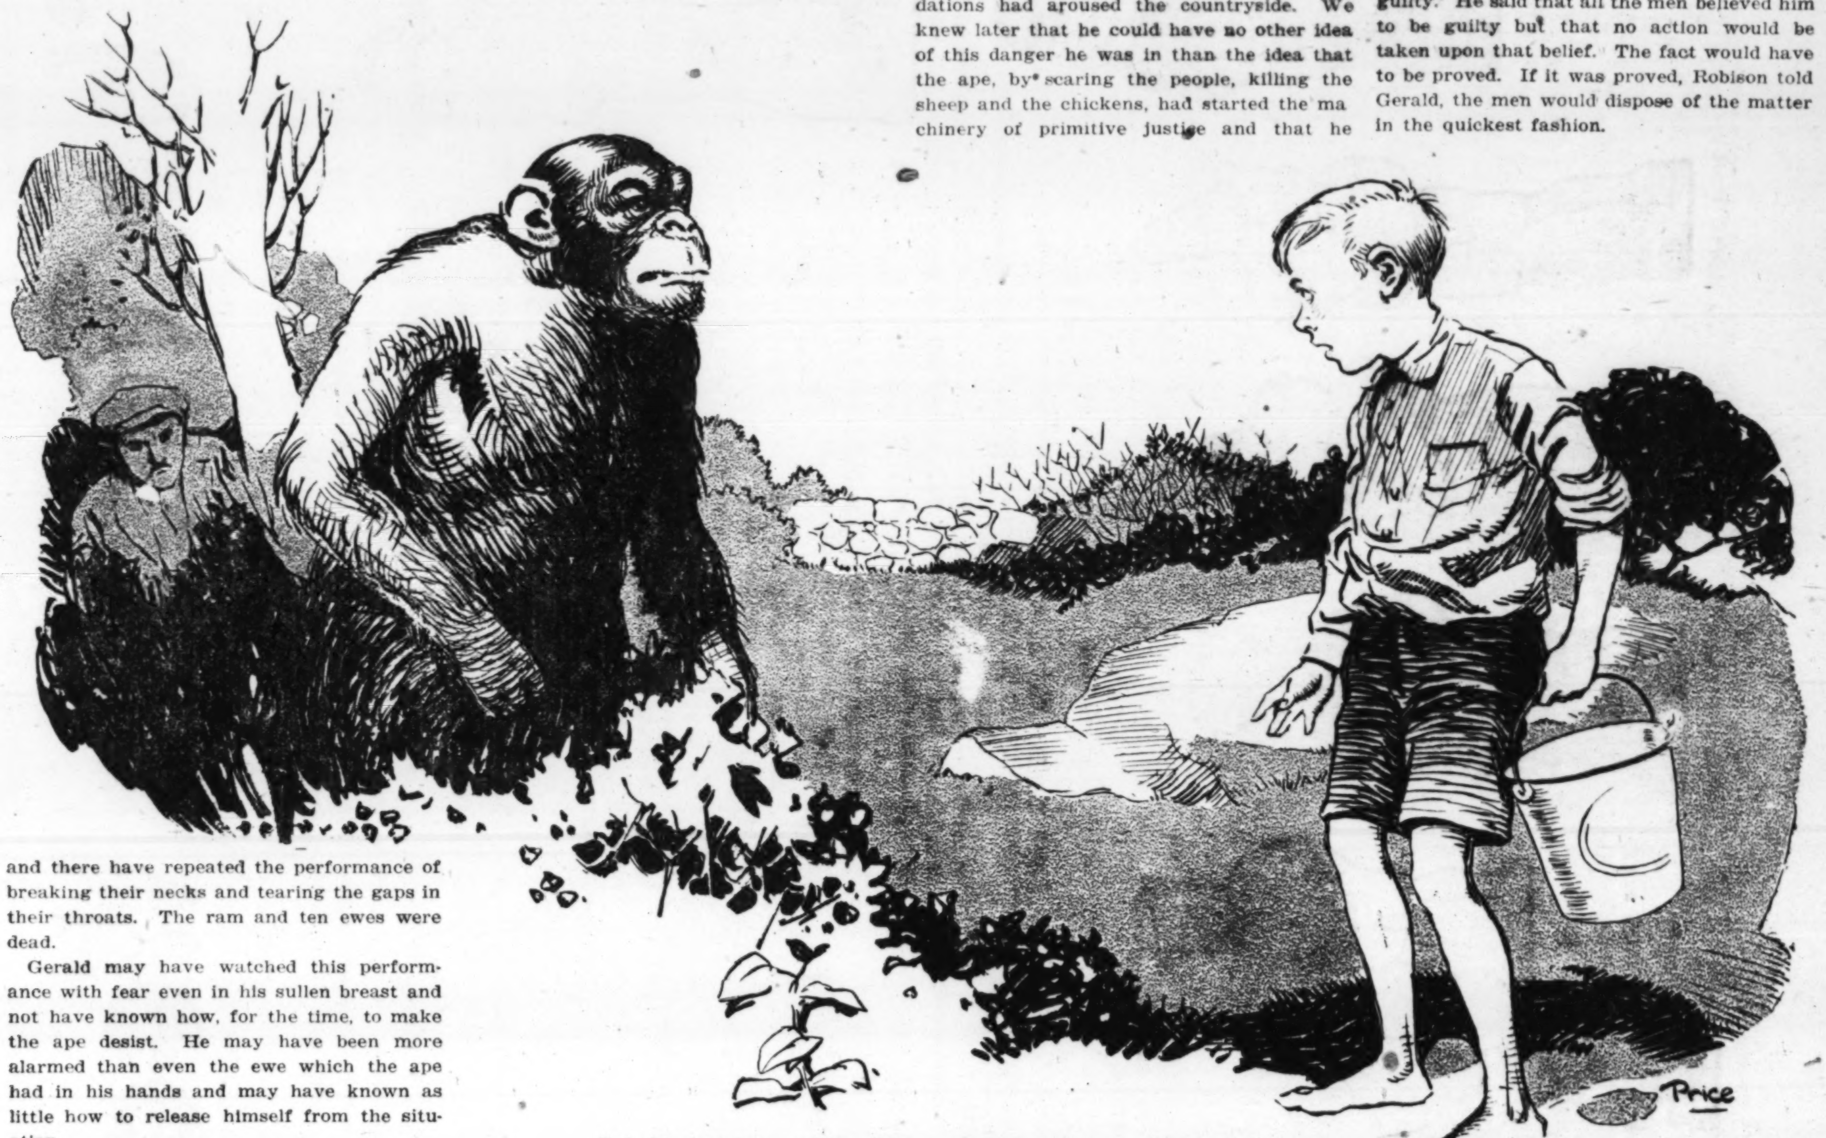
by Clifford Raymond

with every muscle alert and all his precautions alive to meet this woolly belligerent which threatened him.

He probably had evaded a rush or two and then had caught the unfortunate ram in his great hands. He had broken his neck, probably by grasping the animal by the nose and by holding it back of the neck; by exerting his great strength, with the courageous animal helpless in his grasp, and by bending the head back slowly but irresistibly. The vertebrae at the neck were broken. The ram was dead.

Then evidently the ape had gone crazy with the success of his encounter. The wound in the ram's neck indicated that the ape in a frenzy had torn into it with his teeth and had ripped the wound wider by pulling the torn edges of hide and flesh apart with his fingers.

After that he must have become still more maddened and have jumped over the fence into the inclosure in which the ewes were, and there have repeated the performance of breaking their necks and tearing the gaps in their throats. The ram and ten ewes were dead.



"A big monkey walking like a man started towards him."

Gerald may have watched this performance with fear even in his sullen breast and not have known how, for the time, to make the ape desist. He may have been more alarmed than even the ewe which the ape had in his hands and may have known as little how to release himself from the situation.

He could run into the thickets, but the ape was outraging the countryside, and Gerald knew that two such outrageous strangers as himself and the ape could not traverse the neighborhood without detection.

He might desert the ape, but the ape would find him. In any case, the farmers would find him. They would find the ape. Both would be identified. He must have found a way to make the ape desist from slaughter. I should like to know how he did it. I think there was a genuine affection existing between the two. If he had not made the ape cease there would have been no ewes remaining in the flock.

The farmer took his shotgun and joined Robison.

"Some one will pay for this," he said.

This group of men found Gerald and the ape three hours later. They knew they were proceeding in the right direction, and they combed every thicket, searched every barn, went carefully through every grove.

Gerald must have grown desperate. The searchers came to a farm house at which he had asked for food. He might have had it, but just as the farmer's wife hesitated, the ape, which had been hiding behind the barn, emerged, and the woman saw him. She bolted the door in alarm and set the dinner gong, a bell raised on a pole, which could be rung by a rope pulled from within, ringing violently. Gerald and the ape fled, but Gerald, in going, in futile vindictiveness, set fire to a hay rick. The ape, as if he were a part of Gerald's vindictiveness, leaped into a chicken run and wrung the necks of a dozen fine Barred Plymouth Rock hens.

The two, the man and the beast, were sullen instruments of destruction. When Robison and his men got to this farm they were joined by two more armed men, this farmer and his 19 year old son.

When this searching party, of which Robison was the controlling genius, finally closed in upon their quarry they found both the man and the beast—the man, at least, in desperation, hiding behind a straw pile. Gerald knew that the pursuit was over. It had been inevitably successful from the beginning. Flight had been inevitably hopeless, incumbered as he was by association with the perfectly outrageous animal. He must have known how hopeless it was. He must have known how at every encounter the ape made it impossible for him to escape.

Alone he might have escaped notice, but how could he with this outrageous beast doing extraordinary damage everywhere they went? He could not escape from the ape. It was fastened upon him. It had affection for him. It could travel faster than he could.

I do not believe I could imagine for our environment a stranger element of terror. Gerald had his fate fastened on him by the affection of this ape. He could not escape from him. He could not escape with him. And constantly the ape by its ferocity added to the intensity and purpose of the search by the depredations it committed.

The ape hid with Gerald for a moment as the farmers closed in upon the straw stack behind which they had seen the two disappear. It hid with Gerald for a moment. Then it came out to fight. It came out with the courage of a fighting animal. The ferocity of its approach was evident. One of the farmers who had a shotgun fired both barrels.

I was told that Gerald, who then surrendered himself, had in his face an expression of regret and compassion, as he saw the ape, which was almost feminine in its tenderness.

These two ferocious, brutal animals must have had a strange affection for each other.

Robison was naturally the leader of the party. He had perception and sentiment, both concealed under the casualness of his ordinary demeanor and conversation. He told me that there had been no idea in his head except one of killing Gerald the moment he was caught, until the ape had come out to fight for Gerald and until he had seen Gerald look at the ape.

There was something in this outrageous phenomenon of sentiment which stopped Robison's purpose. I can't imagine anything more exotic to our emotions, to the emotions of our countryside. We know how people die and we know they do die. We know how to give great funeral dinners, how to bury the dead and how to take the chairs back to the neighbors. But that dead ape, full of buckshot, and the look in Gerald's face, as he came to the end of the road, changed Robison's purpose.

"Get a rope," said one of the men.

"Just a minute," said Robison. "This is Mrs. Browning's brother. We think he's done something, but we don't know. We ain't going to do anything to him until we know. He's going back to Quatuck—safely."

The farmers got mattocks and spades from the nearby farmhouse and buried the ape. Robison said, in telling it to me, that Gerald, closely guarded, watched them with that curious expression of regret which he had shown when he came out after the death of the ape and had seen the body of the animal slain in its endeavor to protect him.

The ape had made his trouble. Its depredations had aroused the countryside. We knew later that he could have no other idea of this danger he was in than the idea that the ape, by scaring the people, killing the sheep and the chickens, had started the machinery of primitive justice and that he would be held responsible to the farmers.

I doubt, from what Robison told me, that Gerald appreciated the real danger of his position. We knew later that he, being attached sentimentally to the ape—a strange attachment which had arisen between the two brutes—and meaning to leave the circus, had opened the gate of the ape's cage without taking consequences into consideration.

It was a part of his irresponsible egotism. He wanted a thing or he wanted to do a thing and if he could he did it or got it, without any perception of what the consequences might be. He wanted to open the door of the ape's cage and he had done so. Later he found that the ape was attached to him and that the two were an outrageous pair of beasts, with the countryside alarmed and hunting for them.

I think his original idea must have been to return to the Brownings. The circus was so near Quatuck and he knew how he could impose himself upon Hope and how he could terrify her and how he could get money from her. Then he acted upon impulse—it may have been an impulse of kindness.

He had gone to see the ape before he went and the beast had made such demonstrations that he did not want to leave it behind him. He opened its cage and made his disaster.

Gradually, Robison said, Gerald began to sense the real seriousness of his situation. The ape was buried, but the farmers were not appeased. The other two groups had been called in and Gerald was surrounded by men who had business with him which he did not understand—or seemed not to understand—Robison said.

Robison had been affected and he was determined that there should not be an act of violence at the first tree limb which hung out over the road. Inasmuch as he was the organizer of the search, he maintained a control over the men and they obeyed him. He merely asserted himself dominantly and they did what he told them to do.

Gerald, as they took him back towards the Brownings', began to have a feeling, apparent and indicated, of his own personal insecurity and to know that it had nothing to do with the depredations which the ape had committed.

Robison told him what the charge was against him. He said, with much earnestness but in great terror, that he had not seen Hope and that he had not been guilty of the attack upon her.

Robison said that the decision was with Hope—that she would know who had been guilty and he promised Gerald that no harm would come to him until he had been proved guilty. He said that all the men believed him to be guilty but that no action would be taken upon that belief. The fact would have to be proved. If it was proved, Robison told Gerald, the men would dispose of the matter in the quickest fashion.

"We don't know whether it was you or not," Robison told him. "Mrs. Browning does know and she'll say. Possibly she won't. But nothing will be done until she does."

They had walked three miles, with Gerald in the center of the group, when they came to a small town and got automobiles. Then they went on to Quatuck rapidly.

It was growing dark and they wanted to dispose of the matter as rapidly as possible.

When they were within a half mile of the Browninge they came upon Richard. The car in which Gerald was being taken had passed on. Robison was in the car which came along just as Richard, who had been searching all this time, climbed a fence and came out into the roadway.

They stopped to pick him up, and Robison said that Richard looked extraordinarily upset, unsettled, and wild.

This was not remarkable, he thought, considering what the man had been through. When Richard learned that the searchers had been successful and had taken Gerald he became almost incoherent in his anger, Robison said.

This also was not extraordinary, Robison thought, but it did attract the attention of the people who saw it. He thought they would have trouble with Richard when Richard and Gerald were brought together.

In this fashion the secret of Quatuck was brought to its disclosure. The ape was dead. Gerald was being taken to the Brownings by a group of men who intended to lynch him.

[Copyright: 1919: By Clifford Raymond.]

He held her hand close, looking down at her from his great height, his gray eyes shining into hers.

"Then you knew—you were coming?" he asked slowly.

"Not until the moment before I came. But when I saw the curtain fall——"

"You saw that, too? A thin, gauzy thing, like a transparency?"

"Yes."

He relapsed into silence for a moment, as he unconsciously adapted his stride to hers, and they walked on together as naturally as if it were an everyday occurrence.

"What do you make of it all?" he at length asked.

She shrugged her shoulders with a little foreign gesture which seemed to him, even then, very characteristic.

"I do not know. It frightened me—a little—at first. Now it does not, for it always ends and I awake—at home."

"Where is that?"

She hesitated.

"I may not tell you," she said slowly. "I do not quite know why, but I may not. Possibly you may know some time. You, I think, are an American."

He stared at her, his smooth face taking on a strangely solemn expression.

"You mean to say," he persisted, "that this is all a dream—that you and I, instead of being here, are really asleep somewhere, on different continents."

She nodded.

"We are asleep," she said, "on different continents, as you say. Whether we are dreaming or whether our two souls are taking a little excursion through space—O, who shall say? Who can question the wonderful things which happen in this most wonderful world? I have ceased to question, but I have also ceased to fear."

He made no reply. Somewhere, in the back of his head, lay fear—a very definite, paralyzing fear—that something was wrong with him or with her or with them both. Instead of being in the natural borderland of dreams, had he not perhaps passed the tragic line dividing the normal mind from the insane? She seemed to read his thoughts, and her manner became more gentle, almost tender.

"Is it so very dreadful?" she asked softly. "We are together, you know, my friend. Would it not be worse to wander about alone?"

With a great effort he pulled himself together.

"Infinitely," he said, with gratifying conviction. "And you're—you're a trump, you know. If you'll bear with me I'll try from now on to be more like a man and less like a fretful ghost."

She clapped her hands.

"Capital!" she cried. "I knew you would—what is the word?—O, yes—adapt yourself. And it is only for a little while. You will wake very soon. But you ought to enjoy it while it lasts. There are many amusing things about it all."

Varick reflected grimly that it was the "amusing things" which occasioned his perturbation, but he kept his reflection to himself and smiled down at her sunnily.

"For example," she continued, "as we really do not exist here, and as we are not visible to these people, we cannot do anything that will affect them in any way or attract their attention. Look at that!"

They were passing a small house whose front door, opening on the street, stood ajar. Within they could see a stout woman standing at a tub and washing busily, and a little girl pouring hot water from a quaint kettle into a large pan full of soiled blue dishes. The pan stood near the edge of a wooden table, and the little girl was perched on a stool just high enough to bring her on a level with her work.

"You are, I am sure, a fine athlete," murmured the woman. "Or else your looks belie you," she added, with a roguish upward glance. "Yet with all your strength you cannot push that pan of dishes off the table."

Without a word, Varick passed through the doorway, strode into the house, and up to the table. She followed him closely. He attempted to seize the pan in his powerful hands—and, to his horror, discovered that they hold nothing. The pan remained on the table and the child was now unconcernedly washing the blue dishes, humming a little folk-song as she worked. As if to add to the irony of the situation, the small laborer quietly lifted the pan and moved it to a position she thought more convenient. This was the last touch. With a stifled murmur of intense exasperation Varick put forth all his strength in a supreme effort. The pan fell, the water and broken blue dishes covering the floor. He sprang back and stood aghast, gazing at the havoc he had wrought.

"O, dear! O, dear!" murmured the voice at his side, "I never dreamed you could do it, or I would not have suggested it. O, O, the poor little darling!"

For the stout woman at the tub had hastily dropped her work, crossed the room, and was soundly chastising the unhappy infant who she supposed was responsible for the mischief. Varick caught her arm.

"O, I say," he cried, "this won't do at all! She didn't do it; it was all my fault. I'll pay for the things—Here—here——"

He fumbled in his pockets as he spoke and pulled out several gold pieces. But the fat arm of the old woman offered no resistance to his grasp, and the gold pieces did not exist for her. It was evident that she saw neither him nor them, nor the woman with him. With an unsparing hand she spanked the child, whose voice rose in shrill lamentations. Varick and his companion in guilt crept out of the room with a sense of great helplessness upon them, and he breathed a long breath of relief at finding himself—in bed, with a cold February sun shining in through his windows, and the faithful Parker at his side with the quieting announcement that his bath was ready.

One of Varick's boon companions in camp and hunting excursions was a distinguished New York specialist in nervous diseases. A day or two later Varick found it convenient to drop into this man's office and, quite casually, tell him the story of his dreams, giving it various light touches that he fondly imagined concealed the anxiety that lay beneath the recital. "Recurrent dreams," he then learned, were a very common human experience and not deserving of much attention.

"Don't think about it," said his friend. "Of course, if you worry about it, you'll be dreaming it all the time. Send this 'personally conducted tour' to me if you don't like it. I don't mind meeting pretty women who are 'dreams,' whether in the flesh or out of it."

As time went on and the dream did not return, Varick decided that he would not mind, either. He thought of her a great deal; he even longed for her. Eventually he deliberately tried to induce the dream by going to bed early, putting himself in the proper mental attitude, as he conceived it, and staring wide-eyed into his dimly lighted room. But only once in eighteen months was he even partly successful. Then he saw the haze, saw the familiar streets, saw her far, far ahead of him, and hurrying onward, saw her turn a sharp corner, caught one backward look from her dear brown eyes as she vanished—and awoke! He gave much thought to that look in the months which followed. He was a modest youth, singularly unconscious of his own charms; but the eloquent glance had conveyed to him a sense of longing—of more than longing.

Quite an interval elapsed before she came again. There was, first of all, the inevitable filmy effect, but, in the vision that succeeded it, instead of finding himself in the little town, he was in the depths of a great old forest, and in horrible agony. Some accident had occurred—he did not know what. He only knew that he was shot—suffering, dying! He groaned, and even as he writhed in a spasm of pain he saw her sitting on the sward beside him. He turned, his glazed eyes on her. Her brown ones looked back into his with a great love and pity in their depths.

"O, my dear," she whispered. "I know it seems terribly hard to you. And because you think you suffer, it is almost as hard for you as if you did. But you are not really hurt, you know. You are not suffering. It is all in the dream. You are sound asleep, far, far away."

He forced a sardonic laugh from his stiff throat.

"Not this time," he managed to articulate. "Whatever the others may have been, this is no dream. This is the real thing—and death."

She smoothed the hair back from his damp brow with a beautiful, caressing touch. He felt her fingers tremble.

"No," she said, "it is a dream, and almost over."

"Then will you stay with me," he gasped, "to the end?"

"Yes," she promised. "Try to bear it just a moment longer. Courage, dear heart! for already you are waking—you are waking—you—are—awake!"

He was, and it was daylight, and around him were the familiar objects of his own room. He wiped his forehead, which was cold and wet. He felt utterly exhausted.

"Stay with me to the end!"

If she only would! If he could find her—find her in this warm, human world, away from that ghastly borderland where they two met. For in that hour he knew he loved—what? A woman or a ghost? A creature of this world or a fantasy of the night? Wherever she was, whatever she was, he loved her and he wanted her. And in that hour of his agony her eyes had told him that she loved and wanted him.

It was eight months before they met again. Varick's friends thought him changed, and quite possibly he was. The insouciant boy of 28 had become a man, a sympathetic, serious, thoughtful man, still given to sports and outdoor life, but more than all devoted to a search which had taken him to no end of out of the way European towns. He was sleeping in one of these one night (not the one, alas!—he had not found that), when the veil, now so warmly welcome, fell for the fourth time.

He was in an exquisite Italian garden, a place all perfume and May breezes and flooding sunshine and overarching blue sky. As he entered it he saw her coming to meet him, and he went forward to greet her with his pulses bounding and a light in his eyes which no eyes but hers had ever seen there.

Even in that supreme moment the wonderfully real atmosphere of it all impressed him. He heard a dry twig crack under his foot as he walked, and he recognized the different perfumes of the flowers around him—the heavy sweetness of a few belated orange blossoms, the delicate breath of the oleander, the reminiscent perfume of the rose. Then their hands met and their eyes, and each drew a long breath, and neither spoke for a moment. When Varick found words they were very commonplace.

"O, my love, my love!" he said. And she, listening to them with sudden tears in her brown eyes, seemed to find in them the utmost eloquence of the human tongue.

"It has been so long, so long!" he gasped. "I began to think I was never to see you again."

They drifted side by side along a winding, rose hedged path, past an old sundial, past a triumphant peacock strutting before his mild little mate, past a fountain whose spray flung out to them a welcome. She led the way with the accustomed step of one who knew and loved the place. They came to a marble seat, half hidden by a tangle of vines and scarlet blossoms, and sheltered by overhanging oleander branches; there she sat down and moved her skirts aside that he might sit close to her. Her brown eyes, raised now to his hungry gray ones, looked at him with the softened brilliance he had sometimes seen in those of a happy child.

"Should you have missed me," she asked softly, "if you had never seen me again? Should you have been sorry?"

He drew a long breath.

"I love you," he said. "Whatever you are, wherever you come from, whatever all this means, I love you. I don't understand anything else, but I know that. It's the one sure thing, the one real thing, in all this tangle."

Without a word she put her hand in his. He could feel distinctly its cool, soft, exquisite texture. With an exclamation of delight he drew her toward him, but she held herself away, the expression of her beautiful face softening the effect of the recoil.

"Not yet, dear," she said, gently. "We must be very careful. You do not understand. If you do anything abrupt or sudden you will wake—and then we shall be parted again, who knows for how long!"

There were tears in her eyes as she spoke. Seeing them, he buried his face in his hands and groaned, while the sense of his utter helplessness rolled over him like a flood.

"God!" he broke out, with sudden fierceness. "What devil's trick is this? It's not a dream. It can't be a dream. Here we are, two human beings in a human world—I'll swear it. Smell that oleander. Listen to that bird song. Hear the trickle of that fountain. And yet you tell me that we are asleep!"

She laid her head in the curve of her arm, resting on the ivy covered back of the low seat. Bending over her, he saw that her cheeks were wet. The sight made him desperate.

"Don't!" he cried hoarsely. "Don't do that! Tell me what is expected of me. Whatever it is, no matter how hard it is, or how long it takes, I'll do it!"

She did not reply, but she made a quick little gesture with the hand nearest him. It signified hopelessness, almost despair. Darkness began to fall, and an early moon hung pale in the heavens. Somewhere in the thick bushes near them a nightingale began to sing. To Varick's excited fancy there was a heartbreaking pathos in the soft notes. They seemed to have been together, he and she, for a long time—for hours. He bent his head till it touched hers.

"But you love me?" he asked. She moved a little and wiped her eyes with an absurdly tiny, lace-edged square of linen. One corner, he noticed, bore an embroidered coronet.

"Yes," she said, very quietly, "I love you."

Her tone as she spoke expressed such entire hopelessness that the full sense of her words did not at once come to him. When it did, slowly, sweetly, she was speaking again.

"But, O, dearest, dearest!" she broke out, "why do we love? To what can love lead us— two poor shadows in a dream world, in which alone we meet?"

He was silent. There seemed, somehow, nothing that he could say, though later he thought of many words with which he might have filled that throbbing silence. The dusk deepened around them. Off in the thicket the nightingale still warbled passionately, and now the stars began to come out over their heads, pale as yet against the warm blue of the heavens. Varick, sitting stiffly on the old marble bench, became conscious of an odd dizziness, and set his teeth with a sudden determination to show no evidence of it. She had risen and was moving about among the rose bushes just behind them. Almost before he missed her she had returned, holding in her hand a beautiful salmon hued rose, with a flame colored, crumply heart. As she held it near him it exhaled an exquisitely reminiscent perfume—a perfume which seemed to breathe of old joys, old memories, and loves of long ago.

"Is it not beautiful?" she said. "It is called the Toinnette. Take it, dear, and keep it—for memory." Then, as he took it from her, her eyes widened in a sudden anguish of dread and comprehension.

"O, you're leaving me!" she said. "You're waking. Dearest, dearest, stay with me!"

The words and the look that accompanied them galvanized him into sudden action. He sprang to his feet, caught her in his arms, held her there, crushed her there, kissing her eyes, her hair, her exquisitely soft mouth.

"I will not leave you!" he raved. "I swear I won't! I defy the devil that's back of this! I swear——" But she, too, was speaking now, and her words came to his ears as from a long, long distance, sobbingly, with a catch in the breath, but distinct.

"Alas!" she cried, "you have ruined everything! You have ruined everything! You will never see me again. Dearest, dearest—"

He awoke. His heart was thumping to suffocation, and he lay exhausted on his pillow. It was a dark morning, and a cold rain beat dismally against the window panes. Gone was the dream woman, the Italian garden, the song of the nightingale, the perfume of flowers. How definite that perfume had been! He could smell it yet, all around him. It was like—what was it like?

He became suddenly conscious of an unusual sensation in his hand, lying on the bedspread. He glanced at it and then sat up with a sudden jerk that almost threw him off his balance. In his upturned palm was a rose—a salmon colored rose, slightly crushed, but fresh and fragrant, with a flame colored, crumply heart. Varick stared at it, shut his eyes, opened them, and stared again. It was still there, and, with the discovery that it was, Varick became conscious of a pricking of the scalp, a chill along the spine. His brown face whitened.

"Well, by all the gods!" he gasped. "How did that thing get here?"

No one ever told him. Possibly no one could except the dream woman, and her he never saw again; so the mystery was unfathomable. He put the rose between the leaves of the Bible his mother had given him when he went to college, and which he had not opened since until that morning; and the rose became dry and faded as the years passed, quite as any other rose would have done.

Varick paid a second and quite casual visit to his medical friend, who scoffed at him rudely and urged him to go on a long hunting trip. He went, and was singularly successful, and came back with considerable big game and a rich, brown complexion. When the doctor asked him whether he still awoke from his innocent slumbers to find his little hands full of pretty flowers Varick swore naturally and healthfully, turned very red, and playfully thumped the medical man between the shoulders with a force that sent that gentleman's eyeglasses off his nose.

But, notwithstanding all these reassuring incidents, Varick has never married; and he remains deeply interested as to the source of that rose. He would be very grateful to any one who could tell him where the thing came from. The nearest he ever came to this was when a man who knew a good deal about flowers once inspected the faded rose, at Varick's request, and listened to the description of how it looked when fresh.

"Why, yes," he said, "I know that variety. It grows in one or two places in Italy, but I don't think it's known here. They call it the Toinnette!"

SYNOPSIS.

The Brownings, Richard and Hope, are entertaining in their own charming manner on Christmas eve. Hope leaves the room for a moment and re-enters with terrible bruises on her throat, announcing a masked man discovered at her jewel case struck her cruelly. Richard and Philip Kline search the grounds. The servants are questioned, and Richard decides they must all be discharged, and plans to take Hope south. Sarah Parr, who lives in the village, and has known Hope always, appears to know more than she cares to tell about the happening. Philip and Dr. Arthur spend the night at the Parrs', returning to Quatuck the next morning. Sarah tells them about Esther Browning, Richard's mother, of her love for children and all young, tender things. Richard takes Hope south after Christmas, and there Hope has another terrifying experience. A Negro is hanged as suspect. She and Richard go to New York, and Dr. Arthur sees a horrified look in her eyes one evening while they are dining. Jasper Lord, Richard's uncle, returns from a voyage, bringing with him Hope's brother, Gerald. Dr. Arthur thinks Gerald is responsible for the marks at Hope's throat, and sits up all night at the Brownings' to guard her from harm. He has a peculiar sensation of being watched. Philip Kline learns that Jasper Lord sent a huge ape to Quatuck years before. One sultry night, during an electric storm, a man servant at the Br[illegible]nings' is frightened by some animal which he sa[illegible] touched his throat. Again Dr. Arthur and P[illegible] remain awake to watch, and in the dark A[illegible]unters something not human. Hope's b[illegible]ing away, and they all feel his departure wi[illegible] a dark shadow from Quatuck. Simon and Sara[illegible] with the two younger men, attend a circus near by, and Philip recognizes one of the performers as Gerald. Later, when he seeks him out, Gerald is gone, together with a large ape from the circus. They find Hope unconscious in the wood, where she had been gathering hazelnuts. Dr. Arthur and Philip manage to get her home. Richard does not return until evening, and they dread telling him about the new horror.

TENTH INSTALLMENT.

IN PURSUIT.

I AM glad that I was not an observer of any of the events now to be related. I would not willingly see even a wild, mad ape killed—not in a barn yard within our environs. I might not mind it in the jungle, in the place in which the ape is indigenous and man with his firearms the courageous alien.

Here it was a different thing. The ape was not a courageous, armed, competent alien. He was not indigenous. He was a perplexed, hopeless, savage, morose beast, so utterly removed from anything he knew, so utterly hopeless, so utterly forlorn. I am glad I did not see him killed.

I may be neurotic, but I am glad, just the same, that I did not see Gerald skulking behind the hay stack and this great ape, which must have loved the crude, brutal man, coming out into the open, courageous, menacing and dangerous, to get two charges of buckshot in his chest from the shotgun of one of the farmers in the posse which had tracked down the two animals—Gerald and the ape.

I am glad that I came back to Quatuck house in time to hear what Sarah had to say, but I am not sorry that I missed the other elements of the tragedy. I had known that Sarah had the solution although even Arthur had not seen that. This portentous old lady, with her dropsical body, with her removable teeth, with her hard morals and hard life, with her pipe and in her wonderful kitchen, had been, to me, always the solution of what had come to be, to me, an ultra-violet mystery. It had been so commonplace in all its facts. It had been so imponderable in all its truths.

I had a most hopeless search. I could not even get on the track of the posse of farmers. I found plenty of evidence that it had been formed hastily. No men were in the neighborhood. The women came to the gate or the door, but the men had gone.

The women—I stopped at a half dozen places—were exalted in a grim fashion. I never knew comprehensively before how Hope had endeared herself to every one within ten miles around.

She had done something, unobtrusively, for every family. I got a scattered record of it. It came from women of whom I made inquiries. It was fragmentary and most of the time ejaculatory. The women were glad their men were on the search. They were glad they had taken their rifles or shotguns.

Hope had sat through the night with this child who had pneumonia while its mother got some sleep. She had brought a doctor from the city for this one which was wasting away in malnutrition. She had come in at childbirth, when a child had the croup, when it had the measles, when it had a broken arm.

She had been everywhere over the neighborhood and we never knew it. This foster daughter of Esther Browning was Esther Browning again in the flesh. She was adored and worshiped and the women were glad that their men had gone with guns to run down the assailant who had attacked this sweet, beautiful woman who had been benevolent and wonderful.

I knew what these grimly indignant men could do with such a back of grim femininity. I got to Three Oaks and found nothing. It was true, the women there said, that a strange man and an ape had been seen, but only a glimpse had been had of them. The farmers had come hunting for them and had gone on.

It was getting towards evening. Three Oaks was four miles from Quatuck village and six miles from the Brownings'. In an hour it would be dark and it was hopeless for me to continue traversing the countryside at random. Occasionally we must concede everything to futility and start back home.

It was strange to be impatient on such a walk at such a time of year. The maples and the soft oaks had already turned to color. The ash had turned to wine. The cottonwood had lost its leaves. The witch-hazel was beginning to put out its yellow blossoms.

Blackbirds were flocking in a grove of willows by a little stream. The landscape was flooded with mellow light from the sun at the horizon. The light diffused through a mist.

There were snapdragons and button rockets, wild asters and helianthus, in bloom, and the late afternoon was such an afternoon as invites a walk with a pleasant objective.

Every pleasant illusion of life was peering through the faraway autumn mists and the road ahead was a white ribbon which went down into gentle valleys and gently climbed the slopes of hills. There would have been nothing but placidity if there had been no prospect except one of Sarah's supper, no expectation except that of her red curtains and geraniums and rocking chairs by the wood range.

The farmers had gathered under one of the impulses which occasionally move a rural community. The men who had met us as we carried Hope's body to the road, who had been driving to the village as we put her in the young farmer's wagon, had gone on to Simon's store.

Simon had told them of Gerald and the ape. They had met several other men and the resolution to act was formed. The men whose farms were nearby had got their shotguns. They set forth. From the fields they passed they recruited others—several with pitchforks. Nearly every man they met joined them.

They divided into several searching bodies with different objectives and a reassembling place appointed. Thus they went over the countryside, along lanes, across fields, through woods and groves, through the farm establishments, searching into cattle stalls and haylofts, gathering other farmers as they went.

The further they searched, thus futilely, the more determined they became. They had become a part of the curious American social order which is so incompletely in order that it demands correction immediately by disorderly processes.

The several searching parties soon gathered up a score of farmers and villagers. Boys who would have rioted along with the men were sent home with a sternness which had in it such a new and unaccustomed quality that even for children used to suppression by peremptory command or taciturn disapproval it was significant.

I can imagine how highly significant it was, although I did not see the men in their search. I had seen the transformation in the faces of the two farmers when they saw Hope's body and when the instincts of their breed were revealed. I know why the boys of Quatuck did not accompany their elders on this strange search which so fascinated their imaginations and horrified them with its prospects.

The party, dividing into three groups, spread out fan-shaped with three nuclei, over the country. The group which found Gerald and the ape was composed of eight men. Six of them were armed, the two unarmed were the farmers we had seen when we carried Hope to the road. They were the organizers, but they were unarmed.

Three of the other men in this group had shotguns, one a rifle, one a revolver and one, who had come from his barnyard, the pitchfork he had been using.

The three groups were at times in touch with each other—or in sight. Twenty men moving across country as if beating game out of the brush operated by an instinctive sense of organization and tactics. They had three cores of action and a liaison which made them a unit.

The two men who had organized the search were Robison and Furth. They were the unarmed men. It was their party which first heard of Gerald and the ape.

The radiant of their action was a road which stretched away as a white ribbon from a ridge into valleys, over other ridges, by woods and meadows, farm houses and grazing fields.

I knew the road. It was a fascinating ribbon into the prospect, running to the west as if running to the future, to the sunset.

The eight men, deploying from this radiant of action and stirring up the brush, searching the barns and tool sheds, stalking their game in the thickets and woods, came upon evidence.

Their first encouragement was given them by a child. He was sitting at the rural delivery mail box at the road side of a small frame house which stood in a small yard close to the road.

Robison was taking the road itself and as he came along something expressed in his face caused the child, who had been sitting on the grass with one arm about a small dog, to set up a shriek of distress. It was an inexplicable bawl of acute juvenile agony—unaccountable, unless allowance were made for what really was expressed in Robison's face. If the child's instinct read the purpose of the man's instinct there was cause for this wail of terror.

Robison did not have a gun. That might have startled a child. He was merely walking along a country road and a child sitting by the road wailed, having looked at his face, so that the little dog jumped courageously at the disturber, barking frantically as little dogs do, and trying to destroy the occasion of all this terror by dashing in between kicks for a nip at the shin or calf.

Robison probably would have stopped at the child's wail. He had to stop because of the dog's anger. A woman, hearing the noise, came running from the house.

"What's the matter now?" she asked.

"I don't know," said Robison—I am telling all this as he told it to me later—or as nearly as it can be told as he told it. "Call your dog off before I have to kick him."

The woman picked the child up. It struggled so violently in her arms, so screamed and kicked, that she asked Robison to wait a moment until she carried the little boy indoors. She called the small dog which, as she went towards the house, ceased to dance about Robison and ran after her.

Robison waited until the woman returned. He was losing his alignment with the men who were going forward by field and woods, but there had been something significant, he thought, in the woman's request that he wait.

She came back in a moment. The child was still wailing in the house, but she did not seem to mind that. At least he was as safe as she could make him.

"What's the matter with him?" Robison asked.

"He got badly scared this morning," she said. "It doesn't sound reasonable, but he says he saw some big monkey that walked like a man. We get our drinking water, except in the winter, from a spring just at the edge of the willows over there. We got a pump but that spring's so sweet that when it's running clear my man likes to have his drinking water from it. About six o'clock this morning I sent little Walter over for a bucketful and he came running back screaming.

"He said there had been a big monkey walking like a man that had come out from behind a willow tree. Little Walter was almost scared to death. He couldn't even run and he couldn't yell. The big monkey walking like a man started towards him. That's why he's so fidgetty, I guess."

"What happened then?" Robison asked.

"Is there anything the matter?" the woman asked, seeing for the first time that plain legend of retribution in Robison's face.

"Nothing," said Robison, "except we're hunting for that monkey and the man with him."

"There was a man?" said the woman. "He had been sleeping under the tree. Little Walter says that a man got up from the ground just as the big monkey started for him and that the monkey stopped when the man said something sharp to him.

"Then little Walter started running and screaming. When he got near the house he stopped and looked back and he saw the man and the monkey going out of the willows across the fields and in that direction."

The woman pointed in the direction in which the men had moved in their fan shaped search.

"That's why the boy screamed when he saw you," she said. "He's still scared—the poor little fellow."

His sobbing screams still sounde from the house but his mother, assured as to his physical security, seemingly could endure his emotional distress.

"What are you hunting them for?" she asked.

"We just want them," said Robison. "The boy said he saw them going that way?"

He pointed in the direction the searchers had been following.

"That way," she repeated, pointing.

"I'll be going on," said Robison.

The child was crying inside the house. The little dog, also inside, was yelping and barking. The woman stood at the edge of the yard and watched Robison going quick step down the road.

Robison had to hurry. His companions were nearly a half mile ahead of him. Several of them could be seen as faraway figures, climbing the slope of a treeless pasture, which at its ridge made the horizon line just there. He had the information they needed. They were directly in the right line of search.

The next evidence Robison came upon was in the next half mile. The men were going ahead, but he was rapidly overtaking them, he by the road and they taking the rough ground, the fences, ditches, and ridges.

Robison could keep them in sight, and he hurried along the road.

What stopped him was the sight of a farmer out in one of the road corners of a pasture. He was looking at a shambles of dead sheep.

Robison instantly knew that he had another trace of the man and the beast.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"Enough," said the farmer, "and queer enough. I certainly hate to lose these sheep."

I had often admired the reticencies and taciturnities of the country people, but never more when Robison told me, as he did later, of this. Here was an infuriated man, bent on catching and punishing—lynching—a desperado. Here was another man who saw the bodies of most of his cherished flock of sheep. Both men were angered to the core. Both were impatient to strangle the human being upon whom they wanted to lay hands just then.

"What's happened?" Robison asked.

"Strange enough thing," said the farmer. "I just saw the finish of it. I didn't even see that. I heard a noise. I was over in the south forty that I've got mostly in corn, and I heard a lot of blatting and a man yelling. The sheep were blatting like a dog was at them. So I ran over, and as I got nigh I saw a man and a thing that must have been a big monkey going over the pasture land there. And this is what I found."

Farmers, although they deal with elementals of life, with the processes of provisioning, can be sentimental. This man looked ruefully at his slain sheep.

"I guess the thing escaped from the circus," said the farmer, "and the circus will have to pay for it, if I can catch up with it, and I think I can. My brother-in-law is the sheriff of the next county, where they're showing tomorrow, and I guess they'll pay. But they can't pay enough."

It had been his prized merino ram, he said, which had, he thought, opened the door to the shambles. The ram, a courageous animal, had been kept in an inclosure by himself, away from the ewes until the proper breeding season, and the ape, coming out of the woods with Gerald, must have entered this inclosure. The ram must instantly have charged him.

The farmer thought he knew what had happened. The ape might have been startled by the first rush. He might have taken to the security of a post and then have become slowly but ferociously enraged as the ram butted at the post. He may have descended

DOUBLE EXPOSURE

It Was Planned for a One
Plot Had to Be

IF any of the characters which George Barton manipulated in the scenarios he wrote for the Argus Film Manufacturing company had ever found themselves in the predicament he himself was now in, he could have extricated them easily, in a single reel. He smiled grimly as he thought of it. Somehow in real life he couldn't pull the strings as easily.

Eighteen months before, when Barton had left the Journal-News to join the Argus scenario staff, he had been pretty green—a possibility, perhaps even a probability, but not a certainty. Had he not been at least a good sporting proposition, Rollins would never have taken him on; and had he been a sure-fire producer and repeater, he would not have been content to ally himself with Argus, a small company, feeble from birth. But it had meant a chance to learn and grow—and he had learned and grown.

How he wished he could get an opening on the scenario staff of one of the big companies—Federal, for instance. He liked the way Federal handled their stuff. How he wished he could meet their scenario editor, Philip Holderness—he'd read of him. With a man like Holderness he felt sure his ideas would be respected, and in congenial atmosphere he could work so much better—he knew he could surprise himself.

It never seemed to occur to Rollins that Barton could get a job with any other company, or that he would think of trying to. He'd like to show Rollins! If he were only constructing a plot, he'd know how to develop this situation.

Well, how? he asked himself. What would he do? He'd tell Rollins he had an offer from one of the big companies. If Rollins thought Federal were after him, he guessed the old man would sit up and take notice!

Then the idea flashed into his mind—why not do it? Why not tell Rollins he had an offer from some other company? He wouldn't have to say who—"Of course, it's made in confidence, and it wouldn't be right for me to"—but he could go to Rollins and ask his advice and tell him he'd rather stay with him—"But, of course, it's a matter of business with me, Mr. Rollins, and——"

He felt sure the old man would come across with a raise, and not only Barton's salary but also Rollins' opinion of him would go up a few points. It was worth trying, anyhow, and it couldn't do any harm.

If he could only receive a letter from one of the big companies—so that Rollins would see it in the morning mail! No matter what was in it, just so Rollins saw the envelope addressed to "Mr. George Barton, care of the Argus Film Manufacturing Company."

Well, why not have such an envelope come in? Why not write a letter to one of the big companies—a dummy letter—that would bring a reply—anything?

But what kind of a letter could he write—a letter that would cause no trouble if it were "opened by mistake"—an accident that frequently befell letters that aroused Rollins' curiosity? He could ask for the address of some fictitious person—Mr. Smith or Mr. Jones. The very thing!

That night there was speeding to Chicago this letter:

"Scenario Department, Federal Pictures Corporation, Chicago.—Gentlemen: Can you furnish me with the address of M. F. Jones, who, I believe, was recently in your employ? I inclose stamp. Yours truly,

"GEORGE BARTON."

He did not send a stamped and addressed envelope; that would have spoiled the whole thing; what he wanted was a Federal envelope, addressed to him.

Two mornings later, when Rollins came in with the mail, there it was, as big as life—the Federal envelope, addressed to "Mr. George Barton, care of the Argus Film Manufacturing Company." Rollins looked somewhat self-conscious, but said nothing except his customary "Morning." Barton chuckled inwardly.

Well, it was hardly worth while opening the letter. This was a case where the husk was more valuable than the kernel. The letter had performed its mission without being opened or read. All it could contain was the statement that they had never heard of Smith, or Jones, or whomever it was he had asked about. It was a "prop" which had played its part in the little drama and now was worthless.

For an instant Barton held the letter poised over his big waste basket; then on a sudden impulse he cut open the envelope, unfolded the letter, and began to read:

"Dear Fred: Sorry I haven't written, but you know how it is—the old 'busy' signal, but I really have been. How is mother? Tell her I'll try to come up Sun. if I can—I'll let her know Sat. Tell her to send me my little brown silk waist in the bottom drawer—or maybe it's in the dress box—I'm going to make it over to wear at the office."

Barton straightened up and looked out the window at a man who was unloading huge boxes from a truck across the street. Of all the——! Was it a dream, or had he merely lost his reason? He went on reading:

"Thanks for the books—I haven't had a chance to look into them yet. We've been working almost night and day on a new play for the old man—that's what the boys call him—but not to his face, of course. He's got to have some new stuff—he can't work along the old lines forever, and if we don't get him on a new tack pretty soon, I fear for him—also for yours truly. What we need is something that combines eastern polish with western pep—sort of a mixture of D'Artagnan and Beau Brummel—and that's a hard order to fill. O, yes, Fernald dear has left—by request—horn-rimmed specs and all, and we've got a new man to work on schedule stuff. Mr. Hargess says he begins to see now why scenario editors go crazy. Must hurry to get this in the mail. See you Sun.

"Aff., MONA."

Barton laid the letter down and leaned back in his chair. Of all the strange pranks Fate had ever played! Of course, the letter had been inclosed in the wrong envelope—the oldest situation in the drama—the inevitable standby of the amateur scenario writer!

But who was Mona, who had performed this time-honored piece of business—this sacred convention of dramaturgy? Why, she must be in the Federal scenario department—a stenographer—no, from what she said, a staff writer. And "the old man"—why, that must be—— What a situation! The letter had been written to—her brother, of course, since she had said "tell mother." And her brother's name was Fred—"Fred" had probably received the answer to Barton's inquiry.

Mona—kind of a pretty name. He wondered what she was like. He'd like to meet Mona. There was something about that little letter so simple, so genuine——

But the news—the vacancy on the Federal staff—the need of new stuff for the old man—how Fate had played into his hands! Well, he would have to revise his plot. He had planned a little one reel farce with only two characters—himself and Rollins—and here an ingénue came poking her saucy head into the situation. This thing was liable to run into a five reel feature before he got through.

Should he write to Federal and apply for that vacancy? No, there was just one thing to do, and that was to go down to Chicago on the first train tomorrow morning. But how could he get away without arousing Rollins' suspicions? He laughed as he thought of how, when there was no possibility of his going with Federal, he had wanted Rollins to think there was; while, now that there was a chance, he wouldn't for the world have had Rollins suspect it. He wished now that Rollins had never seen that envelope.

He did no more work that morning. He sat at his desk, apparently busy, but his mind was in Chicago, in the scenario department of the Federal Pictures corporation.

At noon he walked into the telegraph office in the Grain Exchange and sent this message to Phil Morse, a trusted friend in Chicago:

"Wire me immediately as follows: 'Father no better come at once. Albert.'"

Barton knew Phil—Phil was the one fellow in the world who would ask no questions, but obey instructions.

Two hours later, Margaret, the switchboard operator, handed him a small manila envelope, and he tore it open and read the message:

"Father no better come at once. Albert."

This in hand, Barton walked into Mr. Rollins' office. The old man was dictating.

"Pardon me," said Barton. "I've just got a wire that my uncle is very ill in Chicago, and my cousin asks me to come down. I really feel as if I ought to go," he continued, clearing his throat consciously, "much as I hate to take the time. I'd like to go down tomorrow morning, and I'd only be away for the day."

Rollins read the telegram and handed it back. "Go ahead, Barton," he said kindly. "By all means."

"Thanks," said Barton. As he closed the door he felt somewhat mean.

When the 9:40 pulled out for Chicago the next morning, Barton, in his new gray suit, sat by the window in the smoking compartment of the parlor car, enjoying a cigaret, the morning paper, and a delightful thrill of adventure—almost romance.

It was really a luxury to have something out of the ordinary happen to him—instead of thinking all day of things to have happen to imaginary persons. He was really living a part in a little drama of real life; he hoped it would turn out a comedy instead of a farce. And there was Mona—he really felt already that there was going to be a little love interest in it. He had always felt that some day he would meet "the real girl," and that the instant they looked into each other's eyes—— Just now, about Mona, he had a sort of feeling that——

At first he had had no thought of trying to see her or of saying a word to any one about the letter she had sent him by mistake. He had intended to go straight to the Federal offices and apply directly to Philip Holderness for that job. He had half a dozen of his best scripts in his pocket to show Holderness.

But as he looked out the window at the speeding panorama of fields and farms he felt that he ought to see Mona first—that it would be only wise to do so. She could tell him just how the land lay—just what there was to this job, and how to make a hit with Holderness. And, besides, he really ought to tell her that her letter had gone astray—it would be only right. Somehow this saucy ingénue wouldn't stay out of the plot.

But he didn't know her name—how could he ask for "Mona"? And how could he ever explain to her who he was and how he came to write to Federal at all?

The stream of factories, warehouses, locomotives, freight cars, foundries, and switchyards sliding past the window told him that they were coming into Chicago. In the car the passengers were stirring expectantly. Barton felt a tingle of excitement as he stood up to be brushed.

With a hissing sigh of relaxation the 9:40 came to a stop in the long train shed, and Barton alighted with a delightful feeling of confidence. Well, here he was, "on location." He had decided on a course of action—and it would be action, too!

In the lofty, echoing waiting room he consulted the telephone book, "Harrison 4692," he said to the operator, interrupting a merry conversation with a fat traveling man. "Number two," she said in a moment, and Barton squeezed awkwardly into the tiny compartment, pulled the door shut, and sat down on the little stool to take his desperate chance.

"Federal," said a sing-song voice.

"Hello—let me talk to Mona," snapped Barton in a brisk, businesslike tone. He had thought it all out—he would make the operator think he was one of the Federal men who wanted to give Mona some instructions.

"Mona?" repeated the voice, puzzled. "O, you mean—— Just a minute."

Ah, she was going to call Mona—his nerve had carried him over the first obstacle. He wiped his forehead—it was very hot in the little both. Then——

"Hello?" over the wire.

"Hello. Is this Mona?" asked Barton.

"Yes. Who is this?"

"You don't know who this is—I want to surprise you—but you'll know all right enough when you see me," stammered Barton. He had forgotten all the lines he had thought out on the train. "Listen, Mona," he continued. "I want you to take lunch with me—this is a friend of Fred's. I'll meet you right outside the building. What time do you go to lunch?"

"Say, who is this?" asked Mona sharply. "You know, it's funny, but I very seldom go to lunch with strangers."

Barton felt himself slipping. Here was a serious break in the continuity—the whole situation was in danger of collapsing. A moment more, and the leading woman would jo outside the camera lines—he must keep he in the picture at all costs!

He realized that his only hope lay i arousing her curiosity enough to get her t meet him. Once face to face with her, h felt sure he could hold her attention lon enough to make things clear.

"Listen, Mona," he pleaded. "I want yo to go to lunch with me because I want to tell you about some new ideas I've got for the old man. Surefire stuff—a real knockout! A sort of cross between eastern polish and western pep." He paused, and some strange psychic current flowing along the wire told him that his shot had struck home—her curiosity was aroused.

"Who told you that?" she asked wonderingly. "Is that you, Fred? Who is this?"

"Meet me at 12, and you'll see," he teased. "Really, this is no joke. I've got something very very important to tell you about—a new character—sort of combination of Beau Brummel and D'Artagnan. I'll meet you right outside the front entrance of the building at 12."

"But why not come up to the office? Why drag in this lunch?" she asked.

"Can't come up," said Barto crisply. "Will you meet me at 12?" His tone was almost peremptory.

Silence—a faint gasp—then, "All right," and a click told him Mona had hung up. He breathed a sigh of relief as he stepped out of the stuffy little booth into the vast room.

Well, so far so good. He had got away with it. He had not dared to ask Mona how he could identify her—he was supposed to know her—but he didn't! He would have to trust to luck to pick a girl that looked as if she might have a voice like that. Somehow he felt sure he would know her the moment he looked into her eyes.

When a big clock somewhere boomed the first stroke of 12 Barton watched the noon rush begin to pour out of the great office building. Young men and maidens, old men and office boys—presidents and managers and bookkeepers and stenographers—a hurrying throng, all bent on getting something to eat. He eyed the girls hurrying out by twos and threes, chattering and laughing. What if he should miss her! Once he came near speaking to a girl, but just as he was about to raise his hat a youth stepped forward and they dissapeared together. What if that was Mona!

Then she came, and he knew her in an instant. She was alone, and looking about with a curious, expectant air. She was very pretty. Now for it!

"How do you do?" he said. "I'm the man that called you up."

Mona looked at him with wondering, suspicious eyes. "Why—why—I don't know you," she hesitated.

"No, you don't," agreed Barton. "Therefore you can't possibly dislike me. Just give me a chance to explain. I got a letter you wrote to your brother by mistake—I mean I got it by mistake—and I just wanted to give it back to you. If you don't believe me, here it is," and he handed her the letter.

She looked at it with wide open eyes. "Why, how on earth——" she began.

"It's one of the strangest things you ever heard of in your life," interrupted Barton. He was regaining his confidence now. "I want to tell you all about it, and that's why I want you to go to lunch. You needn't be afraid of me—I know it's unconventional, but—I'm not trying to steal you or anything, you know." His fondness for the theatrical asserted itself. "I want you to look in my eyes and tell me if you think you can trust me," he said.

The girl looked straight into his eyes for a second. "Where shall we go?" she asked.

After the waiter had departed Barton took a long drink of water and leaned across the table. "I'll begin with a cutback," he said; "tell you this whole thing from the beginning."

"Why," she laughed, when he had finished, "it's like a plot. It was just at closing time, and I dashed off this little note to Fred in a hurry, and I must have—put your letter in Fred's envelope. He must have wondered——"

"Can you beat it for a mixup?" asked Barton, and they both laughed.

He leaned over the table. "But what I wanted to have this talk with you about—what I really came down for," he said, "is that your letter happened to give me a straight tip on just what I was wishing for—a position on your scenario staff. I want to fill that vacancy you wrote your brother about, and I want you to help me land the job. Now, what's the best way to go after it?"

Mona looked thoughtful. "Well, I'll tell you," she answered. "The only way is for you to come up and see the editor this afternoon. I know they want a good man right away. Are you good?" she laughed.

"I don't realize myself how good I am."

A sudden look of concern shone in her eyes. "But what about Jones?" she asked.

"Jones? What Jones?"

"Why, the person whose address you asked for. Don't you remember?"

"Honestly, I didn't. I'd forgotten what name I asked for," he laughed. "It was Jones, wasn't it?"

"M. F. Jones," reminded the girl solemnly, shaking her head.

"What did the letter to me say?" he laughed. "I suppose it just informed me that no Jones had ever been in your employ."

"No, it didn't say exactly that," she said slowly. "Because Jones wrote it."

Barton sank back in his chair. "Jones wrote it!" he gasped. "You mean to say there is a Jones with you?"

"There certainly is," she laughed, enjoying his consternation.

"O, why did I ever select the name of Jones?" groaned Barton. "I was a fool to ask for such a common name—I might have known. I should have asked for Snodgrass or Hefflefinger. But Jones—not the same initials and everything?"

"M. F. Jones," repeated Mona solemnly, nodding her head.

"In the scenario department?"

"In the scenario department."

Another change in the plot, thought Barton. First this ingénue forces her way in, when I hadn't arranged for her, and now—enter the heavy—Jones!

"Well, what did this fellow Jones say? How did he answer my letter?" he asked.

"He just said he couldn't recall your name—and he asked how much he owed you."

"Great Scott!" exclaimed Barton. "I never can explain why I wrote that letter. What kind of a fellow is he?"

"O, he's just a regular full-blooded Jones."

"What does he do up there? Is he pretty important in the office?"

"Unbearably so. He's only the editor."

"What! The editor!" gasped Barton, collapsing into his chair. "Now I am done for! But I thought Philip Holderness was your editor."

"He was—up to three weeks ago."

"Well, of all the—what am I going to do?" he exclaimed. "This'll queer the whole thing—job and all. It looks so absurd—my asking for the address of M. F. Jones, and then showing up now looking for a job. It means a fadeout for me."

"It wasn't in the script, was it?" she said. "But cheer up; you can explain it somehow."

Barton muttered in disgust. "Jones has certainly spoiled things in fine shape—queered the whole deal—the meddling——"

"But you mustn't blame poor Jones—he has a right to live—to be Jones."

"O, I suppose so," he admitted sadly.

Suddenly the girl sat up and clapped her hands, startling an elderly man at the next table. "Here's a way out!" she exclaimed. "The very thing! I just thought of it, and it's dandy!"

"What is?" he asked gloomily.

"You asked if we could furnish you with the address of M. F. Jones, didn't you?"

"I certainly did," he groaned.

"Well," said Mona delightedly, "Jones gave a talk before the exhibitors' association last week—do you get me?"

He wrinkled his brows. "I must confess——"

She clapped her hands again and laughed with glee. "Why," she said, "go in and tell Jones that what you wanted was a copy of his address—the one he gave before the association. Tell him you've heard a lot of talk about it, and you're anxious to read it. It'll tickle him to death—he thinks it's great. Don't you see—you'll make a hit with Jones and get out of your fix at the same time?"

Barton beamed at her. "You're a wonder!" he exclaimed. "Do you really think I can get away with it?"

"Sure," said Mona. "He'll be so pleased he'll never see anything funny in it. And then you can lead the conversation around to the vacancy. At any rate, he can't give you the old turndown, 'It's been done before.'"

"I'll do it!" exclaimed Barton. "You've saved my life! Some idea!"

"Fiction and dramatic rights reserved by the author," she laughed. "You'd better come up a few minutes after 3. I know he's got a conference at 2 that'll probably last an hour. But what about this new stuff for the old man?"

When he left her at the elevator door she held out her hand—a nice little, warm, soft hand. "I hope you land it," she said.

"Thanks," he replied. "That'll help a lot. And say—after I get through with Jones I'd like to see you."

Mona laughed again. "All right. I'll be on the lookout for you. If I'm not by the switchboard when you come out of Jones' office, you ask the girl to find me. I'll be just dying to know how you come out." The starter's castanets clicked, and Mona shot upward.

"I'll be just dying to know how you come out"—her words rang in Barton's ears as he found himself on the crowded sidewalk again. Well, there had been plenty of action in Reel II., and certainly there was no lack of suspense to carry over into Reel III.

He turned east, and was carried across State with the tide of traffic that surged eagerly forward at the shrill whistle. He glowed with an exhilarating feeling of confidence, of achievement. The clang and clatter of cars and trucks, the long roar and rattle of the "L" over his head as he crossed Wabash, were music in his ears, and when he suddenly emerged from the noise and congestion of the loop into the restful and exclusive atmosphere of the avenue it seemed more beautiful that ever before.

On one side the long perspective of towering buildings stretching away into the distance cast a bluish shade over the wide, uncrowded sidewalk and the broad roadway. On the other, the unconfined expanse of the park glowed warmly green in the afternoon sun, the scattered newspapers making white spots all over the smooth grass. And, far beyond, the great level of the lake glistened with the clear blue of the sky. North and south flowed the ceaseless speeding current of automobiles—taxis and town cars, roadsters and limousines—their spinning tires humming and whirring over the smooth asphalt.

It all seemed so cheerful, so splendidly confident, so prosperous. The Street of Success, thought Barton; no room here for doubt or failure. The old man selling leather canes at the Congress hotel corner seemed positively plutocratic, and even the doorman in the entrance of the Chicago club so far forgot himself as to smile back at Barton. The little group of the faithful in the shadow of the Blackstone, reluctantly changing their locations as the long dial moving across the grass marked the passing of the hours—they, too, were happy and contented.

It occurred to Barton that it would be nice to take Mona some candy, and he emerged guiltily from a confectioner's with a two pound box tucked under his arm.

It was 3:07 when he entered the Federal offices wearing his most important and businesslike air. Alas, Mona was nowhere to be seen. He would have liked to see her before he tackled Jones.

"I'd like to see Mr. Jones," he said to the tall blonde at the switchboard.

"Have you a card?" she asked. Then she giggled. Barton looked at her severely. Somehow that giggle had thrown him entirely off his balance. He fumbled awkwardly with his card case, but finally pulled out a card, and the giggler disappeared with it down the corridor.

In a moment she was back. "Mr. Jones will see you," she said. "Third door on the right." She giggled again.

Well, now for it! A horrible realization of the absurdity of his story suddenly came over him—but it was too late now. The box of chocolates was terribly in the way—he wished the girl hadn't tied it with all that gold cord—Jones would spot it in a minute. He nerved himself as he did for his morning shower, and opened the third door on the right. There stood Mona, alone in the little office.

"Hello," said Barton. He thrust the box of chocolates into her hands. Then he looked around and asked in a low tone, "Where's Jones?"

"Why, you goose," said Mona. "I'm Jones."

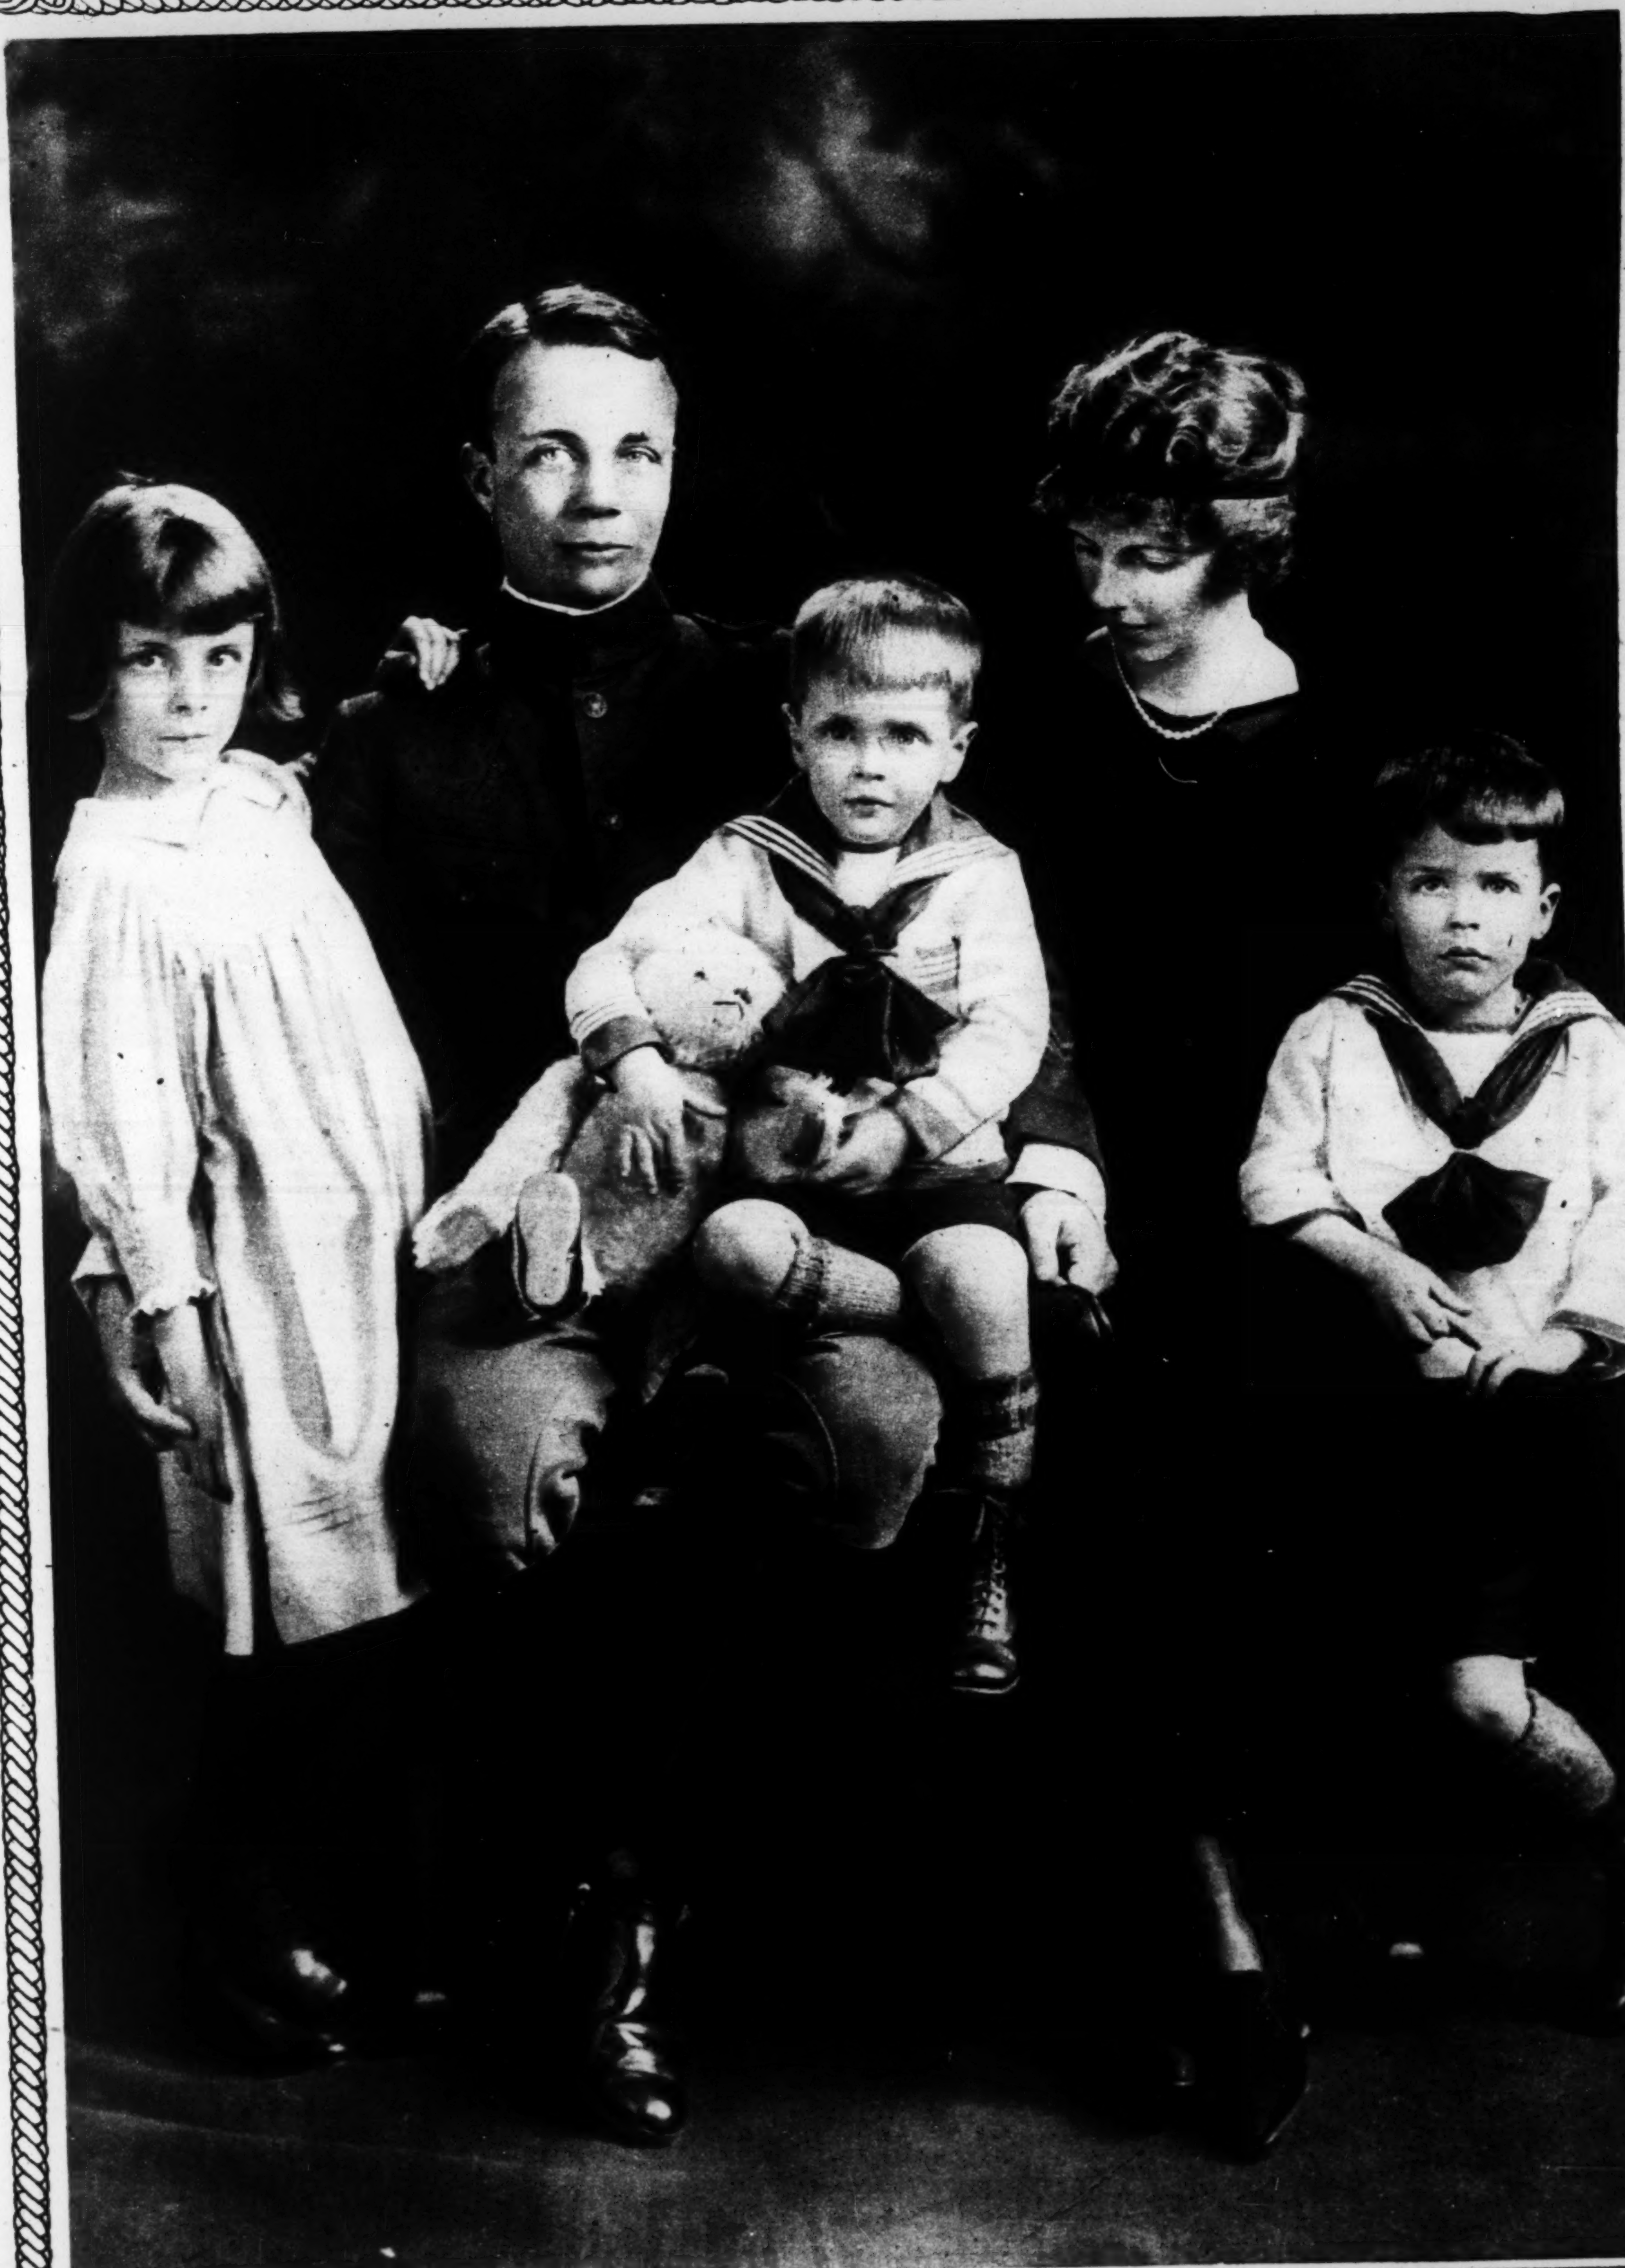
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

MARCH 30, 1919



T. R. JR. MAY BE HEAD OF NEW GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC—Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt Jr., who is pictured here with his wife and three children, recently announced that the preliminary arrangements had been made for the organization of a veterans of the world war association, similar to the Grand Army of the Republic. Toward the end of next month a meeting will be held in Paris, where plans will be formulated to be submitted later in America to a representative body of officers and men who served in the American forces during the war. The purpose of the organization, says Lieut. Col. Roosevelt, is "to promote comradeship and serve the nation by keeping alive the spirit which caused American citizens to make such great sacrifices." Mrs. Roosevelt was the first woman sent overseas by the Y. M. C. A. as a canteen worker. Lieut. Col. Roosevelt returned recently from France, where he served with the Twenty-sixth regular infantry.

De Luxe

De Luxe

The Bedspring Luxurious

THE De Luxe Bed Spring is more comfortably luxurious than the bedspring you now sleep on.

A strong statement—but absolutely true, no matter what make or type of bedspring you now have.

You are now using one of three kinds:

(1) Wire fabric attached to the ends of the frame like a hammock.
(2) Coils of the ordinary type resting on slats.
(3) Coils enclosed in a box, called a boxspring.

The only bedsprings that can be comfortable and luxurious are coil bedsprings. Those suspended like a hammock cannot be permanently comfortable. But the De Luxe is a coil bedspring with a new method of construction which makes it permanently and superlatively comfortable—much more comfortable than a box spring.

The De Luxe overcomes all of the faults of wire fabric springs, ordinary type coil bedsprings, and box springs. It will give you the complete, healthful rest you need.

THE secret is in the small crossed coils you can see all over the top of the De Luxe Bedspring.

The De Luxe is so constructed that it depresses most beneath the heavier parts of the body and least under the lighter—thus keeping the body in the healthful, horizontal alignment that means complete relaxation and rest.

Moreover, its coils depress only directly beneath the body lying on it—the lighter body does not tend, even in the least degree, to roll toward the heavier.

• • • • •

It is next to impossible satisfactorily to describe or picture in an advertisement the structural details of the De Luxe, the most luxurious of bedsprings.

But it is possible for you personally to see and examine the De Luxe Bedspring alongside other makes and types of bedspring, and make your own comparisons.

GO to your dealer—any dealer—he has the De Luxe and other kinds.

We are perfectly satisfied that the De Luxe superiority over all other makes and types, will be so plain to you that you will never again consider any other make or type. If we were not absolutely sure of our ground, we wouldn't risk comparison.

Go to your dealer's today—he will be glad to show you the De Luxe without any obligation on your part.

Finished in French gray enamel and made to last a lifetime. Look for this trade-mark on the side-bar of the spring—it is your guarantee—

Free Proof that I Can Raise Your Pay

No matter how much you are earning now, I can show you how to increase it. I have even taken failures and shown them how to make $100—$200, and in one case as high as $2,000 weekly. I am willing to prove this entirely at my risk and expense.

LET'S have a little chat about getting ahead—you and I. My name is Pelton. Lots of people call me "The Man Who Makes Men Rich." I don't deny it. I've done it for thousands of people—lifted them up from poverty to riches.

I'm no genius—far from it. I'm just a plain, everyday, unassuming sort of man. I know what poverty is. I've looked black despair in the eye—had failure stalk me around and hoodoo everything I did. I've known the bitterest kind of want.

But today all is different. I have money and all of the things that money will buy. I am rich also in the things that money won't buy—health, happiness and friendship. Few people have more of the blessings of the world than I.

IT was a simple thing that jumped me up from poverty to riches. As I've said, I'm no genius. But I had the good fortune to know a genius. One day this man told me a "secret." It had to do with getting ahead and growing rich. He had used it himself with remarkable results. He said that every wealthy man knew this "secret"—that is why he was rich.

I used the "secret." It surely had a good test. At that time I was flat broke. Worse than that, for I was several thousand dollars in the hole. I had about given up hope when I put the "secret" to work.

At first I couldn't believe my sudden change in fortune. Money actually flowed in on me. I was thrilled with a new sense of power. Things I couldn't do before became as easy for me to do as opening a door. My business boomed and continued to leap ahead at a rate that startled me. Prosperity became my partner. Since that day I've never known what it is to want for money, friendship, happiness, health or any of the good things of life.

That "secret" surely made me rich in every sense of the word.

MY sudden rise to riches naturally surprised others. One by one people came to me and asked me how I did it. I told them. And it worked for them as well as it did for me.

Some of the things this "secret" has done for people are astounding. I would hardly believe them if I hadn't seen them with my own eyes. Adding ten, twenty, thirty or forty dollars a week to a man's income is a mere nothing. That's merely playing at it. In one case I took a rank failure and in a few weeks had him earning as high as $2,000.00 a week. Listen to this:

A young man in the East had an article for which there was a nation-wide demand. For twelve years he "puttered around" with it—barely eking out a living. Today this young man is worth $200,000. He is building a $25,000 home and paying cash for it. He has three automobiles. His children go to private schools. He goes hunting, fishing, traveling whenever the mood strikes him. His income is over a thousand dollars a week.

In a little town in New York lives a man who two years ago was pitied by all who knew him. From the time he was 14 he had worked and slaved—and at sixty he was looked upon as a failure. Without work, in debt to his charitable friends, with an invalid son to support, the outlook was pitchy black.

Then he learned the "secret." In two weeks he was in business for himself. In three months his plant was working night and day to fill orders. During 1916 the profits were $20,000. During 1917 the profits ran close to $40,000. And this genial 64-year-young man is enjoying pleasures and comforts he little dreamed would ever be his.

I COULD tell you thousands of similar instances. But there's no need to do this as I'm willing to tell you the "secret" itself. Then you can put it to work and see what it will do for you.

I don't claim I can make you rich over night. Maybe I can—maybe I can't. Sometimes I have failures—everyone has. But I do claim that I can help 90 out of every 100 people if they will let me.

The point of it all, my friend, is that you are using only about one-tenth of that wonderful brain of yours. That's why you haven't won greater success. Throw the unused nine-tenths of your brain into action and you'll be amazed at the almost instantaneous results.

The Will is the motive power of the brain. Without a highly trained, inflexible will a man has about as much chance of attaining success in life as a railway engine has of crossing the continent without steam. The biggest ideas have no value without will power to "put them over." Yet the will, altho heretofore entirely neglected, can be trained into wonderful power like the brain or memory and by the very same method—intelligent exercise and use.

If you held your arm in a sling for two years, it would become powerless to lift a feather, from lack of use. The same is true of the Will—it becomes useless from lack of practice. Because we don't use our Wills—because we continually bow to circumstance—we become unable to assert ourselves. What our wills need is practice.

Develop your will-power and money will flow in on you. Rich opportunities will open up for you. Driving energy you never dreamed you had will manifest itself. You will thrill with a new power—a power that nothing can resist. You'll have an influence over people that you never thought possible. Success—in whatever form you want it—will come as easy as failure came before. And those are only a few of the things the "secret" will do for you. The "secret" is fully explained in the wonderful book "Power of Will."

How You Can Prove This at My Expense

I KNOW you'll think that I've claimed a lot. Perhaps you think there must be a catch somewhere. But here is my offer. You can easily make thousands—you can't lose a penny.

Send no money--no, not a cent. Merely clip the coupon and mail it to me. By return mail you'll receive a pamphlet, but the whole "secret" told in this wonderful book, "POWER OF WILL."

Keep it five days. Look it over in your home. Apply some of its simple teachings. If it doesn't show you how you can increase your income many times over—just as it has for thousands of others—mail the book back. You will be out nothing.

But if you do feel that "POWER OF WILL" will do for you what it has done for over a quarter of a million others—if you feel as they do that it's the next greatest book to the Bible—send me only three dollars and you and I'll be square.

If you pass this offer by, I'll be out only the small profit on a three-dollar sale. But you—you may easily be out the difference between what you're making now and an income several times as great. So you see you've a lot—a whole lot—more to lose than I.

Mail the coupon or write a letter now—you may never read this offer again.

ELLIOTT DEXTER, who enjoys matrimonial distinction as the husband of Marie Doro, is, as nobody needs to tell you, one of the most popular of the screen heroes. He learned his trade on the legitimate stage and started in pictures doing any little thing that anybody wanted him to. But how times have changed since then! Now they're featuring him in the big productions such as "The Squaw Man," "Old Wives for New," "Don't Change Your Husband"—wasn't that last a peach, though? Recently he's been supporting Ethel Clayton most effectively. When not working, reliable authority informs me he is fishing. Thomas Meighan is his special "pal," and long hours the two spend deciding world history. Mr. Dexter is six feet tall, slightly resembles an Indian, has a pleasant sense of humor, and likes children.—By Mae Tinee.

PAULINE FREDERICK—"Pretty Polly" they call her at the studios. Miss Frederick was born in Boston, August 12, 1884, and, her fond mamma asserts, was an actress from the age of six when she feigned colic as an excuse for attracting attention. Whenever there was a school play, Pauline was in it and quite apt to be "it." Her first stage appearance was made in the farce "Rogers Brothers at Harvard," in which she appeared at the Knickerbocker theater. In the musical comedy "It Happened in Nordland," in "The Fourth Estate," and in the burlesque on "The Music Master" she was successful. It was after the long run of "Joseph and His Brethren" that she was approached by the Famous Players company, with which she has been affiliated until just recently, when she transferred her allegiance to Goldwyn. Miss Frederick is five feet four inches tall, has blue eyes and brown hair, and weighs about 130 pounds. She is said to be a crack shot, and calls hunting her hobby. She is the wife of Willard Mack, playwright and actor.—By Mae Tinee.

ETHEL CLAYTON, one of the prettiest of the screen stars, is the widow of Joseph Kaufman, who gave her her start toward fame in the days when both worked for Lubin, she acting, he directing. She was on the stage playing in stock and in various road productions for a number of years until her eye was caught by the twinkles from the cinema firmament. She thought it might be a good place for her to twinkle, too. She made her first appearance in a three-reel production entitled "When the Earth Trembled." Numerous Lubin productions showed she "had it in her." World acquired her services and she put out a number of good pictures for this company. Then she signed up with Paramount, her present abiding place. With her golden hair, blue gray eyes and good figure, Miss Clayton is a splendid photographic subject. She is an out of doors girl, and swims, rides and golfs. She can also make a piano talk, they tell me.—By Mae Tinee.

DOROTHY DALTON—Here's another Chicago girl who by her own efforts has "riz" to something like fame. She was born in the Windy City, Sept. 22, 1893, and graduated from Sacred Heart academy. Daddy wanted her to study law and she proved that she would have made a good lawyer by arguing him into allowing her to take a course in a dramatic school. Then her stage career began. She played in stock with Virginia Harned; later she was ingenue with Hart Conway and Wright Huntington. Then she went into vaudeville. Then she thought she'd like to pose for the camera. Her first picture was for Thomas H. Ince in "The Disciple." For a while she didn't attract much attention. Lately, however, she's been steadily forging ahead and her latest picture, "Extravagance," was most decidedly worth while. At one time Miss Dalton was married to Lew Cody. At present she is fancy free. She's five feet three inches tall, a brunette, and loves the out-of-doors. One of the most noticeable things about her is het dimple.—By Mae Tinee.

Washing after every wearing saves Silk Underthings

IF ONLY your silk undergarments would not go so fast!

It is perspiration that makes your things wear out so, and discolors them so horribly—perspiration that is allowed to dry on the fibre and weaken it.

But dip your garments into delicate Lux suds every time you wear them, and they will keep whole and new through dozens of wearings!

Lux will not injure anything that pure water alone will not injure.

Order Lux today from your grocer, druggist, or department store.—Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

How to wash silk under-things

Whisk a tablespoonful of Lux into a thick lather in half a bowlful of boiling or very hot water. Add cold water till lukewarm. Dip your things through the foamy lather many times—squeeze the suds through them—do not rub. Rinse in three waters the same temperature as the water in which you washed them. Squeeze the water out—do not wring. Dry in the shade. When nearly dry, press with a warm iron—never a hot one. Glove silk should be gently shaped as you iron.

Paris Gives Us a Thousand Clothes Guesses

by Corinne Lowe

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK

*HERE they are—the Paris taffedowndillies come up to town—first, gray taffeta from Martial et Armand which is trimmed with silver beads and pompons of ostrich in French blue, each of which has a jet center. Next, a Paquin restaurant frock of black taffeta embroidered in silver, and last, a Jenny model of salmon pink taffeta showing the new sloping shoulder-line and equally new sloping waist-line together with the caped effect of the sleeve. Trimmed with gold lace and gold tassels.

Silhouette and Near Crinoline, as Expressed in the New Bell Shaped Frock, Come Trooping Along Side by Side with Bodices of Freakish Proclivities and Waist Lines That Seem to Pay Allegiance to No Definite Principle of Behavior.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—"Well, what did you get out of this?" I asked a fellow clothes Boswell of mine as we were both snooping about a certain importer's showing of the clothes which Paris has designed for the coming season.

"A thousand guesses," said she, raising her haggard eyes from a Bulloz Directoire frock of black taffeta to an Agnes misDirectoire gown that had a waist line hastening up in the front and repenting at leisure in the back.

A thousand guesses! Yes, that is just what Paris has sent us. As the sands of the Libyan desert, as the names of the Pullman cars, as the number of reasons we find for not doing the thing we ought—thus are Paris styles for this coming spring and summer. And if any woman is wearing what any other woman is wearing it is not the fault of that obliging, versatile crowd of clothes whittlers—Jenny, Paquin, Agnes, Bulloz, Doucet, Callot, etc.

Just to show you how this is. A suit of Jenny's will have the long coat, the waistcoat, and the collar which are destined to make any woman look like a fop of Paris in 1790. But a little bit farther down the line you will find a cutaway suit-coat from Doucet or a basque with godets from Bulloz. Of course, the silhouette is long and narrow, but it is diversified by tunics both tuneful and tuneless. Callot has brought out against these slips of skirts some voluminous, bell shaped affairs that absorb almost as much of a chair as did the crinolines of another period. There are chemise frocks a plenty, but against these are pitted frocks that are much more adjusted than those of a season ago.

Bodices this year may behave most any way they like. Bulloz has brought out some of the quaintest of little Directoire afternoon frocks of taffeta, high of waist enough to please the Empress Josephine herself and finished with white organdy guimpe showing the Directoire round neck. The crossed in the front style is raging as much as ever and so is the crossed in the back—we mean by that the dipping line shown in the Jenny frock at the right of this page. Some waist lines are perfectly normal. Others are rather long and have the bodice bloused in, either all the way round or just at the back.

As to sleeves, they range from the tiny cap which looks as if it had just alighted for a moment on the top of the arm and was going to fly away any second (we show this in the center frock here) to those of any length. Elbow and three-quarter, peasant and tight—all these are represented in the Paris League of Sleeves. Of course, there is a preference for the short sleeves which have raged in Paris all through the winter. But it's entirely up to the individual woman whether she wants just a symptom or a well developed case of sleeve.

Materials! Here again we have the thousand guesses. Some French houses are showing silk jersey. Others, like Jenny, hardly have a silk jersey on the place. Printed foulards, however, seem to be extremely popular with the whole French clothesigarchy. So are taffetas and satins. Cotton voile is used extensively for afternoon frocks, while for evening wear metal cloths, laces—particularly Chantilly—tulle and satin and mousseline are all prevalent. Striped materials seem to be destined to have a wonderful vogue. Some of the most stunning of the imported foulard frocks show these stripes instead of the design. And among the most charming of the taffetas are those which develop a narrow stripe of gold.

As to embroideries, of these there is no end. Japanese, Hindu, Roumanian—all sorts of motifs are used. They are worked out generally in silk, and Agnes turns a new trick by putting some cunning little chenille balls in among her silk embroideries. Also, please note, Penelope! If you put on your new taffeta frock colored embroideries of cotton you are striking the latest chord in the trimming symphony. Such effects have been tried by several of the leading French houses.

The page today is devoted to proving that taffeta suits go with any hour from 11 in the morning to 11 at night. At the left is a model from Martial et Armand. This is a gray taffeta evening frock trimmed with silver beads and with pompons of French blue ostrich, each of which has a center of jet.

A word right here about this. Does the sly ostrich think to hide his head this year? Deluded bird! The Paris designers have turned the calcium upon him, and ostrich, together with jet, is not only trimming—it's brimming. And, O, by the way, everybody ought to see one of Jenny's new evening capes! It's gold brocade with whiffs of gold lace and ostrich rosettes of green. Perfectly lovely!

This frock of Martial et Armand's shows the ever popular crossed front and it also elucidates the whimsical tunics of today. Observe, for instance, how the one side gets a little wave-like motion from bunching up the material at the side! This dress, like so many of the newest decollettes, has a rather deep V in the back.

In the center comes a Paquin restaurant frock of black taffeta embroidered in silver. This has the mere symptom of sleeve of which we have spoken and it illustrates forcibly the new round neck line which most of the Paris autocrats are using. The sash is featured extensively this spring and here we find it balancing the jaunty, frilly front tunic.

If you look at the last taffeta—one from Jenny's own taffeteria—you will see a treatment of this salmon pink taffeta which makes it distinctively a present day model. Here we have the sloping shoulder line used particularly by Jenny and by Lanvin and the sleeves which form a sort of cape effect in the back are among the most striking which Jenny has used this season. The dipping line of the waist in the back is another favored trick of this spring's gowns. This dress is trimmed with the gold lace which is so much liked just now and it has the tassels of which Jenny is always so fond.

There is something new in dance frocks, too—really different now at a time when it seems as if every possible idea has been corralled and drawn into use. It is nowise classic, nor does it hint at any of the period frocks. But there is about it something soft and falling, a Greekish drapery from the shoulders to the hem and confined at the waist by four diminutive girdles.

More and more do we see the low placing of the waist in suits as well as in dresses. Often the jacket is cut along generous lines and the skirt is consequently close and conservative.

Every once in a while we see a long and narrow train. Sometiimes it is even double, and attached to the briefest of frocks. Where once it was always hung in the back, with never an effort from any one to hang it elsewhere, now it may be swung from the side or even well towards the front.

Chemise dresses are still in vogue. One in gold and silver was held up on the shoulders by strings of pearls, and there was no corsage in the back at all, merely pearls—quite a stunning effect.

The LITTLE THINGS THAT (DIS)COUNT

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

IT'S the little things in dress that count when perfection's aim is sought. It's the little things that discount when that perfection is accomplished not.

For instance, it is really frightfully shocking to see a maid in frock de luxe and shoes and hat also de luxe, burrowing through a handbag all cluttered up with every kind of handbag claptrap and bringing forth triumphantly a powder puff, whose mother never would have known her child, so black and world-begrimed is it, a handkerchief e'en more bereft of kith or kin in appearance, or a chamois skin of double purpose, rouge on one side, powder on the other, but not much distinction on account of the equal distribution of soil on both sides.

One wonders how the frocked de luxe can do it. One wonders more why she does it, since it's these little things that discount.

At a bridge party a week or two ago there was present a young woman gowned in a "perfect dream" of an imported dress. Lovely bronzed shoes and brown silks, a wave elegant in her hair, and a good looking face to fill out the picture. From her arm was suspended a fascinating French wristbag. From this, at a most obvious moment, she abstracted a "hanky" of unbelievable soil, apologized lengthily for its condition, explaining a cold as having used up her handkerchief resources with this exception.

Undoubtedly she had the cold in the morning when she was planning the rest of her dress, and if it necessitated washing out an extra one or two how much better than to expect a "cold" apology to excuse this undaintiest of all undainty things.

Until a certain woman ruler became afflicted with a catarrhal trouble, handkerchiefs were considered something not to be used in public, and the rule among precise women today is that its noticeable use in public is still bad form. By that is meant making the business of blowing one's nose a noisy performance. No well bred woman will blow her nose at the table, nor in any public carriage, nor in a room where others are present. The vigorous blowing of the nose is a feature of one's toilet that deserves and demands the same privacy as the use of a toothbrush.

But unfortunately our climate here is such that a handkerchief cannot be gone without some part of the time, and the apology for its use must lie in its excessive daintiness, the first principle of which is unqualified cleanliness, and, secondly, its quiet use.

There is a certain shelf in a certain washroom where ten or twelve young women avail themselves of a community system of cold creaming and general "fussing up" preparatory to the departure for home at 5:30. You would be shocked out of the proverbial years' growth were you to summarize the contents of the shelf above the washbowl. There is a community powder puff that looks as if it might have been donated by the greasers' union, a cold cream jar with a top layer of black donated by Messrs. Soot & Grime out of courtesy to this particular jar for keeping its lid off so invitingly, a rouge box with another puff bearing a strong family resemblance to the aforesaid powder puff, a comb, originally white, with teeth missing.

Again, one wonders when these little things count for so much in the way of hygiene! It is unhygienic to use another's comb, another's powder puff, another's cold cream. If there is any hair trouble the quickest way to impart it is the use of a general comb and brush; a skin trouble may be quickly and easily shared by the common cold cream jar and powder puff. Every girl should carry these personal items for her own personal use and they should be of the most cleanly character.

Since the powder puff is now an accepted member of any polite society, it may be produced anywhere when the shiny nose inspires a deft dab. When the puff is dainty its use is a charming touch of femininity e'en in the public eye. But produce a dirty puff or a dirty chamois and you register yourself as—well, as something not very nice, that's all.

The puffs are offered in fascinating little bags and boxes so that the careless one has no excuse to offer. The chamois skin may be washed frequently. A little tip on washing chamois you may find valuable is to wash it in warm suds—not hot—and rinse in a clean, warm suds. Don't rinse in clear water, as it stiffens the skin, while the warm, rinsing suds makes it soft and pliable when dry. Incidentally, this same rule applies to washing chamois gloves or washable kid gloves.

Antoinette Donnelly's Answers to Inquiries.

VALERIA: LARGE PORES ARE A real beauty ill, for with them you cannot lay claim to a good complexion. They are often caused by indigestion and general poor health, and the skin is called on to take care of more than the usual amount of elimination. Then the pores become clogged and enlargement is the result. Improper cleansing of the face is another cause, and when this is the case only persistent, careful treatment will bring the skin back to its normal condition again. The following treatment is excellent: First scrub the face with a complexion brush, hot water, and pure soap. Rinse with warm water and follow with cold. If possible rub ice over the enlarged pores after scrubbing them, as it is most effective in closing the pores and toning up the skin generally. A valuable lotion for this annoying facial blemish is made up of the following ingredients: Rosewater, six ounces; elder flower water, two ounces; simple tincture of benzoin, one-half ounce; tannic acid, ten grains.

PATRICIA: YOURS IS THE FIRST complaint against a vanishing cream as a blackhead provoker I've heard. I don't believe in your charge, however. If you use care in cleansing your face and giving it a good old fashioned scrubbing every night with soap and water—first warm water—then rinse in a clear warm water and then in a cold, following with an ice rub if possible, the blackheads will be kept at bay. Of course, if you depend on the vanishing cream solely for cleansing and use it to the exclusion of soap and water dirt in these soot blizzard days will lodge in the pores and grow up into the unpleasant young lodgers whose presence neither comforts nor decorates the face. I have a lot of faith in a good cleansing cream, but I also think you cannot raise a complexion to an unblemished old age without the daily and consistent use of soap and water. The occasional exception does not prove the rule.

ALTA: NATURALLY THE CORDS and muscles in your neck would be lame after the first bit of exercise you've treated them to in years. You're lame after a long walk and you're lame and sore after some extra kind of housework labor, aren't you? So it is with the neck muscles, and the fact that they are sore indicates they've been leading an inactive life that threatens a worse double chin. Keep it up another month, at least, please, and then write me and tell me the result. Don't forget to use the astringent on your neck after you get through to avoid "wattles" and a stringy look.

ADA: NO, VEILS AFTER 6 P. M. are not considered good form. Yellow vaseline rubbed into the eyebrows every night will promote their growth. It's a slow development, but be patient and stick to it.

A. K.: THE CONTINUAL TIREDness, combined with the nervousness and the excessive perspiration, would indicate that the dryness and cracked condition of your skin were due to one and the same cause—a much devitalized system. You must build that up. Perhaps a good tonic, or a rest if you can arrange that, would remedy your troubles. But see a physician and get him to prescribe. There's no use letting health and looks suffer when perhaps a little treatment would straighten you out perfectly.

MARY M. A.: PRACTICE THE following simple eye exercises every day and the muscles of your eyes will be strengthened and the sight and brilliancy greatly improved: Slowly roll the eyes up toward the ceiling, then down toward the tip of the nose. Repeat this ten times. Then slowly turn the eyes from right to left, as far as possible and then back again. Repeat these movements ten times. Be careful in doing these exercises not to strain the muscles of the eyes. Long distance gazing is restful to the eyes.

SALINE: YOUR WORST ENEMY couldn't call you homely if the photograph you sent "on approval" is like you. Your eyes are attractive, your nose good, your mouth quite "cupidy" with smiling corners. Since you asked for my worst criticism I will say your hair might be done up much more attractively. The loose ends could be tucked away under a net, and you can buy nets of that light reddish brown color. Ask for medium auburn. I noticed your hands because they are quite artistic and shapely. I certainly don't believe your appearance would be a hindrance to your success as a dancer. On the contrary! The dancing itself ought to strengthen your ankles and your instep. In fact, I would recommend that first thing. Will inclose instructions for manicuring and return your photo if you will send me stamped, addressed envelope.

MISS G. H.: PEROXIDE IS USED in milder cases of superfluous hair. But I wouldn't advise its daily application without its being diluted with equal parts of water. An application of equal parts of peroxide and ammonia will bleach the hair first and after many applications tend to rot it.

LIZBETH: PULLING THE EYEBROWS out with tweezers is better than shaving them. But neither is recommended for future beauty. They're bound to come in heavier with each new growth and if you aren't careful when you're a few years older you'll have a regular old English hedge to trim instead of the present shaded hairline. Yes, walking is good for the hips, be they fat or be they lean, curious as it may seem to you. I have some other good exercises for you for hip and waist reduction if you will send me stamped, addressed envelope.

CECIL: YOURS IS THE FIRST request in the history of my job here for ankles with fat on them. Every other woman is crying piteously for ankles to match the slender silhouette. Putting fat on ankles is as slow and discouraging a job as putting it on elbows. It requires a general weight increase, but you say you don't want that. You could wear light colored spats to make them look larger. I don't think stockings would help out so well. If you wore conspicuously designed ones that would attract attention to the ankles. Dancing would help develop them. Tiptoe exercises—just rising up and down on your toes—also would be worth trying, but be patient and don't expect too early returns.

FLORENCE: GIRLS OF 14 AND 15 should not go in for reducing other than to go in for all the good, healthy outdoor exercise you can get and the indoor games your school has open to you. You may cut down on your candy eating, but you require a certain amount of sugar during these developing days. If you were to go in for a strenuous reducing diet such as the one your mother took you might do quite a bit of damage. You need all the strength you acquire from your normal meals during your growing and student days.

MISS VAN: THE ELECTRIC VIbrator would have no permanent value in developing the thighs. It would be as difficult to decide the most beautiful women as a nation as it would be to decide the most beautiful woman as a wife. Every country believes it has the prize collection of women, while every man thinks he has the prize single package. So there you are. Who could say whether the Spanish beauties were outrivaled by the Irish, but an Irishman? Who would say there were more beautiful women anywhere in the world than our own little American bluebirds? Not I, for one!

LOUISE: WON'T YOU PLEASE, my dear girl, write and tell me something about the cause of your continued unhappiness? Your letter is so vague. Not an idea as to the cause. And there must be a cause or it would be utter selfishness for you to cover yourself with gloom. Take me into your confidence, please. It may be you are not well. I'm sure there's a remedy and I want to help you.

LAURA: THANK YOU, LAURA, for the color story compliment. Glad you liked it. But you see there are exceptions to every rule. It isn't possible to determine every type in a limited story. And then your high coloring has to be considered. I cannot see why you think you cannot wear light colors in the summer time. There are soft shades of yellow that I think would look extremely well with your brown eyes and hair and your bright cheeks, but make it a creamy yellow, not a canary tone. A shell pink, a silvery gray, an orchid shade all come within your ken.

FLORENCE: THE REASON FOR objections to hot towels is that the average woman will not take the pains to use sufficient cold water and ice after them. That's why the pores of the skin enlarge under the constant use of hot towels in home done massage. Cleanse with a cold cream, then steam, if you wish, for a couple of minutes, then scrub the face with a good soap and brush, then rinse in clear warm water, then cold until it is quite cold. Follow with a nice rub—and you're all right and your skin will look the part.

MRS. E. W.: YES, YOU CAN USE a hairdressing artifice to give the nose a less broadened look. Dress it high up on the crown of the head and drawn rather tightly over the ears. This lengthens the entire face in appearance.

-for Feathers and Furs

ENERGINE cleans the finest feathers like new if you dip them thoroughly in this colorless liquid dry cleaner and then dry on a clean cloth, or before a fan.

Furs regain their natural life and attractiveness when cleaned with Energine saturated in corn meal and rubbed through the hair to the skin. Absolutely harmless to the finest furs. The dirt is dissolved by the Energine and collected by the meal. The fur is then thoroughly brushed. Stroke down the hair with cloth moistened with Energine. Passing a warm (not hot) iron over the fur brings out full lustre. Good results can be obtained without the meal. Fanning by hand, or electric fan quickly brings each hair to its natural life lustre.

Keep Energine on hand for scores of prompt cleaning uses. A pure, colorless liquid that will not injure the finest most delicate fabric or garment. Large 35c bottle.

EASTER CONFECTIONERY.

THE raw materials of many a fancy confection in the shops cost often not one-tenth of what is charged for the product. For instance, there were chocolate Easter eggs on sale even before Lent, and one about the size of a goose egg cost $1.50. One of two pound size cost $7, and there were several grades between these two.

The raw material in that $1.50 egg will not cost 10 cents. The rest represented skill, rent, and other shop expenses. Chocolate apples much smaller than the ordinary apple, in fancy wrapping and box, were priced at 50 cents. Maple patties of large size and piped in different ways cost $1.75 a dozen, and one had to order them a day or two in advance. All candies are best when fresh.

Practice sheet, two cones filled with sugar, home made chocolate eggs and confectioner's eggs, and sugar flowers.

A fondant made of one pound of sugar, one-half cup of water, and one-half cup of glucose would make several dozen of those patties. The home candy maker could find some way of forming them in a rather flat bottomed cup or in some such way, since she would not be likely to have the special utensil the candy maker uses for dropping fondant in patties.

How about the piping, pink, green, white, and so forth? All that is required for this is what is called royal icing, the raw materials of which are nothing but egg whites, confectioner's XXXX sugar, and a bit of acid. The utensil you make yourself. It is a paper cone with a small opening at the point.

To make this cone cut a four inch strip from a heavy sheet of white writing paper of typewriter size. Take it in your left hand, grasp the left upper corner with the right hand, and roll it over as you would were you going to fold it down to make a perfect square. Roll the edge under, then fold the rest around the cone thus made.

Some fold the tip so that it is closed and then cut off so as to leave a little hole to press the sugar through. By different kinds of pressure a great variety of effects can be secured. I think it best to fold the cone so as to have a tiny hole.

If you hold the fold over tight while you drop into the cone a heaping tablespoon of royal icing, which you may have tinted, it is not necessary to paste the paper in any way, although I have seen directions which said to do so. In watching practical pipers, working for a prize, make and fill cones, perhaps having half a dozen before they began work, I saw them hold the paper firm, fill the cone, fold over from front edge toward back and higher part, then the sides a little and the top down over, giving in all several folds on which to press down with the thumb of your right hand, while you hold the cone in your right hand and guide it with your left.

One of the prettiest things to do on an iced cake or on an Easter egg is writing. To write with both hands, as it were, and with such a medium as royal icing is none too easy, but it is worth trying to do. If you are tired, perhaps your hand will tremble and the line will waver. If you hold the cone high and press the sugar out it will curl. You must have a clean point to your cone and then barely touch it to the cake or egg before you press on the top, and then draw the point around to make the letters. If you draw too slowly the line will be too big; if you draw the point too rapidly the line will break.

It is easier to write with a cream icing, it seems to me, but it is not easy for any one who does not have time to keep in practice. Why do it then? For many reasons, a few of which may appear here.

About keeping the point of your cone clean. If you are a rapid worker and know how you may not need the damp cloth to wipe it off—when it needs it. But a royal icing dries quickly. The contents of a small cone will harden in a half hour so that the icing would be like a rock almost.

In a story, read some time ago, there was a description of how a young girl iced and piped cakes, and it told how she dipped the point of her cone first in boiling water and then in cold water, evidently to soften and then stiffen again. I have seen professionals lay aside one cone, take another, and then when they went back to the first wet by the quickest dipping in cold water.

When the royal icing is to stand ready for filling cones, say in a bowl, it should always be covered with a damp cloth to keep it from glazing and hardening on the surface.

It is much easier to work with paper cones than with the icing gun or syringe, except when you wish to get big borders and perhaps not then, if you can cut the points so as to get different effects. But the metal utensil is best for butter borders and all that. If one wanted to pipe a baked ham with lard, or a seasoned fat, the utensil would be best, but not indispensable, for heavy brown paper cones could be used. There is less waste and no utensil to wash with the cone because all you have to do is unfold the paper and scrape off the icing.

A woman who has an hour or two to spend and knows how to beat icing sugar into egg white so that some dropped from the spoon would hold its shape and not smooth out and mix with the rest can ice and decorate a cake and even write a name on it so as to be quite pleased with herself. Another day she will do better yet, and by and by, when she wants to make a nice gift to some one who has all that money can buy, or another who has no truly nice eye gratifying things to enjoy in the way of food, she can present such with a cake of her own decoration, and with her own individual touches to show that it did not come out of a shop. She can be sure that she will expend in money only about a tenth of what a cake of equal quality would have cost when made for her by a professional. The discipline of doing the work is splendid.

Young bakers in learning the trade of icing do not make their trials on cakes, but on a tin plaque. In the picture there is an inverted aluminum cake pan covered with experiments. It does very well for a practice sheet. The sugar thus used need not be wasted, and if the first lines or ornaments made are peculiarly bad, all that is necessary is to scrape them off quickly with a small spatula and put them into the bowl of icing.

After one gets used to making royal icing it is easy to make, say a dozen cup cakes, prepare the icing for them, put half on in the regular way, and the rest by means of paper cone or cones. A little coloring paste may be used in this latter part. It takes but a tiny bit for pink flowers or lines or light green for leaves. For a child's party each cake could have a different name put on the white icing in pink. There would not be really much extra work, since beating the sugar together is the real work; the manipulation of the cone need be but play.

If women would take the pains to do just such things as these, I believe they would become more interested in the great art of cookery and their work in everything they may do in cooking be improved.

It would seem that people like a gift of food almost as well as anything they can receive. We need the nice things in sugar for men who are breaking off the alcoholic habit, and we have good testimony to prove that young men would never acquire this habit if they had good things in sugar to eat.

It is time we realized that three-quarters of our use of sugar, and perhaps more, is in things that are cheap and even shabby.

Whether we want to make Easter cakes or eggs of sugar, piping them with taste is worth while. Little lily of the valley blossoms may be made on a cake by pressing sugar out of a cone without moving it, until a good bead is formed, and then some little dots of sugar put around the top of that. The leaves must be of tinted sugar and can be made by pressing the cone in such a way as to get a ribbon. Two of these ribbons may be so joined and made smaller at each end by rapid movement of the cone as to get a form that looks like a leaf.

Orange blossoms, rose buds, and many other flowers in sugar may be purchased and stuck on to a cake before the icing dried. Some of these like forgetmenots cost little, but made for less, while others may cost 5 cents apiece.

Melted fudge, cream chocolate icing, and fondant may be used for molding eggs for the children's Easter, and these may be put in a nest of spun sugar, or several sorts of tiny eggs may be purchased. To mold these eggs of fondant make a small ball and roll it in your hands, first rubbed in confectioner's sugar, and when a perfect smooth ball is formed it is easy to make it egg shape.

Royal Icing.

It is well for a beginner to start with a small quantity of royal icing, as when it is made just for ornamentation it hardens rapidly. One cup of sifted confectioner's XXXX sugar and one egg white are all that is needed to make it, although a drop or two of lemon juice or a pinch of cream of tartar is by some considered essential. The more common proportions, especially when an amount sufficient for icing a loaf of cake and also ornamenting it is made, are two cups of sugar and two egg whites. The sugar, used a tablespoon at a time, should be added to the egg white at the start without any first whisking of the egg. A wire spoon is the best utensil to use and a rimmed soup plate or small platter. To tint this icing take out a small portion, mix with coloring paste, and then mix with any quantity desired. The cup of sugar is the approximate amount required.

The icing when ready for the cones must be stiff enough to hold up. For writing on a cake it must not be too stiff or it cannot be pushed through the tiny opening. It may be stiffer for borders. It needs to be least stiff for tops of cakes, more for the sides, and the stiffness required in the latter case, and secured by adding a little more sugar, is about right for the writing on cakes. Nine-tenths of this business must be learned by practice to one-tenth precept.

Chocolate Fudge.

A chocolate fudge is really a chocolate fondant, and when made so as to be soft may be worked in many shapes. It becomes too hard if it is too hot when first beaten. Let it cool a bit. But any sugared-off fudge may be melted in a double boiler by adding a tablespoon of boiling water or sirup, and then beaten smooth for an icing or to manipulate in various ways. A fudge which sugars too soon to pour out in a sheet may thus be melted.

To make fudge, cut up two ounces of bitter chocolate into the saucepan, add to it one-fourth cup of milk or cream, and stir over a bit of fire until chocolate is smooth, lifting from fire with the stirring if it boils. Add another quarter cup of milk and stir smooth, then add two cups of sugar and one-half cup of glucose or corn sirup. Stir until sugar is completely dissolved and cook until it forms a firm ball in water, or to 238 degrees. Take from the fire, let cool a bit, add a teaspoon of vanilla, stir in, and after the whole has cooled a half, beat with a whisk until the fudge grows gray or lighter, then pour out in a sheet.

If you beat much after it lightens in shade it will not spread. Here is where you must act on the minute. If soft this may be worked into egg shapes, which may be dipped in a melted white fondant or in plain chocolate.

Plain Fondant.

Add one-half cup of water and the same of white corn sirup to two cups of sugar in a saucepan, stir until sugar is dissolved. The stirring is all done over the fire; be careful that none of it is done after the sugar boils. Cook to 238 degrees and pour out on a warm platter—a cold one will break. Some hold back the last drop or two for a good reason, long to explain. Allow this to cool to the lukewarm stage, then work with a silver fork until it reaches a creamy stage, then put away under a damp cloth to ripen or keep for use any time within a week. If this grows stiff and unmanageable soon after the beating commences and granulates you cannot use it for the intended purposes, but it may be melted and well beaten for icing cakes, etc. It may also be cooked over for a caramel.

There are many nice points connected with the making of fondant which only become significant to those who try to make it to perfection. There is an article about making it in the February number of the Journal of Home Economics.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

By Elizabeth O. Hiller.

Fish Chowder.

Order four pounds of fresh cod, halibut, or haddock skinned. Leave the head and tail on the smaller fish. Cut off the head and tail and bone the fish. Cut the fish in two inch pieces, cover, and set aside. Put head, tail, and bones into a stew pan, add two cups of cold water and bring slowly to the boiling point. Let simmer twenty-five minutes. Cut a two inch cube of salt pork in small pieces, try out, add one onion thinly sliced, and saute five minutes, stirring constantly. Strain fat into a stew pan. Parboil potatoes five minutes. There should be one and one-half quarts of one-half inch cubes. Drain, add to fat in stew pan, pour over two cups of boiling water, and cook five minutes. Strain stock from bones into chowder, add the prepared fish, cover, and simmer ten minutes. Add one quart of scalded milk, one tablespoon of salt, one-eighth teaspoon of white pepper, and one-fourth cup of butter. Bring to the boiling point and serve with crisp crackers.

The recipe will make twelve portions. If the chowder is the chief dish at luncheon serve pepper or cabbage relish with it. Individual lemon pies will furnish a pleasing dessert with half cups of coffee.

Pepper Relish.

Cut a slice from the stem ends of one dozen green or red mild bell peppers. Remove the seeds and white portion. Pass through the meat chopper. Peel and finely chop seven firm white onions. Add to pepper pulp and cover with boiling water. Let stand five minutes, then drain. Make a weak solution of vinegar and water, allowing one part vinegar to two parts water. Pour over the pepper mixture and bring to the boiling point. Let stand ten minutes, then drain well. Mix one cup of vinegar, one and one-half cups of sugar, and one and one-half tablespoons each of salt and white mustard seed, add to the pepper mixture, bring to the boiling point, let boil three minutes. Then turn into sterilized half pint glass jars. Seal and store.

The fall is the most desirable season of the year to make this relish, as the peppers and onions are home grown and can be purchased for much less than those now found in the market.

Rice Specialty.

Put three cups of water into a saucepan, season with one teaspoon of salt, and bring to the boiling point. Add one cup of washed rice slowly, so as not to retard the boiling process. Sift in one-half tablespoon of curry powder. Let boil gently twenty-five minutes uncovered, stir often with a fork to prevent scorching at bottom of pan. When rice is tender and just before serving add one-fourth cup of grated Swiss cheese and a few grains of cayenne or one-fourth teaspoon of paprika. Turn into a deep hot serving dish. Finely chop half a medium sized white onion, sauté a golden brown in three tablespoons of butter, stirring constantly, then rub through a strainer over rice and serve at once and hot.

Potatoes Baked in Cheese Sauce.

Melt two tablespoons of butter in a saucepan, add two tablespoons of flour, and stir until smooth and creamy; add gradually one and one-half cups of milk, while stirring constantly, until sauce is smooth; season with one-half teaspoon of salt, one-fourth teaspoon of paprika, and a few drops of tabasco sauce; continue stirring until seasonings are well blended. Then add one-fourth cup of grated cheese. Remove from the range. Wash, pare, and thinly slice six medium sized potatoes; finely chop one medium sized green sweet bell pepper. Put a layer of potatoes in the bottom of a well greased baking dish and sprinkle lightly with chopped pepper; repeat alternate layers until all are used. Then pour over the thick cheese sauce. Carefully lift the mixture to allow sauce to flow through. Sprinkle top with chopped English walnut meats and dot over with one and one-half tablespoons of butter. Bake in a moderate oven until potatoes are thoroughly cooked.

Hot Potato Biscuit.

Sift together one cup of bread flour, four teaspoons of baking powder, and one-half teaspoon of salt. With the tips of the fingers rub into the dry ingredients two tablespoons of shortening, add one cup of warm (not hot) mashed potatoes, mix well and add gradually one-half cup of milk, stirring with a knife until a soft dough is formed; if dough appears too dry add more milk by the tablespoonful. Turn on a well floured board, knead slightly, and roll to one-half inch thickness. Shape with a small biscuit cutter (measuring one and one-half to two inches in diameter). Dip cutter into flour between each cutting. Arrange them in a buttered shallow pan close together, brush tops lightly with cold milk, and bake fifteen minutes in a hot oven.

Cheese Biscuit.

Sift together two cups of flour, one and one-half tablespoons of baking powder and one teaspoon of salt. With the tips of the fingers rub in two tablespoons of shortening, add one cup of grated cheese and one and one-fourth cups of milk and water mixed (equal measure). Stir with a knife until well blended. Turn on a floured board and roll lightly to one-third inch thickness; shape with a small biscuit cutter (dip cutter in flour between each cutting). Set close together in a well greased pan, brush tops with milk, and bake fifteen minutes in a hot oven. Serve with green salads, letture, endive, cress, etc.

More baking powder is required in this mixture than in similar baking powder biscuits on account of the large quantity of cheese it contains.

Banana Salad.

Peel bananas (plantain or red bananas are preferable), scrape off the stringy portions with a silver knife, and cut croswise in three pieces, cut each piece in nine lengthwise strips, and roll carefully in finely chopped pecan nut meats, delicately seasoned with salt and paprika. Dispose thick slices of oranges (peeled and seeds removed) in individual nests of lettuce heart leaves. Over these pile bananas and marinate all with French dressing made with lemon juice instead of vinegar, and omit garlic. Serve with mayonnaise. Serve cheese straws with this class of salads.

Molded Spinach Salad.

Wash thoroughly and pick over carefully one-half peck of spinach; pack into a stew pan and heat gradually, let cook in its own juice, if young and an early variety (if late spinach is used, which is tougher and more hardy, cook in boiling salted water) twenty-five minutes. Drain and press out all the moisture possible; chop fine and season with French dressing, adding more salt if needed. Pack solidly into small timbale molds, chill. Remove from molds and dispose in dainty nests of lettuce heart leaves; garnish with rings of hard cooked eggs; press the yolk through a sieve and pile in a pryamid on top of each mold. Pipe mayonnaise around the base. Serve cold.

Lobster Salad.

Remove the meat from a two pound cold boiled lobster and cut into one-half inch cubes. To this add four hard cooked eggs cut in uniform pieces, one tablespoon of finely chopped parsley, one tablespoon of finely chopped chives. Arrange lobster dice in a nest of well bleached chicory or lettuce heart leaves disposed on a shallow serving dish; cover with eggs, then sprinkle over with parsley and chives and mask with mayonnaise dressing. Sprinkle with lobster coral or paprika.

Cream Sauce.

Put three tablespoons of butter in a sauce pan. When melted and frothy, add three tablespoons of flour mixed with one-half teaspoon of salt and one-fourth teaspoon of paprika. Stir until well blended, then gradually add one and one-half cups of thin hot cream or milk, stirring constantly until sauce is smooth and glossy. Add one-half teaspoon of finely chopped parsley and a few drops of onion juice.

Braised, Boned, and Stuffed Shoulder of Lamb.

Have the bones removed from the shoulder leg and scrag of spring lamb. Lay a roll of bread stuffing in the center of the boned meat, roll and truss into shape and braise in the Dutch oven or casserole as follows: sprinkle with salt and rub it in with the hands, sprinkle with pepper and dredge with flour. Heat some drippings in the Dutch oven and brown the rolled meat richly, turning often that it may brown evenly. Lift the meat and place a wire rack (wire tea stand) under it, strew around one-fourth cup each of celery cut in small pieces, carrot cut in small cubes, one small onion thinly sliced, two sprigs of parsley, one-half teaspoon of pepper-corns, and a tiny bit of bay leaf. Pour around four cups of brown stock. Cover and cook slowly about three hours. Remove to serving platter, strain liquor, and add sufficient boiling water to make one and one-half cups. Make a brown sauce by melting one-fourth cup of butter in a sauce pan, cook until the butter is well browned, add one-third cup of flour, stir until well blended and flour is browned, then add gradually, while stirring constantly the strained stock. Season with pepper, salt and one-half teaspoon of soup and sauce flavoring. Serve sauce in a sauce boat.

To Prepare Shrimps.

Remove the intestinal vein from each shrimp [this is a little dark intestine extending the entire length of the outer edge of the shrimp] by removing a thin layer of the pink skin, it is plainly visible. Break the shrimps for this purpose into small pieces and sprinkle over them two teaspoons of lemon juice. Use as directed.

If canned shrimps are used, turn them from the can and pour over boiling water. Let them stand one minute. Drain and proceed as with fresh shrimps.

Camp Stories Contest.

Your son, your brother, your husband, or your sweetheart in the service undoubtedly has told you some amusing incident that has occurred in his camp. Undoubtedly, too, there are ever so many stories originating in camp that are still untold. This contest is especially open to the soldier himself if he has a good camp story to tell. It is open also to every one who has been told a good camp story of actual happening. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Camp Stories Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

In the Last Stages.

One of the nurses in a hospital was making the rounds of the wards during the flu siege and one poor fellow was hidden under the covers, not even his head in sight.

"What's the matter?" she asked solicitously.

"I'm too sick to be nursed," was the reply.

Passing the Sentry.

While stationed at Kansas City, Mo., I was acting as sergeant of the guard one night, when several fellows came in late on their pass. One bright private lined them all up and gave the order so the sentinel on duty could hear: "Detail on special duty! Forward, march!" The guard never questioned them at all, but let them go by.

Peeling Potatoes.

Two sailors—one from Kentucky, the other from Texas—were sitting outside of the galley peeling potatoes.

Suddenly the Kentuckian threw down his knife. "I'm through," he cried. "This navy life is awful. I'll never peel another potato. They can't make a man do anything."

The Texan calmly went on peeling. Finally he looked up at the indignant boy beside him and drawled, "You're right. They can't make a man do anything, but they can make him sorry he didn't.

He Got the Butter.

At my first breakfast aboard a battleship I asked for butter. No one paid any attention, so I did not ask any more. At the end of the table sat a gob who shouted out, "Put a jib on the grease." Then the butter was passed to him.

Dressed in White.

One day last summer a friend who happened to be dressed in white accompanied me to one of the drill grounds near Camp Zachary Taylor to watch the boys drill. A platoon near us was called to attention. Suddenly came the command, "Right dress," and every man turned his head to the right, which happened to be towards us.

My friend at once became extremely nervous and edged away from the row of eyes, saying, "Come, we had better leave."

"Why, what is the matter?" I asked.

"Didn't you hear him?" she said. "He said 'white dress,' and they are all looking at me."

A FRIEND IN NEED

Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend indeed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be glad to be of service to you. Please write on but one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to "The Tribune," but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

On a Lonely Ranch.

"I live on a lonely ranch and miss the privilege of the public library, and I cannot afford to subscribe for the periodicals. I would be so glad to receive any of the magazines that have been read and laid by. MISS D. H."

Any magazines or books you have to give would be greatly appreciated by this girl so far away. Write to me for her address and send her some good ones.

Book of Teenie Weenies.

"I am wondering if there is some little invalid who would like to have a thirty-two page book made from the Teenie Weenies of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. I would be glad to send to the child wishing it. MRS. P. J."

Some child is sure to wish the book so kindly offered.

A Bath Spray Brush.

"Would you ask through your department if there is any one who could spare a bath spray brush—the kind that can be used without a bath tub—one that has a bulb to start the water through the hose? It is to be used for an invalid who cannot buy those things and who has to take spinal baths. I could send both magazines and quilt pieces to any one wanting them. "N. J."

The address of the writer is at the service of any one who can supply the article.

Formula for Rose Jar.

For the benefit of M. F. and others this formula is given. May I ask that those who are likely to want this formula for a rose jar cut it out and keep it:

Gather rose petals when the roses are in full bloom, but not when damp with dew; pack them in a jar in layers two inches deep, sprinkling two tablespoons of fine dry salt upon each layer. Continue this, adding petals and salt daily, until the jar is full. Keep in a dark, cool place until a week after the last installment goes in; then turn the contents of the jar upon a board platter and toss together until the mass is loosened. Put with it the ingredients given below, pack in a clean jar, and put away to ripen. If kept covered it will keep fragrant for twenty years.

Formula for spices, etc., for potpourri: Half ounce of violet powder, rose powder, and heliotrope powder; one ounce of orris root, half teaspoon each of cloves and mace, quarter teaspoon of cinnamon, twenty drops each of oil melissa and eucalyptus, ten drops each of oil of chiris and bergamot, four drops of oil of roses, two drachms of alcohol.

The party who made the request has been given a dog, so others may make application.

This kind offer will be eagerly seized upon by some bird lover.

If there is a baby buggy to be had I know this plea will meet with ready response.

Attention, Boy Scouts! What can you do to help out your brother in need?

Etiquette

By Elizabeth Van Rensselaer.

A COMPLETE TROUSSEAU.

Questions on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

A "DEVOTED READER" writes to request that I publish once again a list of the things necessary for a complete trousseau. Perhaps the following suggestions will prove useful to other June brides who want a modest yet adequate outfit.

For her linen chest, a modern young woman will need four table cloths (three of them 2x2 yards, the other 2x3 yards); two and a half dozen napkins (eighteen of ordinary size and quality, the other dozen handsomer to match the large table cloth), one table pad, three luncheon sets (centerpiece and doilies), one of these to be daintier than the others, for "best"; twelve tea napkins, sideboard and tray covers, two carving cloths, a dozen dish towels and as many glass towels, six dishcloths, twelve dusters, twelve bedroom towels and the same number of guest towels, eight bath towels, a dozen washcloths, four bureau scarfs, six pairs of hemstitched cotton sheets, two pairs of hemstitched linen pillow slips and four pairs of cotton ones, four bedspreads, three pairs of blankets and two comforters.

And for her wardrobe trunk a tailored suit and hat, with one dark blouse and three or four washable ones, one cloth dress and one of silk or satin for afternoon wear (and a suitable hat), an evening gown (clever brides of today often choose their wedding frocks with this future purpose in mind), and an evening wrap if her purse permits, two or three simple wash house dresses, a good "allover" coat, a fur scarf, two white wash skirts and a knitted sweater, a hat for sport wear, a dress of some sheer material for midsummer afternoons, street shoes, three pairs of slippers, one pair for dancing and the theater, one for teaing, and one for the house; one pair of white oxfords or high shoes for summer outings, six changes of underwear—nightgowns, shirts, brassieres, envelope chemises; two pair of corsets, one dark petticoat and two light ones, six pairs of black stockings and six of white, a light negligée, a warm bathrobe, a pair of bedroom slippers, all the usual gloves, collars, cuffs, handkerchiefs, and, last and most important, the costume for the great day itself, the wedding gown—veil, lingerie, stockings, slippers, and gloves.

A. N.: In the case of the loss of a parent, the period of mourning is one year. However, it is not considered irreverent to attend informal and small entertainments toward the end of that year, but, here as elsewhere, it seems to me that a person must decide what to do for himself, and that one who truly mourns the loss of a beloved mother or father can find no real enjoyment in frivolous undertakings.

F. J. R.: Usually a bridegroom asks his brother or his bosom friend to attend him as best man at his wedding. He may, however, if he chooses, ask his fiancée's brother to perform this duty for him.

* *

M. T. H.: All well bred girls rise instantly when an older woman enters a room where they are sitting. In acknowledging an introduction you need only smile and say, "How do you do, Mrs. Jones?"

* *

S. S. D.: It is still correct for dinner guests to leave their napkins on the table by their plates when leaving the dining room. An arctic explorer, whom I once saw at a dinner, chucked his under the table (probably for polar bears to lick), but we, used to more moderate climes, might better cling to the old custom.

Better Than Calomel

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive colored tablets.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel, but to let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Most headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." Note how they "clear" clouded brain and how they "perk up" the spirits. 10c and 25c a box. All druggists.

Doris Blake Says

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

If you were born this week you are Intellectual.

If you were born during the week beginning today you are still under the influence of the sign Aries (March 21-April 20). Aries meaning the ram, it is only natural you should partake to some extent of the well known qualities of this animal and with most of you it is true that once you enter a fight you will stick to the finish.

You have a good idea of form and outline, much executive ability, and grasp of general details, but you do not like to take short stitches. Basting is more your line, leaving some one else to do the more detailed work. If a woman you would make a good milliner, dressmaker, or designer, but would need some capable assistant to do the real work. Not that you are lazy—far from it—but your grasp is large and fingers and brain too big for the details of production.

In whatever channel of occupation your life may run, people had best let you alone and allow you to work your own ideas out, and in your own way, if they would get the best possible fruits of your genius. You would jab the handle of your brush through the canvas if any interference became too pronounced. If you were a milliner, you would throw a bunch of flowers into the stove if your customer bothered you too much. You love approbation, and if this is given you, you are tireless in your efforts for your employers; but you do resent being driven.

You are domestic, kind in your home, and patient with your own children, but not overly so with those of others. You will endure a great deal of hair-pulling at home, but little outside. You are fond of music and poetry. You are a fair specimen of a good all around individual.

You are faithful, just, sympathetic, and kind. You are a strong thinker and reasoner and somewhat opinionated, and not apt to believe everything that people tell you. You are fond of good living, rather nervous at times, and may gain the reputation—undeserved, of course—of being a crank. You have many friends.

Your union with Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 22), provided your stations in life are about the same, will be a happy one. A union with one of your own sign would be a sympathetic one, unless you both tried to be "boss." Gemini (May 22-June 22) and Libra (Sept. 24-Oct. 23) will make good life companions for you.

The two most fortunate times in the year for you to begin new enterprises would be the two weeks beginning April 13 and Nov. 29. Your colors are blue, pink, and white, and your birthstone the diamond.

Suspicious of Ed.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 16, and considered pretty by most boys. I have been engaged to a boy three years my senior for two months. He took me to a dance last night and insisted that we leave at 11 o'clock, much against my wishes. I learned today, through a friend, that Ed returned to the dance and took another girl home. I still love him, however, and feel that he doesn't know that I am aware of what he did. Should I demand an apology? R. F. W."

Are you sure that it was not one of thse frameup stories that trouble-making friends are apt to be guilty of? Give him a chance to explain. Perhaps it is a case of where he was dragged into taking the girl home against his will. I think you are young to be engaged, anyway.

Can't Take Her Out.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a boy 18 years old and the girl I like mostly is close to 15. I think a whole lot of her and the way she talks she thinks the same of me. Her mother does not allow her to go out with boys, so how do you suppose I could encourage her mother to let me take her out? She is a pretty girl and is well liked by every one, especially by myself. "CARL."

Don't encourage the girl against her mother's objections or you will succeed in having the mother as an enemy instead of a good friend. Wait until the girl is a year or two older and in the meantime adapt yourself energetically to your chosen life work so that when the girl is a little older you will be able to impress her as a successful young man and you will be in a position financially to take her about and even to discuss matrimony.

Have No Amusements.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are two girls of 13. We have no amusements with which to pass the evenings. Please suggest some game or something that will keep us entertained for a while besides card games, as we are quite tired of them. C."

Card games are a rather sophisticated form of entertainment for 13 year olds, it seems to me. Send me a stamped, addressed envelope and I'll give you the names of three or four different books on games and entertainments which will supply many suggestions to you for the necessary amusement.

You Can Smile at Them.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 14, just finishing the grammar grades. Up to now I have never paid any attention whatever to boys other than a curt nod and a 'Hello' when I met them on the street. Boys do not like this type of girl. They prefer one who would flirt on the least provocation. Should I be lowering the standard I have set for myself if I became the type they like—that is, if I did not go too far? GOLDILOCKS."

No, dear Goldilocks, don't you let anybody tell you that nice boys prefer girls who "flirt on the least provocation." They don't. Ask your big brother about it. If you haven't a big brother, ask you pet boy cousin. They'll tell you the truth. But why give them a curt nod? Why not a pleasant one instead?

HAT FOR OLDER WOMAN.

To be conservative and stylish at the same time is a difficult thing when it comes to hats which must be of our own make. They either look home made or they run into the extreme, and of course there is always the item of expense to be considered.

The hat shown here is inexpensive, conservative, and good style. The directions for the making follow: With a light canvas shape, which is in two pieces, crown and brim, together with a wide tipped wing (the shape of the wing shown in the hat on Fig. 4), black straw braid, and glossy black ribbon, you make the complete hat.

Take the canvas crown and beginning at the top center braid the crown closely and carefully to below the middle of the side crown. (This is shown in Fig. 1.) Working up and down braid the brim, being careful to sew the braid securely without breaking its surface. Then fit the brim over the crown and tack in place. (The braiding of the brim is shown in Fig. 1.)

Run a double length ribbon through the side turnings of the wing, in this way banding the whole lower wing as shown in Fig. 3. Be careful to pull the ribbon taut over the sides of the brim and sew the ribbon on the inside of the hat; this is hidden in the finished hat under the lining.

When you have sewed in the hat lining, the hat is complete.

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

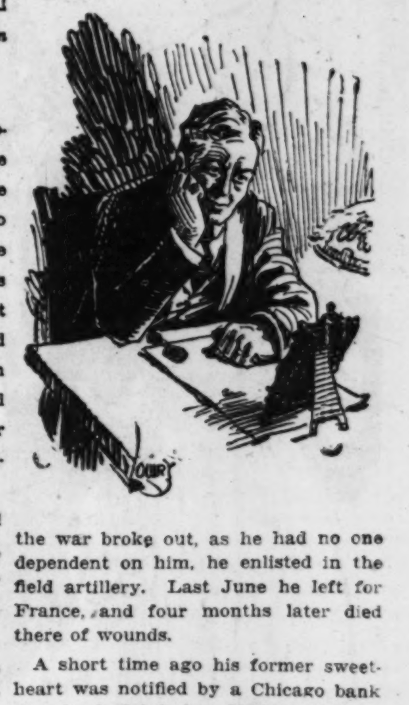
TESTING HIS AFFECTION.

THE story I am going to tell happened in Chicago a long time ago. A young girl was to have been married fifteen years ago last June, to a young man whom she greatly loved, and who loved her as much in return. But, like a great many girls, she was foolish and liked to tease her lover, to test his affection for her, as she said, and the method she took was to accompany another friend to an entertainment, after telling her lover she was not going.

She knew he would find it out, and he did. A foolish quarrel ensued, which severed their friendship. Thousands of times she has regretted it, but too late.

Several years later she married a man whom she did not love. Shortly after their marriage they left Chicago to live on a farm in northern Wisconsin. After living there for twelve unhappy years her husband suddenly died, leaving her with four children to support. She immediately came to Chicago to get work so as to keep her family together.

During these fifteen years her lover had remained a bachelor, and when the war broke out, as he had no one dependent on him, he enlisted in the field artillery. Last June he left for France, and four months later died there of wounds.



A short time ago his former sweetheart was notified by a Chicago bank that he had left her $8,000 and some property which he owned. He had not seen her in all this time, but had heard through friends of her husband's death, and his last wish was that she should be sufficiently provided for.

Surely this was real love. E. C.

MAUDE MARTIN EVERS

By Maude Martin Evers.

EVE CHILCOTE, in the "Masquerader," wears some fetching costumes that might suggest a few changes in the spring wardrobe.

Do you remember the first part of the play where she tries desperately to reawaken her morphia-laden husband's love of the honeymoon stage? The negligee—airy and elusive—with which she aids her soft words? Well, it was not the negligee's fault that her efforts fell flat, for that was a masterpiece of chiffon and embroidery.

Eve, who is Miss John in everyday life, says: "The shortest change I have in the whole play is for that negligee and how I have muttered over those hooks!

From a single glance you can readily understand how complicated it would be to fasten on even in leisure, let alone in about three minutes. However, it repays in attractiveness all frenzied efforts. It is pale sand colored chiffon, embroidered in the same shade, and chinchilla fur is used effectively.

Another gown Miss John wears is an afternoon frock with a picture hat to match. Pearl gray chiffon with bands of squirrel fur, fur and embroidery making a delightful combination with the chiffon. The hat is truly lovelier upon closer inspection, orchid tulle lined with gray and an orchid uncurled ostrich plume encircling the crown with a gold and rose decoration of flowers by way of contrast.

Adele Ritchie, who played the part of the blonde vamp, Lady Lillian Astrupp, is sketched in one of her captivating moments. Alternating wide stripes of plain and figured chiffon—also orchid color—and the fur is chinchilla. Notice the little apron effect at the front of the skirt and the long coat of chiffon in back. The underbodice is figured silver and blue and the belt of blue and gold carries out the color scheme and adds a touch of distinction. Blouse, belt, skirt, and, coat are all separate.

Her small hat was orchid satin straw simply adorned with two uncurled ostrich feathers. The bag she carried was the same pattern as her bodice, the clasp a tiny bird cage complete with Polly inside.

My Most Embarrassing Moment.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moments Editor, Sunday Tribune, Chicago. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

Going Back Home.

Mine was longer than a minute, for it lasted a mile. At a party one rainy night I loaded my car with some friends to take them home. Shifting into first the old bus stood still and moved not. I pulled the lever into reverse and there it stuck, but the car did not. It started backward and, showing no inclination to go any other way, I could only stretch my neck and endeavor to keep it on the highway for the longest mile I have ever traveled. The way wasn't shortened any by the caustic comment of my friends nor by that of passing motorists who, thinking they were following my red light, suddenly found themselves about to bump into it. G. H.

Being a Good Sport.

It happened when I was on the police force in Ontario. I was strolling along my beat about 2 in the morning. As I was passing an automobile which was at the side of a restaurant I noticed two youths trying to pick the lock on the car. I therefore went up to them and inquired the trouble.

"We broke the key in this infernal lock," replied the elder.

I being naturally a good sport, held my flashlight for them while they tried to pick the lock with a wire. When their task was completed they gave me a dollar to get a cigar for myself.

I stood on the curb and watched them out of sight. Then a stout, well dressed man stepped out of the café and looking up and down the street exclaimed, "Who took my car?" J. N. S.

Time to Go Home.

A party of friends whom I had invited for the evening played cards till after 12 o'clock. My 4 year old son, who had fallen asleep on the couch, roused up and began to fuss.

"See here," said I, "I didn't invite these folks to hear you fuss."

"You didn't invite them to stay all night, either, did you?" he impertinently questioned. M. E.

Over the Limit.

It was the day before pay day, and as usual I was running on pretty low rations, having only 35 cents to eat dinner on, and get down to work the next morning. So I went into a lunch room where I frequently ate, told the waitress the state of my finances, and asked her what I could get the most of for my 30 cents. She advised a hot pork sandwich and coffee, which only amounted to 25 cents. When she had gotten a few feet away, I had a bright inspiration, and decided to augment my meagre meal by the addition of a dish of stewed corn, which in the pre-war days, was 5 cents, so called to her to bring me a dish of corn, also. She turned, and in stentorian tones, called warningly "It's a dime!" much to my embarrassment, but providing great amusement for the assembled diners. Needless to say, I went without the corn. R. S.

A Regular Breakfast.

One time my sister was with us over night. We prepared for breakfast what we usually ate, and she partook sparingly. She and I started to town on the car, and at a certain street she rose to get off. I asked her where we should go first, and she said, "I'm going first to a place to get something to eat, and I'll pay for a regular breakfast for you, too." G. F. T.

The Pick of the Batch.

A friend invited me to his daughter's wedding. He had four more marriageable girls.

After the ceremony, wishing to congraulate the bridegroom, I began thusly: "Young man, you have got the pick of the batch."

The looks the other four daughters favored me with may be imagined. I collapsed into my seat amidst an audible titter from the other guests. G. H.

PRUNING FRUIT TREES AND SMALL FRUITS.

To increase the yield of fruit and improve its quality, pruning, spraying, and fertilizing are absolutely necessary. Without proper pruning the plant exhausts itself in the production of wood; without spraying it falls a prey to disease and insect pests; without fertilizing it lacks vigor to resist its enemies and to supply the fruiting demands placed on it.

Fruit trees should be pruned dormant, that is, whenever the weather permits between Christmas and the first flow of sap in spring, the stone fruits preferably toward spring.

Young trees should be "hearted in" to develop five principal branches, with no two branching from the main stem at the same height. This eliminates weakening crotches. If a tree has been neglected, bears but little fruit and that of inferior quality, a radical reduction of wood is necessary that the sap formerly needed to sustain an excess of wood, foliage, and blossoms may be available for more and better fruit. This must be done gradually during two or three successive years.

Once a proper form is established, preferably open top to admit sun and air and to facilitate picking, fruit trees should have a general overhauling every two or three years. Remove the dead wood, branches which overhang others that extend from the parent limb immediately below and parallel, branches which cross others at awkward or interfering angles, limbs which endanger the tree by throwing it out of balance, and suckers direct from the trunk or heavy limb.

Any branch or limb removed must be cut off flush with the next larger limb or stem. If a stub is left, the bark cannot heal over it and it acts as the starting point for inner decay of the entire tree. Whether or not to coat large wounds is a disputed question with successful orchardists on both sides of the controversy. If large cuts are painted over, use only white lead, each coat being permitted to dry before the next is applied.

In the case of apples and pears, excess fruit may be removed for the better development of the remainder.

Peach trees should be pruned as the foregoing, in addition the young wood of eighteen inches or more may be reduced in length by about one-third.

The bramble fruits are blackberries, raspberries, dewberries, loganberries, and their variations and hybrids. They will bear fruit this year on the new canes of last year, and any older or younger wood competing with those for existence will only serve to reduce both the quality and quantity of fruit.

If they were not duly pruned immediately after fruiting last year, this should now be done without loss of time. Cut out at the bottom all old canes that have borne fruit and reduce the number of one year old canes to five or six—not over eight—in each cluster. Reduce the length of the laterals or side shoots to between twelve and twenty inches, depending on the position of the fruit in the species and variety.

Red and white currants will bear fruit this year on spurs which will start this spring from wood grown last year and the year previous.

If pruning was not duly attended to after the first heavy frost last autumn, it may still be done before the buds break this spring. Cut out all stems over three years old and enough of the younger to leave not more than six or eight main stems. Leave enough younger stems coming each year to replace the old and spent, letting them bear two years.

Black currants bear fruit almost entirely on the previous year's wood, and renewal must therefore be more frequent than for the red and white.

Gooseberries bear fruit on the wood of the previous year and on the spurs of older wood. Cut out at the base all branches that have borne fruit for two years, all branches which touch the ground, and all young shoots not required to make a total of five or six bearing branches. Head in the spurs of older branches where necessary to admit light, sun, and air, and to facilitate picking. If the work was not done last autumn it may still be done now before the buds break.

Grapevines produce fruit on wood to be grown this year, which will spring from the new wood of last year. They may still be pruned before the buds break, though it would better have been done in favorable weather during the winter.

For better exposure and convenience of culture, the prevalent method of training the vines is on trellises consisting of two or three heavy wires stretched between posts like fence wires. The main stem or trunk is grown to the desired height, leaving a cane of last year's growth on either side of the stem at each wire in the trellis. Each such cane should have from three to five buds and should not be allowed to cling to the wire by means of the tendrils, but should be loosely tied on.

All wood not necessary to insure a succession of one year old canes, as near the trunk as possible, must positively be removed if superior grapes in large quantities are desired. The only reason the wild grapes of this vicinity do not bear is that they are permitted to run to wood and foliage instead of being ruthlessly cut back as indicated.

The pruning equipment for all purposes consists of a curved pruning saw, a pair of lop shears, a pair of one-hand pruning shears—all the best tool steel and kept sharp—and a bamboo ladder of wide base and pointed top. The latter will serve best too for fruit picking.

Last Sunday's Planting Tables.

The mail indicates that much confusion was caused by the unfortunate planting guide in last Sunday's garden article. It was so hopelessly jumbled in the composing room that any correction without complete republication would be futile. Other important tasks do not admit of using the allotted space for it again. The trouble was caused by inserting celery, cabbage, kale, and parsley in proper alphabetical order and tacking their respective data on at the bottom of the table.

Bright Sayings of Children

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Ralph had been telling me all the things he wanted for his birthday. Finally after the event had passed he came in one day and I said: "Well, did you get all you expected?"

"I should say not," he replied. "I got some things, but there were a lot of ungot ones." J. R.

When grandpa and grandma returned to their home in a downstate village, a few days ago, they took little Robbie with them. The next day the bell on the church nearby began to toll. Grandpa came in from the barn, and inquired anxiously if anybody knew who was dead, when little Robbie spoke up excitedly: "I know who it is, it's Uncle Jim; he's been orful sick for a long time." M. A. W.

Catherine was convalescing and was still irritable. One of the other children was playing the phonograph. "Tell Betty to stop," she demanded. "That music tires my listener." M. C. R.

Chauncey was called out of bed early one morning, and he began yawning and stretching instead of putting on his shoes. His mother waited patiently for him to get his mind adjusted to the fact that getting up at that hour was no joke but an established regulation. But Chauncey kept on yawning and stretching, seemingly having no thought of getting into his clothes.

Finally his mother said: "Chauncey, why on earth don't you put on your shoes?"

"Well, mother," he replied, "I've got to take my extra-cises first."

Marion could not remember ever having seen an aunt of whom her parents had talked quite frequently.

Her mother asked, "Do you remember Aunt Alice?"

"I guess I don't," admitted Marion, and then added, "but I'm 'quainted with her." V. M. B.

My sister was chiding her small daughter for teasing her brothers. Alice listened restlessly. When my sister finished she asked, "Didn't you ever tease your little brothers, mama?"

"I never had any brothers," her mother replied.

"Oh," came the surprised answer, "Didn't they have any boys in those days." M. W. S.

* *

When mother asked Buddy why he was making such ugly faces at the little boy across the street, he said: "'Cause I want him to come and hit me."

"My gracious," said mother, "why do you want him to come and hit you?"

With a defiant air Buddy answered "So I can hit him." L. A. C.

A little boy came to my daughter's birthday party and seemed to enjoy himself tremendously. The height of his happiness seemed to be at the supper table, and after his third cup of cocoa, innumerable sandwiches, ice cream, and cake he groaned audibly, to the consternation of his mother, "Gee, I'm just getting filled up fine!" Don't Throw Away Your Old Shoes

Make Them Wear Like New—As Did This Canadian Officer.

A Canadian army officer, William Pemberton, of the famous Princess Pat Regiment, told of the extraordinary wear given him by a pair of army boots twice repaired with Neolin Soles.

"Six months of trench warfare under destructive conditions put the first pair of Neolin Soles out of business," said Lieutenant Pemberton, "but ordinary soles would have gone to pieces in much less time."

Don't throw away shoes that can be repaired. Have them re-bottomed with tough, durable Neolin Soles. Any cobbler or repairman will do the work for you. The price is no more than for soles that give less wear. Remember—Neolin Soles are created by science to be what soles should be. They are flexible and waterproof as well as durable. STRANGE WEDDINGS CONTEST.

Tell us about the strangest wedding you have attended—and the funniest. There's scarcely a wedding but has some humorous details. Tell your experience and that of friends. Ready for the Ceremony.

A minister was making hurried preparations one cool morning for a day out of the city when a couple from the rural district appeared at the door and timidly asked the pastor to marry them.

The minister looked at his watch and as he hurried to his study for his books he said to the bridegroom: "All right, take off your coat and stand up with the bride."

When he returned a moment later his astonishment may be imagined when he saw the bridegroom standing by the girl's side in shirt sleeves, looking embarrassed and apprehensive as to whether the ceremony included a fist fight.

The pastor did not realize that the coat worn by the bridegroom was not an overcoat. A. K.

Only an Uncle.

At a wedding I attended the widowed mother and her little son sat next to the bride at the festal board. During a lull in the conversation the boy, with big gray eyes and face aglow with excitement, cried out, "Mamma, are I got a pa now?" A roar of laughter followed, which evidently confused and embarrassed the bridegroom, for he tried to put sugar in his coffee with his fork. S. V.

Nothing New to Her.

The judge had just been elected to the bench. He took all his duties seriously, but being a bachelor, he thought it his special duty to admonish all wedding parties upon the seriousness of married life.

One day a pretty woman about 40 and a man came to his office to be married. The woman was self-possessed and sure of herself. The man was self-conscious and unsure of himself. The judge performed the ceremony and then began his set speech for the occasion. The bride seemed not to be paying proper attention to what he was saying. He turned to her and said: "Madam, I hope you realize the seriousness of this contract you are entering into:

"O, yes, judge," she answered; "I have been married three times before." R. M.

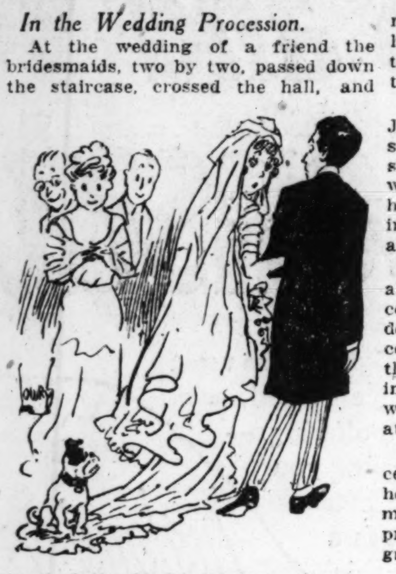
Not Worth a Rooster.

Having lived next door to the home of a minister, I was often called in to witness a hasty wedding.

On one occasion the prospective bride and bridegroom arrived in a farm wagon. After the ceremony was duly performed the bridegroom asked to be excused just a moment, and on returning from his wagon he said: "Parson, I have no money to give you, but here is a nice young rooster for your Thanksgiving dinner, and I will bring you a turkey for Christmas."

On several occasions the minister saw the same man in town, who seemed to avoid him. One day on meeting him face to face he said: "Parson, I may as well tell you that I am not going to bring that turkey; I have found out she was not even worth the rooster I gave you." M. E. J.

In the Wedding Procession.



At the wedding of a friend the bridesmaids, two by two, passed down the staircase, crossed the hall, and marched the length of the parlor to the place chosen for the ceremony, followed by the bride and bridegroom. As the bridal party crossed the hall the bride's small brother came in through a back door, followed by his inseparable companion, a poodle pup. In those days the train of a bridal gown was voluminous and nearly as long as the gown itself. As the bride stepped into the parlor the pup sat down upon her train and rode the whole length of the room. F. D. H.

Cheap if They Last.

This bridegroom went bargain hunting the day before the wedding and was well satisfied with the result. But as he knelt on the rostrum for the benediction the day of the ceremony, a snicker went through the audience, for there on the sole of his shoe in plain view were the words, "Reduced to 99c." F. D.

A Message from the Cook.

The guests at a large wedding breakfast did ample justice to the tempting viands as course after course was served and were loud in their praises of the Chinese cook, of whom the hostess was justly proud.

Finally the Chinaman brought in the huge wedding cake, which had been left entirely to his idea of construction. He was a converted Chinaman, and, desiring to honor the occasion as well as his conscience, he had written in artistic color and style across the heavy white frosting on top of the cake, "Prepare to meet thy God." An Indian Wedding.

An Indian wedding always has a touch of humor to most white people, but the wedding of Loney, a Tonkawa, to John, a Pawnee, was particularly funny.

Loney had attended a school for Indians and had many advanced ideas. John would have been willing to be married by Indian custom, but she insisted on a wedding by a minister with all the things that go therewith.

The agent's wife arranged to have it at the government house and played the wedding march herself. Loney was dressed in white mosquito netting over red calico, with the netting for a veil. At the last moment she could not resist wrapping her blanket around her. John wore his dark blue suit, the only one he had, with his hair in two braids with green strings.

No amount of persuading could get John to put the ring on Loney's finger, so the minister gave it to her and she put it on herself. John's replies were merely the Indian grunt. Loney had even provided pillows for kneeling during the prayer, but she knelt alone, John standing stiffly upright.

His face kept that impassive look all the time. Just as soon as the ceremony was over John strode to the door, leaving his bride to receive the congratulations alone. When we left the house to go home John was sitting in front of his teepee smoking his pipe with no apparent qualms of conscience at not having done his duty.

Our mirth had to be entirely concealed until we were well on our way home, for to laugh at an Indian is to mortally offend him. Poor John in his primitive way only acted as all bridegrooms would undoubtedly like too. D. F.

Worth All He Cost.

I recently married a colored couple. The bride had been our cook some years ago and I congratulated her thus: "You have a fine looking husband, Myra, and I wish you all kinds of good luck; I'm sure you deserve it."

"Thank you, judge. I sure am in luck in gettin' Dick. I've saved 'nuff money to buy my weddin' finery and him a new suit of clothes. An' I've rented a house an' paid a little on the fixin's; now when I gets a few more reg'lar washin' customers I'll sure be more than lucky." W. O.

Just a Pet Name.

When I was assisting the county clerk in the office last summer a couple came in for a marriage license. As they knew no one in town they asked where they could find a minister. The clerk said he would call one and the ceremony could be performed in the inner office. The minister arrived and the ceremony started. When it came time for the bridegroom to put the ring on her finger he got it on the wrong one. She corrected him with: "O you little pickle," and the ceremony proceeded. C. T.

No Bride, No Wedding.

The only serious fault of the bride-to-be was that she was never known to be on time. Every place she went she was late, and it had gotten to be such an old story that even the minister, knowing of her failing, attempted to remind her of it at the wedding rehearsal.

"You know," he said, "the wedding ceremony is at 8 o'clock sharp; you must be here on time."

She looked up at the clergymen with a twinkle in her eye.

"Well, there is one thing—this wedding cannot go on very well without me, can it?"

And the clergyman had to admit that she had the best of him. M. B.

They Took the Cake.

I attended the wedding of a Texas rancher's daughter ten years ago. The bride and bridegroom—just starting out for themselves—expected to live in a two room house minus carpets, curtains, or similar luxuries. Notwithstanding, two days before the ceremony, the engaged pair made a twenty mile trip to town in their farm wagon, where the bride selected a white satin wedding dress, the gift of the husband to be.

All the neighbors for miles around witnessed the ceremony, and immediately afterward the guests were seated on the long "gallery" for a regular feed. The tables were overburdened with goodies of every discription. The wedding cake, a huge affair covered with white frosting, was placed near the bride and bridegroom. As time went on I expected this elaborate confection would be cut, but the tables were eventually deserted, guests departed, and still the cake kept its place of honor.

The newly wedded pair set out for home, their presents carefully stored in the back of their wagon. The bride wrapped the cake, still uncut, in layers of paper and old towels, then holding it tenderly in her lap, she gave it a ten mile ride to the farmhouse where she would begin her housekeeping. R. A. C.

An Interrupted Ceremony.

The wedding ceremony was in full swing and the minister, turning to the bride had just uttered the words, "Do you promise to love, honor and obey?" when a shrill voice rang out, "Don't let him kid you."

It was the pet parrot belonging to the bride's young brother. The guests and the bridal party burst into laughter, while brother moved Polly to another part of the house.

It was quite a while before the minister could regain enough composure to finish tying the knot. F. B.

Quite a Laughable Affair.

It was an unusually bright, warm April day when my brother was marriel, two years ago. The younger brother, thinking he would start something, turned on the steam in the parlor just before the ceremony.

Everything was lovely until the most serious questions were being asked, and the bridegroom was getting nervous. We all noticed a grin on the minister's face and thought it odd. When the bride turned to have the ring slipped on her finger, she looked at the bridegroom's face and began to laugh and almost went into hysterics. The minister, maid of honor, and best man joined her in it.

The beads of perspiration were standing out like checkers on the bridegroom's face, his collar had melted so it was quite noticeable, his hair was disheveled, and he was in a state of desperation, for he was standing right next to the radiator.

Every one agreed that it was quite a lauughable affair. G. C.

Took to the Woods.

Some years ago I attended a wedding in a rural district. The bridegroom was painfully embarrassed and confused during the ceremony. It was a home wedding and a host of friends were present. His confusion was enhanced a hundred fold by their suppressed laughter. When the knot was tied he cast a quick glance about, then made a bolt for the door, took to the woods and never showed up until two days later. V. R.

After the Breakfast.

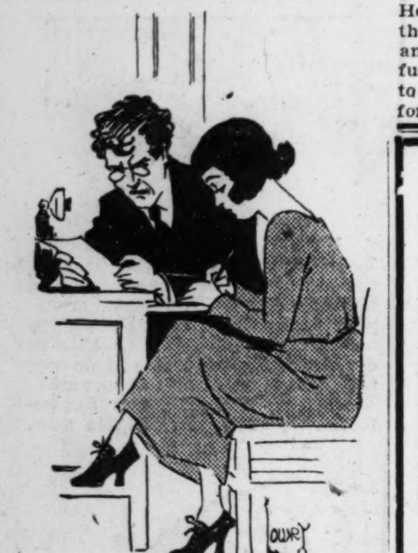
They had just been married and many friends congratulated them. When the wedding breakfast was over the guests loitered in different parts of the room. The best man chanced to be near the bridegroom, who huskily whispered, "I'm afraid that I made a bad mistake in marrying her." H. I. F.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

REFORMING THE OFFICE GROUCH.

To give the office "grouch" a taste of his own medicine, and the inclination to treat him as he treats everybody, is only natural, but having a like attitude toward him would contribute nothing either to the pleasant atmosphere of the office or towards changing the disposition of the grouch. The best he deserves from his associates is to be left severely alone.



Occasionally some intrepid person essays a reformation of the chronic grouch and sometimes to the astonishment of every one concerned, meets with some degree of success.

It was with admiration as well as a bit of amusement that I read a letter the other day from a 16 year old girl whose working experience has been limited to the last four months. After completing her stenographic course her first position was with a small concern where there was only one other girl employed. The other girl had been with the firm about a year, but she confided to the beginner that she was about to leave as she could stand no longer the meanness and crankiness of one of the men in the office.

He had been constantly nagging her, she said, and she only stayed on after the new girl arrived to show her how to do the work. After the older girl left, said the author of the letter, she got along very nicely with every one in the office, including the "grouch," who was at least civil to her. There was more work in the office than one girl could easily manage, so it was decided to hire a new one. This new girl was also a beginner in the business world and knew very little about how things should be done.

So, said my correspondent, between trying to do her own work, which was entirely new and somewhat difficult, and teaching the other girl her duties, her job was no sinecure, but when the grouch began taking his meanness out on her, it became unbearable. His crankiness made her irritable and his meanness made her angry, so that she found herself unable to treat him with any respect or consideration, and was provoked into insolence and a desire to irritate him whenever possible.

For the first month or two the other girl in the office had escaped his mean and sarcastic tongue, but when finally she too came in for a taste of it, both girls decided they would have to leave. However, my correspondent says, she thought she would give him a chance, and instead of being impertinent or refusing to answer him when he spoke to her, she decided to be kind to him for awhile, to ignore his grouchiness and act toward him in as friendly and pleasant a manner as possible. She admits that this was anything but easy, but she stuck to it for several weeks and persuaded the other girl to treat him likewise.

At first, she said, their change of manner seemed to have little or no effect upon him, but after a few days he grew embarrassed and then humble, and finally changed completely into a tolerant, genial human being, until now he is the friendliest and kindest man in the office. Both the girls have stuck to their positions and the grouch has just recommended them for raises.

The young business girl feels a justifiable pleasure in that she thinks she is responsible for this remarkable change.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

America's Most Notable Silk Event—Our Tenth Annual April Sale

How many who read this remember the first of these now nationally important Silk Sales, held in the old Champlain Corner Building—how many recognized our intention to make our Annual April Sale the chief Silk Event of the year in America, as it has been for several years past—and each year sees it add to its laurels. This year the styles and colorings strut forth laughing and gay, as though the war had never been—an expression of the times that only silks, so rich, so beautiful, so practical, can give forth a display that is tremendous—assortments such as you never saw—styles such as you never saw—weaves such as you never saw—and Black Silks, again in high favor, in heaping profusion—a display such as only this Great Silk Store can make—a display such as no woman can view without a quickening of the pulse—for Fashion's Caprice has evolved such beautiful, such graceful draping weaves, such brilliant novelties, that as one views the display you feel that silks can never be more beautiful. And now a word as to values, for the April Silk Sale has gained as great a reputation for the matchless savings it brings annually as for its unapproachable display. Note the 40-inch crepe de chines at 1.05, or the 36-inch satins at 1.45, or the taffetas at the same price—or any one of the scores of items that are offered, and then you understand why we are today the "Silk Center of America." Women instinctively know values—and so without fear or favor we invite every woman in or around Chicago to attend—as to the results we rest assured.

Corsets Fashionable & Practical As Well

Third Floor—Center

We say so advisedly, for we have in mind the Nemo corset, which under the hands of our skillful corsetieres brings to your figure the fashionable lines, as well as the health and comfort for which they are so justly famous. For Monday we feature Nemo self-reducing corsets, because they enable women of full or stout figures to preserve good health and good proportions by preventing an accumulation of excess flesh. The relief bands envelop, take up, reduce, and firmly support a heavy abdomen with utmost comfort, the self-reducing straps give additional support and produce a passive massage which eventually disposes of excess fatty tissue. You should not buy a Nemo corset without having it properly fitted. Our corps of Scientific Corsetieres, conceded to be quite the best in Chicago, are always at your service. The fittings here are free.

Nemo Wonderlift Style 552, as illustrated, has very low bust. The special function of this corset is to reduce an abnormal abdomen, due either through continual illness, which weakens the muscles, or through a falling of any of the organs. The Wonderlift bandlet, which is underneath the corset, tends to put these organs back and hold them in correct position, thereby once more establishing natural symmetry of the body. Sizes to 36, 6.00

Special Nemo Self-Reducing Corset, style 361, is for the average full figure, of medium height, with excess flesh evenly distributed, low bust, medium long skirt, of durable white coutil, well boned, sizes 22 to 36, at 3.50

Nemo Corset, style 511. This model is adapted to that larger class of women who do not particularly require abdominal reductions, but are too heavy in hip and thigh. This corset has bands of semi-elastic webbing and gores of elastic cloth in back next to back wires, whereby the corset skirt is made flexible and comfortable, while producing extreme reduction of back, hips and upper limbs. Very low bust. This model is in flesh color. Sizes to 36, at 6.00

YOUR BOOKS.

IT is only in the house of space and grandeur that the drawing room survives. We wonder if, after all, this formality will not be swept away along with kings and queens and royal knaves. Certainly, in the composition of many charming homes, the drawing room is conspicuous for its absence.

It is into that austere atmosphere that our casual friends are ushered; the old ones and the dear ones, are taken into the living room, and the best and biggest chair is theirs by right of inheritance. The drawing room, with its period furniture, accurate setting, and perfectly correct appointments, is like the polite face we put up to the world, while the living room is our real selves, to be revealed to our near friends. Why not, then, let everybody in? Why sentence some of them to the chill of the grander institution?

If there is a drawing room there must, of course, be a library, where one may read and write, where the head of the family may peruse his technical magazines, smudging up the good fresh air the while with his favorite cigar, and where councils may assemble to uphold the twenty-three points of the league of the household. No drawing room worthy of that refrigerated name is really a livable place. Arrange it as you will, say what you like, there is always present that stern rigidity that makes it impossible for a man to stretch forth his long legs comfortably, or for a woman to toss her gloves on the table without feeling as if she had committed a social error.

If one seeks livability as a quality of house arrangements, we fancy the combined living room and library will fill the bill. Books, beautifully and appropriately placed, are not only ornamental but are revelations to the character of the home dweller. They advertise his taste. If a family possesses no good books—dear me, what sort of a family is that? In what way do the members spend their leisure moments? What do they know? On what subject do they converse? And when the children come home from college, with an acquired taste for literature, or a taste thumped into them by stern instructors, what will they think of parents who confine their reading to newspapers and cook books? Voila! Go quickly, madame, and buy a book! Else, shortly, you shall be found out.

We recollect an experience; a woman furnished a new apartment and invited us thither. We thithered, and beheld beautiful mahogany bookcases. Spying a book with attractive title, we made for it. But it was only a sham. It was a counterfeit book, there to pose and fill up space. It seems these shells can be purchased. From that moment on we had no respect for the woman who would thus profane one of the great names of literature, displaying his signature on something that was nothing. Empty shelves are to be preferred to such makeshift and deceit.

The sketch today shows how built-in book shelves can be arranged. There are as many different variations as there are rooms of different shapes and sizes. There is quite a passion now for built-in furniture. Window seats are elaborated into big, comfortable, couchlike affairs that dispense with the davenport. Dressing tables are constructed between windows of the bedroom, and little decorative, built-in closets for talking machines are found convenient. But of all built-in accessories, the bookcase works out the most satisfactorily.

Every odd bit of wall space can be utilized if one desires, and the book fan will tell you there are never enough book shelves in which to house and lodge his treasures. Certainly the open shelves are the most dignified, and certainly they are the sum total of joy if one happens to be a student or writer. Drawers and cupboards can also be built in, and shelves on which the books may rest when opened for reference are handy. The tops of the cupboards and chests of drawers may provide a writing table, or, rather, the lapses between such arrangements, giving room for the knees and providing a comfortable chair space.

Plenty of book shelves make also for order. Nothing causes more real confusion than books scattered here and there, on low table shelves, window ledges, and so on. Such a haphazard method brings to the room an appearance of chaos. No really orderly housekeeper could put up with such disarray, and as for the book-hunter, his shouts for help in the hunt will be incessant. Even with the best formation plans, the book that is wanted is always the last one to be found. It is best, if open shelves are utilized, to have the books classified, scientific books in one section, fiction in another, reference books in the third. We consider this scheme more desirable than that of the fastidious young woman who places books according to size and color. Laura Jean's wildest romance may have a red binding, but is that any reason why she should sit beside Shakespeare? No, little one, it is not.

The best formula for book shelf building is to first place your movable furniture where you desire it with due regard for grouping, lighting, and all that, and then utilize your shelves as fillers. If there is a long side wall, you can put your large writing desk in the middle of it. On either side build your book shelves, which may extend to the ceiling, if you wish, or which may be cut off midway so as to provide a place for a few special ornaments, clock, bronzes, or photographs in suitable frames or cases. Over the desk itself may be placed a double shelf for small, favorite volumes. This arrangement breaks up the long lines and makes a more homelike and less officelike ensemble. The shelves can be entirely independent of the desk. In a city apartment, where space is at a premium, the built-in book houses are of great value.

If wall space is scarce, it is sometimes possible to place the desk before a wide window or group of windows, and shelf up all the available wall area.

In working out this idea, you will need a portable floor lamp or two, with globes that turn in every possible direction, so that at night you can throw the light on the various book shelves, and find whatever volume you may be seeking. These small library lamps are nice to stand at the back or side of the reading chair, and they contribute to one's comfort. They make every easy chair a reading chair, and the furniture will not be dragged about as always happens when the lighting arrangements are insufficient or badly posed.

The curtain problem of the living room should not be difficult. Thin fabrics are best. Silk tissues, net, marquisette, and scrim are all good. Have plenty of light and sunshine. If there are over curtains, keep them pulled back. Cretonnes, chintzes, and all figured materials are not good where there are many books, as the bindings provide a confusion of colors. Paneled walls are decorative, and should be of soft neutral tone. 'Ware of many pictures in ornate frames. Paneled walls are better than many pictures. If panels are impossible, the effect of them can be obtained by the application of moldings.

In your reading-living room have a davenport, the kind for repose. Place beside it a floor lamp or a lamp on a table. Sofa and tables are delightful essentials.

Count up the members of your family, and provide a comfortable seat for each one of them. Always there is a martyr-like expression of the latecomer who must endeavor to find repose in the stiff backed chair that is shunned by all.

A woman who is fond of the oriental note and the exotic has her built-in book shelves curtained with oriental fabrics. It is a real idea, but will work out harmoniously only in the room that carries out the oriental spirit. It is something that cannot be done casually.

Anita de Campi's Answers to Inquiries.

I. A. K.: Why not shop around for your friend and send her an assortment of samples to choose from? A color scheme in tones of amber with intensive spots in deep plum color and turquoise green and turquoise blue and apricot would be wonderful as a background to that particular type of beauty. Brown is rather deadening. Do not have a plate rail. With the colonial furniture a yellow and ivory striped paper would be good. "Our mutual friend" is complimentary. "My good nature" alternates with bad Italian temper.

S. E. G.: In your place I think I should have the woodwork and side walls throughout in two tones of sand color, which would harmonize well with whatever part of the natural oak you wish to retain in your scheme. With this employ decorative cretonne in large bright pattern on a sand colored ground. Select the brightest note of color seen in the cretonne to repeat as a solid color in the silk that you use for your lamp shades.

* *

W. R.: Probably the best means for you to employ in exploiting your patent would be to advertise in the daily papers and the trade journals. I regret my inability to aid you personally in promoting your interesting scheme. I am returning your letter and sketches.

* *

MRS. F. H.: Yes, the light plain papers are still being used. In your dining room paper upper and lower wall alike in pale gray tiny stripe, and refuse to acknowledge the presence of the plate rail by leaving it empty. Suppose you try gold color instead of pink for your side lights. That pink must be the clashing note. It probably does not harmonize with the mahogany pink tints in your living room draperies. The delft and white reception hall, too, is a little "off" this drapery. Try gray paper in the bedroom over printed in light figures, with taffeta curtains—white glass curtains.

P. J. B.: Use a parchment lamp shade tinted in rose color on your table. Barley color would be good for your sideboard. For your davenport pillows repeat the colors that are now in the velour, but have the fabric contrasting; that is, use damask, silk, or satin. Use a taupe chenille rug. Use straw colored silk gauze shirred to the French doors between the two rooms. Have draperies of blocked linen printed on a barley colored ground. Artificial flowers are not generally liked. It is better not to place pictures and art objects on the piano.

H. R.: French gray and rose make a most attractive combination. Use these two colors in wide striped sunfast for your bed covers and lambrequins. Trim with narrow French gray fringe. Have several cushions of rose brocade and use rose brocade on your dresser covered with glass.

* *

W. W. M.: The best choice for your dining room would be an axminster in small all over pattern, blue and tan. This could be repeated for your additional rug later. Lambrequins of contrasting material are frequently used without side draperies. A light taupe would be nice for your sideboard.

Women Find Clear Skin In Simple Laxative

A sense of false modesty often prevents women from admitting that many of her ills and disorders are due primarily to constipation.

But women who know themselves have learned that headache remedies and beautifiers only cover the trouble but do not dislodge it.

What is needed is a remedy to move the bowels and stir up the torpid liver. An ever-increasing number of sensible women take a small dose of a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and sold by druggists under that name.

It will save a woman from the habitual use of headache remedies, skin lotions and similar makeshifts. Once the bowels are emptied and regulated, the headache and the pimples and blotches disappear. It is the rational, natural method.

A bottle of Syrup Pepsin lasts a family a long time, and all will find use for it from time to time. Thoughtful people are never without it in the house.

The druggist will refund your money if it fails to do as promised.

PRICE AS ALWAYS

In spite of greatly increased laboratory costs due to the War, by sacrificing profits and absorbing war taxes we have maintained the price at which this family laxative has been sold by druggists for the past 20 years. Two sizes—50c and $1.00.

Plenty of Food for Thought in Next Few Days

By Mme. X.

THERE'S certainly enough food for thought these days to produce a mental indigestion of the most uncomfortable and a[illegible]ng kind. First and foremost, Tuesday, April 1, confronts us Chicago folk, or those of us who vote. Which way will our vote best obstruct and weaken the powers for harm that menace the city's development the next four years? These four years are the most momentous since those busy, constructive times that followed the great fire of 1871.

Like a kindly, foolish, vain woman Chicago stands at this moment surrounded by suitors. She turns to each with a simple smile, "Is it an honorable marriage you're offering me?"

Which of them—"Mac," or "Bob," or "Bill,' or "Fitz," or "Coll."—looks at her with real love in his eye, seeing her beauty and worth under her slovenly habiliments? Isn't each candidate sizing her up with the calculating glance of the man marrying for money or position? The Lord help the poor lass!

Since marry she must, there's one suitor so patently undesirable that the task of the conscientious voter is somewhat simplified. This undesirable must be beaten. That eliminates one candidate and narrows the choice to a selection of that one of the remaining three or four most likely to rout the well intrenched ineligible.

Time is short. Backing, equipment, machinery all count at the moment even more than personality. Remember this in making your choice, sisters of the ballot.

Contrasts in Twenty-first.

Scarcely less important than the question of next mayor to us women is the election of the right sort of city council. In no ward is there a greater contrast between candidates than in the Twenty-first ward. In no ward is there such contrast in population. Those who dwell along and near what troublemakers dub the "Gold Coast" and those who dwell in the neighborhood adorned by "death's corner" may think they have little in common, but they are united by joint interests of the strongest kind. These interests are the chief concern of their alderman. A man who serves one part of the ward well is of equal service to the rest of the ward.

Alderman Robert H. McCormick, a member of an old and well known family, is up for reëlection in the Twenty-first ward. He has an excellent record in the city council on both the streets and alleys and the finance committees. Although he is supported by the Republican party machine he is no creature of the bosses, having consistently voted against the "solid six" school board raiders, and to pass over the mayor's veto the council's orders for investigation by the public efficiency bureau of the city's expenditures.

Of his Democratic opponent—well, the less said the better. It will be harder on the poor and humble if he is elected than on the rich and powerful.

Question of Prohibition.

Then, there's the question of voting wet or dry on Tuesday which awaits your decision and contributes to that mental indigestion above referred to. Not that this opportunity to express our views will alter in the least the sultry weather ahead of us, but it may be a satisfaction to some of us to register a protest against being placed by the law on a par with the village drunkard.

On the other hand, when I think of a little family I know, living in a dilapidated shanty not far from the X family abode, and call to mind the slatternly parents who saturate the circumambient atmosphere with alcohol, while their stunted children, beguiling but dreadful, are becoming the neighborhood mendicants, I can't quite see myself support by my vote an industry that works to their undoing.

Of such things as these, and of the league of nations, and the red terror, and of the friends of opera men and women are talking at dinners and luncheons and over the tea cups, from the depths of club easy chairs, on the windy top seats of motor busses, in the stuffy cars of the surface and elevated lines. It is small wonder that our brains sometimes have a sense of plethora and congestion. Even gossip and fashions for the time being take back seats.

Just a Bit of Gossip.

From that back seat, however, pipes up an interesting bit of gossip which assures us that it wasn't wounded feelings which drove that tuneful tenor, Muratore, away from us last winter. Alas, it was, says rumor, a more deadly malady—female jealousy! The lovely lady who shares his lot is said (merely said, mind you, so don't quote me) to have objected so violently to the undeniable charms of a certain soprano in the Chicago Opera company that she made life unendurable here for Lucien. Hence the trumped up excuse of shattered nerves, injured pride, and the hurried flight through winter storms to the discomforts of life in Paris.

It is hard to say just how much joy it will cause the fair artistes of the Metropolitan Opera company when they realize that the cautious Cavalieri, after looking them over, has decided that they are a safe outfit to which to entrust her susceptible tenor. So report says that next season Muratore will compete with Caruso for New York favor.

Opera Friends Busy.

Under Mrs. John Borden's guidance the box committee of the Friends of Opera has launched its drive to secure the 200 boxholders that a ten weeks' opera season needs to insure success. Already many of our public spirited citizens have responded to the call for a three years' enlistment as box lessees.

Foremost among these as a disinterested supporter of the opera is Robert Allerton, who, while he has promised to take a box for three years, so decidedly prefers seats for his personal enjoyment that he is also taking seats. He proposes to devote his box to those who would not otherwise have an opportunity to enjoy opera. To this end he has asked the Friends of Opera to select the occupants of his box.

It's a generous scheme and one worth copying by some other public spirited Chicagoan, who either may not care at all for opera or may care so much that he prefers to view it from seats in the body of the house.

Judge Pam says that those appealed to to buy boxes should instead be asked to contribute $750 a year toward the opera company's annual deficit, and that the box is merely a perquisite of such a public spirited supporter of opera. This firmly fixed in the mind of the average citizen, instead of feeling that he is a victim of fashion and folly suffering a three years' sentence, he may regard himself as a noble benefactor, a pillar of society. His opera box will no longer be an instrument of torture, but will become a throne whence he can gaze at his beneficiaries and think, "What a good Chicagoan am I!"

Club Aids Metropolitan.

New York opera has an interesting institution which might be introduced here in a modified form. It is called the Metropolitan Opera club. It is composed of men. Its object as stated in its bylaws is "the cultivation of vocal and instrumental music, the encouragement and support of operatic and musical performances, and the promotion of social intercourse among its members."

To these varied ends it has thrown several boxes into one big one with about ninety seats in it, and has established an attractive and luxurious club room opening out of the foyer of the opera house.

Its membership is limited to 100 who pay $100 initiation fee and $150 annual dues (quite an expensive little organization you see.)

These members are entitled to a private entrance in Thirty-ninth street, to a seat in the box on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings, and Saturday matinées, and to the use of the clubrooms. Also they may invite men guests to their box by paying $3 and the war tax, and women guests for Saturday matinées by paying a similar amount and—mark the caution!—by presenting at the door a card bearing the woman's name and residence address.

Subscribing members are those regular opera "fans," who have their own boxes or seats, but want the privileges of the clubroom, that refuge of the weary.

Dinner Dance in Paris Setting.

The Mi-Careme costume dinner dance, given on Friday evening by Mrs. Arthur Ryerson for her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Patterson, was society's chief event since Ash Wednesday. Under the direction of the hostess and "Harry" Millikin, the house was turned into a corner of Paris in the joyous pre-war days.

The big room that was once a lovely Italian chapel for the marriage of Miss Eleanor Ryerson to Victor Salvatore, and later a "roaritorium" for Ryerson grandchildren, was for Friday adorned with little cafés set under gay awnings. Each bore a French name like "Café du Chat Noir," "Café des Lapins Gais," etc.

The menus, the work of Mr. Millikin, were a special feature of the occasion. They were artistically adorned and bore the inscription, "Café Mi-Carême: Ryerson proprietaire: diner, 20 francs."

After dinner Herman Rosse, the clever Hollander now a teacher in the Art institute's school of design, gave a chic and enchanting little performance called "Ombres Chinoises," or "Chinese Shadows." Fantastic creatures of his design illustrated in pantomime, against quaint and curious backgrounds, the stories of Kipling's "Cat that Walked by Himself," and Barrie's little prose poem, "Pantaloon," being the joys and sorrows of Harlequin, Columbine, Pantaloon, and Clown. The text was read as the puppets passionately played their various rôles.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Cable, Mr. and Mrs. John Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ryerson, Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson Jr., Mr. and Mrs. John Andrews King, Mr. and Mrs. Barney Goodspeed, the Misses Elizabeth Farwell, Dorothy Keeley, and Marion Strobel, and the Messrs. Harry Millikin; Joseph Ryerson, Joseph Winterbotham, Arthur Heun, Eames MacVeagh, Robert Allerton and A. Falkenstjerne.

Children to See Play.

Mr. Rosse is going to repeat the "Chinese Shadows", next Saturday afternoon at Mrs. Ryerson's for the benefit of the "Fatherless Children of France." The audiences—for there will be a performance at 3:30 and another at 4:30—will be composed of children. It is to be an invitation affair, but people can use their invitations for others as well as themselves. No admission will be charged. The Misses Genevieve Carpenter and Janet Fairbank will assist Mr. Rosse that afternoon in presenting the two pieces. In this way rich and petted American children can help by their offerings the desolate children of France.

Apropos of the Fatherless Children of France association, its head, Mrs. Walter Brewster, who, with her husband, recently arrived on the other side, was received on landing with quite a little pomp and ceremony. A secretary and two officers of the French high commission met them at the boat and greeted them in the name of France, while another officer, and Mmes. Coulon and Seligman-Lui and Miss Fell met them at the Paris station and escorted them in a "magnificent motor" to their flower bedight rooms at the hotel.

Mrs. Brewster may well be the recipient of honors over there. Through her office here nearly 16,000 French war orphans have found American foster parents. Let us not forget, however, that there are still over 100,000 needy little boys and girls in France, whose fathers died for their country. Ten cents a day will enable them to grow up fitted to carry on the traditions of a great race.

Club Ends Half Century.

The Chicago club's fiftieth birthday is to be celebrated day after tomorrow by having a big luncheon and general jollification. The early days of the club, its birth and youthful adventures, written up by one of its most devoted adherents, Edward T. Blair, will be in pamphlet form for the edification of its members. There are portents that this will be the last of a series of gay birthdays. In the years to come the anniversary bids fair to be celebrated by psalm singing and prayer.

There are no institutions that will be harder hit by nation-wide prohibition than social organizations like the Chicago club. Just what the outcome will be it is difficult to say. Already such clubs as the Union and Calumet have perished through a change in the standards of masculine hilarity.

Although the old era of midnight wassails, of poker games lasting from sundown to dawn has pretty well passed into limbo, up to now club bars have been counted on to make up the deficit created by club restaurants, always a losing department of club finances.

Hit by "Dry" Ban.

The South Shore Country club, the Saddle and Cycle and the Casino will all be more or less crippled by prohibition. The University, Union League, Hamilton, Chicago Athletic, Illinois Athletic, and Chicago Yacht clubs will suffer less, having other objects to bring the members together than social conviviality.

It is said that prohibition in this country means a loss to France in her wine business as serious as the blow the Germans inflicted on her industries by their invasion and devastation. Italy, too, will suffer greatly when no longer able to export to us the harvest of her lovely vinyards. What widespread misery the virtuous cause in their onward march to glory!

There's no more festive and entertaining spot in this part of the world than the South Shore Country club on a gala night. Last evening was such an event—the occasion being a dinner and ball given for Gen. Leonard Wood, when the vast dining room, corridors, reception rooms, and ballroom were crowded with guests. The best dance floor in Chicago is that dark expanse in this club's brilliant white and gold, pillared "salle de danse," and hundreds testified to this yesterday evening.

On Wednesday the Chicago Equal Suffrage association will give a luncheon at the Casino, at which the guest of honor and chief speaker will be Mrs. George W. Patterson (formerly Miss Suzette Ryerson). She will talk on her experiences in French field hospitals, where she served both as a bacteriologist and nurse. She went through many thrilling experiences and was frequently in peril from enemy raids.

Mrs. Edwin S. Fechheimer of Winnetka is expecting to receive a cable any day announcing the marriage in Paris of her sister, Miss Mary Louise Root, to Edward Maverick Collier of Providence, R. I. Miss Root, better known to her friends as "Polly," went to France about two and a half years ago to serve in the office of the American fund for French wounded. She was transferred to the transportation department of the Red Cross in Paris, and it was there that she met Mr. Collier, who had been working for the same branch since he was injured in an airplane flight. Miss Root's engagement to Mr. Collier was announced last summer, and the wedding date was set for the last of March. Miss Root is still in Red Cross service, but Mr. Collier has become engaged in business in Paris, where he and his bride will make their home. Miss Root's father was John W. Root, the architect, and since his death she has lived with her aunt, Mrs. William J. Calhoun, who went to France shortly after Miss Root did. Mrs. Calhoun will return to Chicago soon after her niece's marriage. Miss Root's brother, Capt. John W. Root, and his wife and little daughter are also living in France.

Miss Ruth Dugan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben A. Dugan of Hyde Park, will be married in June to Eugene Gould Fauntleroy, son of Thomas S. Fauntleroy of Geneva, Ill. Miss Dugan, who is spending the winter and early spring in Belleair, Fla., is a well known golfer and recently won the women's championship at Belleair. Mr. Fauntleroy, who was a lieutenant in the artillery, was released from active service several weeks ago, soon after his return from six months' service in France.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Chicago Woman's Aid Big Factor in Welfare Work

THE Chicago Woman's Aid, organized in 1882, enters its thirty-eighth year on Tuesday. The club has at present a membership of 1,300 and stands as one of the four most prominent women's clubs of the city. The organization joined the state federation in 1895 and became a departmental body in 1912. In 1917 a civic director was first employed and headquarters established at the regular meeting place of the club, Sinai Social center. In 1918 the first monthly bulletin was issued, a magazine designed to give to the members a regular source of information concerning the work of the club.

The work of the three departments is varied. The art and literature department sponsors art, music, and literary study classes. These were abandoned during the war, but will be resumed in the fall. The department coöperates actively with the Municipal Art league and the Public School Art society and each year purchases a picture at the exhibit of Chicago artists. These pictures are to form the nucleus for a traveling art gallery for schools and other public institutions.

The education department organized the first afternoon community center in Chicago at the Smyth school and is still maintaining it, in the hope that eventually the board of education will include this in its program of community center work. The department also organized the committee on scholarships for Jewish children, now an independent organization, and paid the salary of one of the first vocational advisers. There is an active Americanization committee, holding classes during the noon hour at the Hart, Schaffner & Marx shop on Nineteenth and Halsted streets. This committee is to hold an Americanization institute, similar to the one recently held at the Woman's City club, during April at Sinai center.

The civics and philanthropy department comprises committees on home economics, city waste, public comfort stations, playgrounds and bathing beaches, housing, public affairs, child welfare, etc. The home economics committee ran a community kitchen at Sinai center during the canning season last year. The housing committee has recently published a pamphlet on good housing for the guidance of the tenant who may be ignorant of his rights and duties. The committee on city waste is delivering brief talks on "Garbage as an Aid in Reconstruction" to the other women's clubs of the city. The child welfare committee, after weighing and measuring the children of the Twentieth ward, is now engaged in following up those who need attention and referring them to the local infant welfare station, which has raised its age limit to 6 years for this purpose.

The war service committee has a long list of activities. The club, through the efforts of the committee, won the banner for the largest club record in both the third and fourth Liberty loans. The Twentieth ward unit of the woman's committee was under its direction. Parties were held at the Art institute Sunday afternoons for men in uniform from May, 1918, until March, 1919, and when the Khaki and Blue opened the club furnished two canteen teams. When the bureau for returning soldiers and sailors was opened under the United States employment service, twelve volunteer workers were furnished to assist in canvassing for positions for the many applicants who swarmed into the bureau. This work will go on as long as the bureau is maintained. The committee also held for the club a study class in social and economic reconstruction under the leadership of Victor Yarros.

The present officers of the club are: President, Mrs. Benjamin Auerbach; vice president, Mrs. Edward Gudeman; second vice president, Mrs. Morris Woolf; recording secretary, Mrs. George Freudenthal; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Edward J. Stransky Jr.; treasurer, Mrs. Joseph Mayer; civic director, Miss Dorothy C. Kahn.

The annual business meeting takes place on Tuesday at 2 p. m. at Sinai Social center.

Cleaning House?

Of course you'll use Fels-Naptha Soap to brighten the woodwork, clean out the closets, freshen the linoleum, and polish the enameled bathtub and washbowls.

The Fels-Naptha way is the short way of cleaning anything cleanable about the home. Cheapest way, too, because you don't have to use hot water with Fels-Naptha Soap.

House-cleaning days are short, pleasant days if Fels-Naptha Soap is "Your Servant in the House."

The Great White Way in Cleaning Clothes

The great big thing about Fels-Naptha Soap is—you don't have to boil the clothes unless you really want to.

VOTE FOR HOYNE.

Chicago elects a mayor Tuesday. It needs an effective mayor more now, we believe, than ever before in its existence. It needs a good executive because it ought to meet its needs and because it must meet its emergencies.

It is offered Thompson by the Republicans, Sweitzer by the Democrats, Fitzpatrick by the labor political movement, Collins by the old style Socialists, and Hoyne by himself as an independent.

Thompson, who as a product of American athletic fields ought to be now a simon pure American, has held out the hand of Esau and talked with the voice of Jacob.

He has trimmed at every expedient corner. He has been straightforward on no straight going course. He has cut, and dodged, and played bad politics, directed by a man who never got his mind off the German vote, the Swedish vote, etc. He had never been what he might have been, what he could have been if he had continued playing honest football in politics.

In the inevitable degeneration of the human political mind, when the ways are opened to such influences as have worked upon Thompson, he has become a noisy, ineffective, trimming, dodging, explaining politician of the small order of deeds and the large order of demagogy.

If the city has any respect for its needs it cannot elect Thompson. It may do so. That merely will prove its political perversity, indifference, or stubbornness.

Thompson is as needed in the present needs of Chicago as an old tin can loaded with blasting powder would be needed in the peaceful home of an ordinary citizen.

Sweitzer is a symbol of boss made man. What he has he owes to Roger Sullivan, who is a delightful man. What Roger has he owes to gas, which is a public utility.

Sweitzer represents for public opinion, for liberal and radical opinion, a man who is put forward by the utilities to get city government for the utilities.

These times are not times in which even the appearance of reactionary movement can be presented safely. Therefore Sweitzer is a bad candidate. Thompson is a bad candidate for what he represents and can do. Sweitzer is a bad candidate for what he suggests if not for what he would do.

We are inclined to be very considerate in dealing with Mr. Sweitzer because we believe in his inherent good qualities. But that belief does not reconcile us to the idea that he is a good candidate. We think he is a bad one.

Fitzpatrick is a force and one promising disturbance. He believes in the reorganization of society upon theories more unjust than any which could find effect even under capitalism—in the arbitrary dislocation of all our political and economic laws, which have not proved cruel, although in places they may have worked injustice. Fitz means fits, and inasmuch as the world will not stay the way he puts it even if he had the chance of putting it there violently, it is political folly to allow him and his fellows to have the chance.

Collins is an abstraction. The Socialists in these times are mere theorists. They have been outrun by radicals and other people have no time to listen to them. It is a fine time for Socialists to talk themselves to death. They are all dressed up with nowhere to go.

Into this complex Hoyne enters as a sane American—not a demagogue such as Thompson is, not affiliated as Sweitzer is, not a tory and not a red, not a utilities man and not a demagogue, not a hypocrite and not an owned man, but an independent asking for the votes of people who cannot vote for Thompson, cannot vote for Sweitzer, do not want to vote for Fitzpatrick, and do not know that Collins is running.

He may not win. He would if all the people in Chicago who lay any claim to common sense voted as their common sense tells them to vote. He may not be the best chance in the election, but he is the best chance Chicago has to get a good mayor for bad times out of this election.

Our advice for the people on the fence is to vote for Hoyne. Never mind whether you think he has a chance or not. He has the chance that your vote gives him, and it's not a bad chance and it's your best vote. That absolves you.

JOBS ON THE FARMS.

The city boy, returning from the war, feels that he is entitled, first of all, to a place in the city that sent him forth. We believe such a boy has a fair and just claim upon the community.

But we also wish to urge upon such returning soldiers as have a desire for the open air, the rich fields, and the healthful surroundings of farm life a careful consideration of these advantages before deciding that the city holds the only promise.

The lure of the land and the back to the farm movement is an old one. It has been talked and advertised these last dozen years by people in all walks of life. But usually it is talked by those who desire most of all to enter directly upon the ownership of land and the production of crops. This is laudable ambition.

But it is also laudable to earn the surprisingly high wages now being paid by farmers while at the same time being instructed in the technicalities of crop raising. Returning soldiers, if they are so disposed, may devote themselves to farming on an earning basis and be in no wise exposed to the dangers of poor investment. From all we are able to learn there apparently is a large demand for help on the farms of the middle west. The wages, in some instances, mount up as high as $60 a month. Many jobs, it appears, are open at from $40 to $50 a month. Reflect that this wage includes room and board and there is a distinct advantage in life on the farm.

What average city worker is able to show $50 after his month's room and board is paid for? Very few, we will be bound. Farm work is not without its obvious inducements and returning soldiers are recommended to a fair trial.

It is not to be supposed that the isolation of twenty years ago obtains on the farms of today. Roads and automobiles have remedied all that. A farm worker ten miles from a town is no farther removed from the center of social activity than is a Chicago worker who rides from the loop to South Chicago. Many Chicagoans are employed in suburban plants no less isolated than the average farms, and spend tiresome half hours on street cars coming and going. How much more pleasant is the automobile ride to town than the daily street car journey.

Farm work is opening up over the middle west. If the soldiers who are agreeable to the trial will offer themselves they will find the solution of an uncomfortable problem and perhaps pave the way to future prosperity, a future obscured in the unfortunate circumstances of the return from service.

REVOLUTION.

There are different kinds of revolution. What we think of in connection with the word is usually the fall of monarchs, the overthrow of governments, barricades in city streets, blood in the gutters, and mobs destroying property.

But this is only one kind of revolution. In fact, we are living always in revolution, since customs, conditions, and institutions are always in a process of change. Society is a living organism and living organisms do not stand still. The war, indeed, has accelerated the pace of change. In Russia it has brought about a vast convulsion, which is violent and destructive in the proportion that the stupid and vicious tyranny of czardom was violent and destructive. The higher the dam the more water is held and the greater the crash when the dam goes down. But Russia is not the only country which is undergoing what are in fact revolutionary changes, though in happier countries where men have been more free the changes are what we call evolutionary and are taking place without destruction.

The whole movement is a part of that great process going on for centuries, which is called democracy. It is steadily carrying the average man higher, broadening his opportunity, strengthening him, enlightening his understanding, placing within his reach more of the really good things of life.

Nothing can stop this movement. It may be retarded here and there, or deflected, as a stream is turned by obstacles, but, like a stream, it flows on. No one of right mind would turn it back if he could, though we may differ among ourselves as to what will lead the stream onward and how the movement shall go on.

The war has been a great equalizer in every country, not excluding our own, which has not had to undergo the tragic experiences of the European nations. But even with us there is going on a process of democratic equalization and distribution which we hardly realize. We may see it in many directions. War taxation, for example, is doing exactly what many reformers have urged for years, notably Col. Roosevelt, who urged measures for the reduction of "swollen fortunes."

Only the other day the financial editor of THE TRIBUNE told our readers how the trustees of the great Field estate were selling loop property and putting the proceeds into nontaxable Liberty bonds in order to reduce the supertax. At first glance this may seem to mean nothing but an escape from heavy taxation, which only reduces the return which the government should receive. But the result of this action is a distribution of valuable property to men of smaller means who can afford to buy it because their own incomes are not so large as to come within the scope of the higher supertaxes. The effect of the high war taxes is therefore not merely to return a large part of the incomes and profits of the very rich to the government for public uses, but also to break up enormous accumulations through forced distribution.

From Lenine's standpoint such changes are unworthy of notice. But in America, where we believe in the gradual broadening of the foundations and distribution of property, it is significant. We believe the greater fortunes will disappear in due time and that in the meantime at the base of the structure the masses of men will steadily rise to a firm economic footing with a safer margin between themselves and poverty, with more opportunity to lay up reserves for sickness and old age, for the improvement of their opportunities, and the advancement of their children. Wages are higher than ever and will probably never come down to their former level. Profit sharing is increasing. Conditions of work are improving. Means of education are multiplying in many ways.

This is the revolution that counts, because it builds and does not destroy. In Russia Lenine, who leads those who thought they could create a modern paradise on the ruins of the old prison house, is now desperately seeking to rebuild the old conservative machinery which holds society together and is necessary to provide the necessities of modern life. After trying to destroy the bourgeoisie and build a Marxian society over night he is now apologizing for paying bourgeois experts large salaries and for compromising with bourgeois organizations. He had no respect for orderly evolution and all Russia is paying the price, the working class as well as every other class.

American progress is based not on the theories of students in a closet but on centuries of experience in self-government. It does not try to defy the laws of growth or try short cuts to the millennium which lead the violent revolutionist into the morass. Americans are natural builders and realize the necessity for keeping the machinery of production and distribution going. They do not think because a cog is broken here or a wheel out of order there that the way to improve matters is to junk the whole machine and go home hungry while we experiment with another. They have done too well with what they have to want to destroy it. They have too much reason for confidence in the future to shut their eyes on what is good in the past, and they will get forward farther and faster than peoples who move with less sound sense of the necessary conditions of modern society as human nature makes it.

FUTURE RULERS.

[From Harvey's Weekly.]

One point which should not be overlooked by the advocates of a league of nations is that presently there will arise "a king who knew not Joseph." There will presently come into control of the affairs of nations men who were not directly concerned in the great war and who are not moved by the spiritual exaltation which animates those who are now discussing its issues. It may seem very well in the flush of present emotions to enter into certain obligations, with a happy-go-lucky confidence that they will always be properly understood and acted upon. But "in the cold gray dawn of the morning after" how will these things appear? Will other men interpret and apply them in the same fashion as the men of today?

GARDENS.

My lady hath a garden fair,
  Wherein she whiles her hours:
She chides me that I do not share
  Her rage for springing flowers.

I tell her I've a garden, too,
  Wherein I have to toil—
The kind that Epicurus knew,
  If not so good a soil.

And I must till my patch with care,
  And watch its daily needs;
For lacking water, sun, and air,
  The place would run to weeds.

In this the garden of the mind,
  My flowers are all too few;
Yet am I well content to find
  A modest bloom or two.

My lady hath a garden fair,
  Or will when buds are blown:
I've but a blossom here and there—
  Poor posies, but mine own!

THE MUSTERED OUT SOLDIERS.

ALREADY several hundred thousand of them have left the routine of military life and reentered civilian life. The camps on this side of the water have been emptied in order to receive the soldiers returning from abroad. Announcement has been made that 300,000 soldiers will be returned to the United States monthly, and presumably the great majority of these will be mustered out shortly after they return.

Men are beginning to ask what will the returning soldier do for his country. He will no doubt develop a good deal of political solidarity. How will he exercise that power? The natural tendency is for individualism and disorganization to succeed organization. Especially is this true where organization, mutual helpfulness, self-sacrifice, and disinterestedness have been forced, as has been the case in America during the last two years. The natural tendency will be toward a general letting down, the consequence of which is individualism and self-interest and self-seeking. Will the returned soldiers help to boost for a continuance of the splendid policy of mutual helpfulness which has been so much in evidence for two years or even four?

But we are also interested in knowing what the returned soldier is going to do for himself. We might as well recognize that the returned soldiers will not be disposed to go back to the jobs they held before the war. Many will be glad to get back into their pre-war jobs, but not so with the majority. Especially is this true of farming. After "gay Paree," Podunk will seem a graveyard.

I have heard in Canada that the returned soldiers would not go back to the farms if they could help themselves. The restlessness, the up and go, the whirl of excitement of the last two years does not create an appetite for farm isolation and quiet. It is almost as true that the appetite for the old job has been lost. It may not have been any less routine drudgery than the new job, but the soldier man knows the lack of excitement in the old job, and the limitations of the new one he does not know. Therefore we will not be surprised to read of thousands of unemployed in the cities, a great surplus of man power, and a few miles away or a few blocks away lack of productiveness because of lack of man power.

If the returned soldier will analyze himself, his emotions, his experiences, and the job situation, he can do much to help solve the problem of replacement in industry. To make a civilian into a soldier is something of an undertaking. A boy unaccustomed to control is taught to lead an ordered life. He learns to eat a designated diet and at regular hours; he learns to rise before day, attend to his person, attend to his bed, and household surroundings, and then to do an allotted amount of work. He learns democracy from his comrades and autocracy from his officers; he learns personal hygiene. He learns to go to sick calls for his ills, and finally he learns to go to sleep at a regular hour.

In making these great changes he is not only guided by men of great experience in personal and public hygiene, but he is controlled by them. The weight and texture of his clothing, the cut of his shoes, the amount and the kinds of his food, his exercise and work, even his morals, are all controlled by experts. Now he is to change back into a civilian with an equally violent readjustment of his habits, and in this change he is not only uncontrolled but he is without guidance. Let us hope that a good part of the drilling in personal hygiene to which he has been subjected has soaked in so thoroughly that he will never be able to shed it.

One soldier says: "I do not rest well in my home. I am dull and stupid. I no longer have any appetite. My eyes blur. I am nervous and unsettled in disposition."

There is no difficulty in understanding these symptoms. He is nervous and unsettled in disposition and does not rest well in his home—naturally; his routine of two years is upset. Perhaps he is worrying about his future (the soldier knows that some one is looking out for him), and his sleeping environment is wholly different. Having suddenly ceased the hard manual labor of a soldier, he has but little appetite. But even at that he is probably overeating, and lacking excitement he is dull and stupid. His eyes blur because he is eating an amount that is out of proportion to the work he is doing, and probably his bowels are less regular than when in the army.

One of the difficulties of readjustment which the soldier will encounter relates to sleep. Taps and reveille are great institutions for human health and efficiency at the Agricultural college of Michigan. I recently heard a group of farmers singing with much mirth a travesty on reveille sung to the music of that unwelcome tune. In my soldiering days a favorite source of gibe was taps, and yet we would live longer and accomplish more if all of us had taps and reveille. The returned soldier may be compelled to change his sleeping hours, but he should not forget the advantage of regular sleeping hours and plenty of sleep.

A few years ago the New York City health department said that a large proportion of those having Bright's disease and heart disease were so affected because "they were on the streets at all hours of the night engaged in occupations and amusements which caused or made worse their disorders."

The soldier's diet is very carefully worked out by experts. It contains a lot of sugar because the muscles use sugar when they work and the soldier's life demands much muscle work. If the returned soldier continues to eat as much sweets as he did while in the army he will throw a great strain on his pancreas. The consequence of this strain may or will develop diabetes. The soldier's diet contains much meat and other forms of protein. If, after he returns to civilian life, he continues eating a diet so high in protein he will throw a great strain on his kidneys and liver. Furthermore, he will find it difficult to practice the degree of moral continence, the advantage of which he learned in the army. Among men engaged in only moderately heavy work a high protein or heavy meat diet makes for immorality.

The training of the two years has built up a fine accumulation of muscles on the frame of the soldier. So long as that extra muscle is being worked it is an asset. When it is no longer used it becomes a liability. It is well to remember that the heart is a muscle governed by the same laws as the other muscles. The meaning of this is that the man who is fit must keep up his exercise or suffer the consequences.

The returned soldier, especially if he takes up sedentary life, must do systematic gymnasium work and engage in sports. He will do well to plan some manual labor, even if nothing more than farm work, garden work, or yard work after office hours.

When civilians first enter military service two-thirds of the requests at sick call are for purgatives. Soon the regularity and routine overcome much of the trouble in that direction. When the soldier quits that routine he will again need purgatives unless he establishes proper bowel habits.

It is to be hoped that the advantage of total abstinence has not been lost on the soldier. It has helped him to keep in a state of hitherto unhoped for efficiency. It has contributed to his low death and sick rates. The demonstration has been so unmistakable that we have a right to hope that when the soldier takes off his uniform he may abstain from choice, judgment, and sense, since he is no longer bound to abstain.

Likewise we hope that what the soldier has learned about venereal disease may abide with him. He has made an enviable record for himself and he has a right to be proud of his conduct and achievement. May we hope that the compulsion of his judgment and greater knowledge may be somewhat nearly as effective as that of military control.

For two years the soldier has been wearing a shoe the lines of which are determined by research, observation, and experience. Now that he is a civilian the disposition will be to wear shoes the lines of which are determined by custom or by the manufacturers. The returned soldier may well remember what the war has taught him about shoes.

A great many homes are without bathing facilities on a par with those of army camps. I hope the returned soldiers may succeed in forcing better bathing facilities for people of small incomes.

I do not feel like closing without letting the returned soldiers into a confidence. Those interested in public health are hoping for much from the returned soldiers. It is their hope that the several million men who for two years have lived in camps where the streets were clean, where the food was properly inspected, where the milk was pure, where the water was clean, where the sewage, garbage, and other wastes were properly disposed of, where there were no flies and no mosquitoes—that these men when they get home will not stand for dirty streets and alleys, poor water, and worse milk, improper sewage, garbage and other waste disposal, flies, mosquitoes; will not stand for low standards of sanitation and hygiene.

Address inquiries to Friend of the Soldier, "Chicago Tribune." Answers to as many as possible will be published in this department. To insure a personal reply an addressed and stamped envelope should be inclosed.

No attention will be paid to anonymous letters.

TRAINING SCHOOLS.

Aurora, Ill., March 25.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Why was it that the men who attended the first and second officers' training schools were paid $100 a month, while the men attending the later schools were given the pay of an enlisted man?
J. W. M.

The men in the first and second officers' training schools were civilians who had the privilege of leaving at any time. They were paid this amount to entirely cover expenses of uniforms, books, etc. The men in the later schools were men who had already served in the army and were paid according to their respective ranks; a sergeant in training received the pay accorded a sergeant and a corporal received the pay of a corporal, etc. Moreover, these men had their uniforms from the government when they were selected from the camp and sent to the training school.

ANSWERS.

M. E. Clancy—The First battalion of the Three Hundred and Tenth engineers is in Russia and the rest of the unit is with the Seventh corps, Third army.

S. Saretsky, Benton Harbor, Mich.—The marine corps headquarters in Washington, D. C., can give you the present whereabouts of any marine in the service.

W. W. G., Oak Park, Ill.—The Three Hundred and Sixty-ninth aero squadron is a supply squadron and is located at Issoudun, France.

Hazel Holdengraber—We have no idea when evacuation hospital 7 will return. It is with the Second army in Joinville, France.

H. M. Hood, Elgin, Ill.—Base hospital 95, stationed at Perigueaux, has not been mentioned for return.

D. Grupe, Davenport, Ia.—The Fifty-fifth engineers, Company C, is in Gievres, France. They are not listed among the units which are soon to return.

Fred O. Nelson—The entire Eighty-eighth division, which includes the Three Hundred and Thirty-eighth machine gun battalion, is slated to come home in May.

Mary A. Anderson—The Three Hundred and Forty-fourth butcher company is in Bordeaux and will probably sail very soon.

Mrs. J. W. J.—Base hospital 62 is located near Mars-sur-Allier, France. They have not been cited for return.

Miss M. Soukup—A. P. O. 798 is the postoffice number for the Thirty-fourth division. This division includes the One Hundred and Ninth ammunition train. It will probably be coming home soon, as part of the division has been demobilized.

Annie Gibbons—The Three Hundred and Twenty-third infantry belongs to the Eighty-first division. It has not yet been decided what policy will be adopted about the return of this organization. Early reports were to the effect that it might be kept over there for a longer time than the other divisions.

Miss A. E. N.—Aero squadron 1,106 was recently ordered to prepare for home. The sailing date of this unit has not been determined.

F. W. Walter, New London, Ia.—The Three Hundred and Forty-fourth machine gun battalion is one of the units in the Ninetieth division, which is booked for sailing in June. Present locaton is Mars-sur-Allier, France.

Mrs. T. J. H.—A soldier's pay usually is not reduced while he is in the hospital unless the illness was incurred not in line of duty and then it depends upon the nature of his illness.

Mrs. R. J. Detrick, Blue Island, Ill.—We have no information on the time the Thirty-first infantry will be sent back from Siberia. The adjutant general of the army, Washington, D. C., will be able to tell you from his records of any change in the address of your son.

John Frazer—The One Hundred and Forty-second infantry belongs to the Thirty-sixth division, which will be home in April.

Mrs. Anna Cesak—A great many of the Christmas boxes were delayed in delivery and it may be that your son has his by this time. If not, we suggest that you complain to the authorities at his postoffice, which is No. 729.

J. O. Nelson—The Thirty-seventh division is to come home in March. Regarding your bonds, for which you subscribed while in the navy, write to the Navy Liberty Loan division, Navy department, Washington, D. C.

Harriet Penn, Morris, Ill.—As your brother was taken out of the Eighty-third division and transferred to the army of occupation, he will not return with the Eighty-third division.

Violet Horton.—The Forty-ninth aero squadron sailed from France on the transport Plattsburg, and has arrived in New York.

James E. McGrath.—The Third ammunition train is in the Third division. Their early return cannot be expected; for the entire division is to be held in the army of occupation.

"THE TRIBUNE'S" INFLUENCE.

Chicago, March 27.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I desire to express my hearty congratulations over the new attitude on social and international questions displayed by your editorials of yesterday and today.

In a group of a dozen ministers a few days since one made the remark that he thought THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE exerted the worst moral influence of any institution in the city. And his sentiments seemed to receive a general assent. These men were of all political faiths, and the remark had no connection with the present mayoralty campaign.

If THE TRIBUNE considers the good opinion and support of the religious and moral elements in the city worth consideration I am sure it will seek to redeem its reputation. The new attitude above referred to gives us evidence of a disposition to do justice to the moral and social idealism of the best people of the city. We rejoice in this change and are ready to do what we can to support all organs which voice it.

THE BRITISH NAVY.

Chicago, March 27.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—As an officer in the United States navy I would like to answer the letter in THE TRIBUNE signed Britisher, who usurps the prerogative of idle boasting that the worthy gentlemen of his country are so quick to attribute to Americans. If Britisher had followed the statements of the navy department as closely as he follows the unofficial Sea Power, he would have seen that the figures which Admiral Sims presented were later designated as incorrect by the department. Instead of taking over only one-third of the American troops, our navy took over 46 per cent. Instead of our escorting only half of them, we escorted over 80 per cent, and the American escorting vessels did not lose as many troopships as did their British colleagues, since Britisher invites odious comparisons.

As far as the rest of Admiral Sims' speech is concerned, we may take it with a large grain of salt, inasmuch as the admiral is as much of a diplomat as he is naval officer, and the statement that the United States would have been doomed to destruction if it had not been for the British fleet has very frequently been made by people in this country, especially ministers of various religious denominations who knew nothing about it at all. I take off my hat to the British navy for everything it is and for what it has done, and I recognize how difficult it would have been for us to get troops to Europe without its help, but in the final analysis what would have happened if the hypothetical disaster had happened to the British fleet? It would merely have meant that we could not have taken the part we did in the fighting in Europe, but the United States would have been amply protected by the American navy, which would have nothing to fear from the German navy. The German navy might sweep the seas as far as the Atlantic coast of the United States, but they would meet with an obstacle there in the form of our fleet, and that is as far as the Germans would get westward. If this is not true then the American people are foolish to pay for our fleet. If it is so dependent on Great Britain we are throwing lots of money away on it.

We like the Britishers, but now and then we get weary of having their superiority shoved down our throats.

UNITED STATES NAVY.

FOOD PRICES.

Chicago, March 26.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I would like to have an expression of opinion from some one who knows, if such can be found, as to the increasing price of certain food necessities which still remain high.

Plain and egg malted milks, which were raised 15 and 25 cents respectively on account of the increased cost of milk and eggs, are still sold at the same prices in the drug and candy stores in spite of the fact that both milk and eggs have decreased in price. I call these necessities because they form in large part the luncheons of many business people.

A while ago apples were quoted in the papers as being plentiful, and yet we paid 15 cents a pound for them.

Butter, already high for this time of year, has been suddenly increased 1 cents a pound, just when it should be steadily on the decline.

A comparatively small head of lettuce at 15 cents seems an exorbitant price, while yeast has risen 300 per cent.

I speak, of course, as a consumer with perhaps not all the facts at my command, but I do know that these are the prices we have been paying, and after the various investigations into the h. c. of l. most things are as high as they ever were, and some even going up. The moment the word goes out that butter, for instance, is going up the additional amount is tacked on by the grocers, but this apparently does not work both ways—when there is a reduction in wholesale prices it usually takes the dealers a week to find it out.

DEE DEE.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

By Fanny Butcher

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago bookstore were:

FICTION.

"The Sky Pilot in No Man's Land" [Doran], by Ralph Connor.

"The Great Hunger" [Moffat-Yard], by Johan Bojer.

"The Secret City" [Doran], by Hugh Walpole.

"The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" [Dutton], by Vicente Blasco Ibenez.

"The Wine of Astonishment" [Appleton], by Mary Hastings Bradley.

"The Man Nobody Knew" [Dodd-Mead], by Holworthy Hall.

WAR.

"With the Help of God and a Few Marines" [Doubleday Page], by Brig. Gen. A. W. Catlin.

"Living Bayonets" [John Lane], by Lieut. Coningsby Dawson.

"The Charmed American" [John Lane], by George Lewys.

"History of the World War" [Doubleday Page], five volumes, by Frank Simonds.

"The Roots of the War" [Century], by William Stearns Davis.

"The Glory of the Coming" [Doran], by Irvin S. Cobb.

"UNCENSORED CELEBRITIES" [Holt], by E. T. Raymond, is the latest of the "pen portrait" books which have so spontaneously and rather naively appeared lately. They all remind me of something Susan Mitchell once said about George Moore. When he was a baby he shocked his nurse by taking off all his clothes and appearing on the lawn quite naked. "And he has never put his clothes back on," she said. That passion for going unclothed before the world and for seeing others in a like raiment of spiritual peau de femme or peau d'homme has been one of the most popular literary diversions these last few years. It's a piquant and amusing one if we know the hero and heroine, but a gallery of ladies and gentlemen like the famous Bouguereau ladies isn't. In other words, if you're "in the know" about celebrities, it's jolly to be more in the know, but if you're not—then the subtle literary quips about them are merely disconcerting. That is the trouble with "Uncensored Celebrities." If we were English we probably would chuckle at the very clever and thorough uncensoring of the celebrities. But being American, and knowing none of the foibles and few of the accomplishments of the thirty-three whom Mr. Raymond deftly unclothes, we miss most of the fun. Despite our not being "in the know," however, it is an amusing book.

The United States shipping board stands sponsor for a selected list of 100 of the best books of modern travel. I have had copies of the list printed and you may have one if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope. The books are all obtainable at the public library. There's no reason why we shouldn't all explore the remote parts of the globe in our rocking chair boat.

Joseph Hergesheimer is with E. K. Means in New Orleans getting material for another book. The next Hergesheimer novel, "Linda Condon," is finished and will run in Everybody's. The New Orleans Columbusing is the foundation for the second next.

"The Wine of Astonishment" [Appleton] is coming in for its share of arraignment. Everybody who ever went to a dinner party in Chicago thinks that Mary Hastings Bradley has painted a life sized portrait of that special dinner party. Which proves that Mrs. Bradley has an especially keen sense of the typical. Have you read it yet? It's a fundamentally Chicagoesque story, very well written, and with peculiarly charming and natural talk in it—none of the usual "conversing" that one finds in novels of city life. And who knows, perhaps you'll find yourself at that dinner party?

C. Keegan Paul, the translator of J. K. Huysmans' "En Route" [Dutton], expresses in a prefatory note his doubt as to the autobiographical character of the novel. Mr. Paul says that what happened to the hero spiritually would happen to any unusually intellectually endowed Frenchman—but never, he declares, to an Englishman.

Ida M. Tarbell's first novel is "The Rising of the Tide" [Macmillan], a gripping story of a mining and manufacturing town during the war.

Rose Cohen's "Out of the Shadow" [Doran], the record of an immigrant girl's emergence from the blackness of ignorance and poverty, is to be used at Columbia university as recommended reading in the study of immigrant problems. The book was written, as a series of essays, while Miss Cohen was learning English.

The Century company pleads for more good juveniles. It gives startling and thrilling statistics about the comparative popularity of juveniles and other fiction. "Lady Jane," with three books, has achieved forty editions. A novelist who has achieved forty editions with three books would be a nation-wide celebrity. "Lady Jane" is simply a very popular writer for children. The Century company yearns most for stories of book length for girls less than 16 and yet above the big type primer kind.

Robert Cortes Holliday, author of "Walking Stick Papers" [Doran], modestly admits that there is something in the fact that immediately after the book had gone into a new edition the walking stick industry started with a rush after being practically at a standstill for several months.

Cecil Chesterton's last book, "A History of the United States," the proofs of which he passed for press only a few days before his death in a hospital in France as a private in the Highland light infantry, will have a preface by his brother, Gilbert Chesterton. The history will be published in May. In England there has been published a monograph by Louis J. McQuilland and "J. K. Prothero" (Mrs. Cecil Chesterton), which makes an intimate personal study of him.

Mrs. Katherine Reynolds is a new author. "Green Valley" [Little Brown] is her first novel. She is what publishers call a "find." She has the rare quality of finding the pulse of things, and being able to read its beats when she locates it. "Green Valley" is the story of a country town, just that; but it is a story written with a real sympathy for small towns. Mrs. Reynolds is practically a Chicagoan, though she lives so quietly and works so hard that Chicago scarcely knows her. She lives in Lombard, Ill., and she was "discovered" by Hiram Moe Greene, editor of the Woman's World.

"Anchors Aweigh" [Scribners] is a volume of naval stories by Harriet Welles, so really and truly naval that Secretary Daniels says it is a classic interpretation of navy life. They're awfully good stories in spite of that.

A literal minded friend asked Henry Van Dyke why he called his new volume of stories "The Valley of Vision," and not the mountain of vision. "Because," Dr. Van Dyke answered, "it is in the valley of suffering that the deepest visions of the meaning of life come to us."

"Ruth of the U. S. A." [McClurg], Edwin Balmer's war novel, which appeared serially in THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE, is now available in book form.

"The Son of Pio" [Dutton] is another of C. L. Carlsen's intimately real stories of life in the Philippines. "The Taming of Calinga" you remember.

Eleanor H. Porter's newest glad book is "Dawn" [Houghton Mifflin], the story of a blind boy who sees a spiritual light.

In recognition of his work on "The Book of Belgium's Gratitude," William J. Locke has been made a Chevalier de l'Ordre de la Couronne by the king of the Belgians. Mrs. Locke has received the Medaille de la Reine Elisabeth as a token of gratitude for turning her house into a convalescent home for Belgian soldiers.

Instead of a harp Claude plays a piano in heaven, and he has a "jolly little den." Claude is the latest of the spirits to return to the earth in ink. He was a young British aviator. His news from the life beyond is O. K.'d by no less a city editor than Sir Oliver Lodge. "Claude's Book" [Holt] it is.

Lieut. Franck Louis Schoell is back at his post in the French department of the University of Chicago—a memorable figure in his horizon blue uniform with its seven wound chevrons. He left in 1914 to exchange his pen for the flaming sword. He was a prisoner for two years in Germany and during those years he learned Polish. He is now translating into French a four volume Polish classic, "The Peasants," by W. H. Reymont. He will make an English translation as soon as the French one is finished. He says that it is one of the greatest novels ever written.

Here's gratitude. Edgar Rice Burroughs, the Tarzan man, has named his new estate in California "Tarzana." "Jungle Tales of Tarzan" [McClurg] is the Tarzan book for this year, the sixth.

"He Made His Wife His Partner" [Harpers] is the inspiring and uplifting title of Henry Irving Dod[illegible] latest novel.

Capt. Carroll J. Swan paid a touching tribute to "Denny" Brunton, his devoted orderly whom he so frequently mentions in "My Company" [Houghton Mifflin], and who didn't come back. He had been given a great bouquet of roses by the boys of Springfield, Mass., who were in his company. He was about to talk to the hall full and overflowing with people when some one told him that Denny's mother was in the balcony. He gathered the roses together and took them himself to Denny's mother.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox had a great time in London, so Hayden Church writes, trying to get a bath. She rented a very dressy apartment, with a "double back action self-folding bath tub," but she couldn't work it on account of a telephone which was in the way. She wrote a plea to the controller, enclosing a copy of "I Did Not Come Home Cl[illegible] which is an unusual literary feat, a parody of her own [illegible], "Soldiers, Come Home Clean," a fiery appeal for spiritual cleanliness. Here is one of the verses that Mr. Controller got:

> This is the song for a woman,
>   As she crosses the seas of storm,
> To the lands afar, where bath tubs are,
>   And water that runs and is warm.
> O, turn on the faucet fully,
>   The hot, hot faucet, I mean!
> And fill up my tub for a grand old scrub,
>   For I have not come home clean.

Douglas C. McMurtrie, director of the Red Cross Institute for Crippled and Disabled Men and president of the Federation of Associations for Cripples, has written "The Disabled Soldier" [Macmillan], in which he describes the modern program of rehabilitation. "The American Journal of Care for Cripples," which is edited by Dr. McMurtrie, is now published monthly.

"In Flanders Fields" (Putnam's) is finally procurable in book form. It is the title poem of a slender volume of twenty-nine short poems and a somewhat pedantic life and letters of Lieut. Col. John McCrae by Sir Andrew Macphail. We can never again hear the word Flanders without seeing its fields blood red with poppies—so shines a lovely poem in a naughty world.

I heard an ironic story about Alan Seeger the other evening. He loved deeply, though moodily, a little French girl whose faith in him as a poet was as nothing compared to her faith in him as a lover. As he left to go to the front he said, "I have nothing to leave you except my poems. They are the dearest thing in the world to me. I may not come back. Take them." She pettishly said that she didn't want them, they weren't worth anything anyway. He left, with the parting assurance that they would be worth something some day. He sent them to a friend, who turned them over to his mother. And thus ended the first lesson for the little girl of little faith.

The Bookman is suffering another sea change into something rich and strange. It will still be published by George H. Doran, but it will be bigger and better and more authoritative than ever. Robert Cortes Holliday, author of "Walking Stick Papers," will be its guiding hand. I confess to a confidence that Bob Holliday could guide anything or anybody. He is one of those quiet, big men who scare you to death when you first see them and turn out to be just as human and American as pumpkin pie. His book of essays, by the way, is the most popular volume of the sort in the country just now.

Charles Hanson Towne, himself a poet of rare perception and beauty, came back from England with a precious eight lines of lovely verse. He found them in the London Times. He recited them to me in the midst of a babble of dinner table chatter. It was like a sharp, clear melody in a din of Scriabin. The Shropshire Lad has sung again.

ON A MERCENARY ARMY.

By A. E. Housman.

> These, in the day when heaven was falling,
>   The hour when earth's foundations fled,
> Followed their mercenary calling
>   And took their wages—and are dead.
> Their shoulders held the world suspended;
>   They stood—and earth's foundations stay;
> What God abandoned, these defended,
>   And took the sum of things for pay.

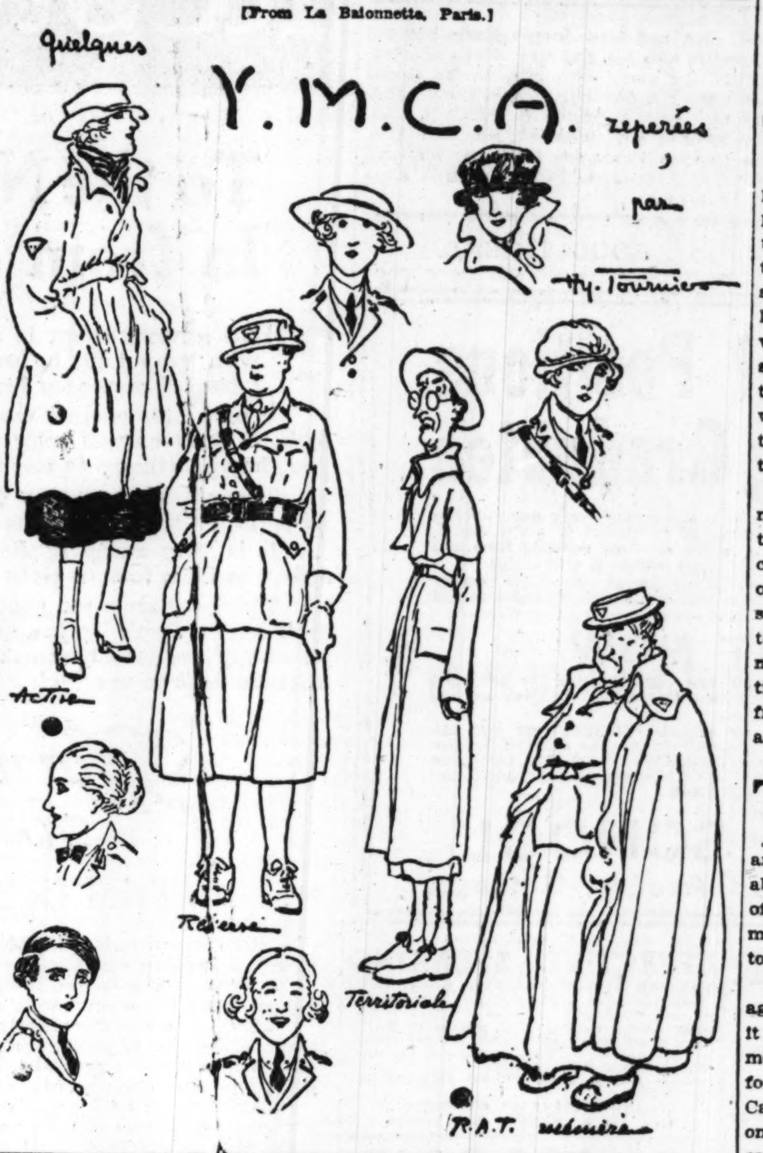
In the death of Charles E. Van Loan on March 2 "over two million readers a week" lost one of their most popular and entertaining writers. He put the movies into short stories, and he did it with a knack that made the stories fun to read. There are many of us who will sincerely mourn his going.

A

FRENCH VIEW OF Y. M. C. A. GIRLS.

[From La Baïonnette, Paris.]



THE LADY ABBESS

By Hortense Flexner

[From Youth.]

A lady tall and frail and rare,
  She comes wind-blown along the street,
From places far and otherwhere
  She comes on swift and gentle feet,
And, though she wears no snowy hood
Nor trailing robe—I know she should.

For she has walked down shadowed halls,
  Past pointed windows, known soft bells,
Dwelt in great peace behind white walls
  With sorrow that she never tells,
And made those glad who crossed her way,
Pale fluttering nuns in white and gray.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

MARCH-APRIL

The Greatest Law.

WILD geese flying in the first light of dawn from the lake to the marsh in the valley, changing their formation and shifting their direction but never the assurance of their purpose, silent, flying low, regimented by instinct, unquestioning and perfect in an established order.

Robins singing to this first light of dawn, singing before feeding; blue jays not shrieking but in the softest bird melodies; grackles bobbing in the maples; the blue bird singing from the fence; the meadow lark from the field.

Woods and fields growing in song; feathered waves coming in unseen as immigrants but found for the moment as residents; unseen waves of seen things, coming in from the south under the impulse of the greatest law—singing, if the blue bird; silent, if the hermit thrush; unseen, virtually, in the mass movement, conspicuous in the individual movement.

Maples wet with sap, thorns with swelling buds, hepatica uncurling furry spirals which soon will spread the slopes with white. The greatest law working its miracle of change with serenity, the greatest force revealing itself without the sound of marching feet, the greatest rhythm without the beat of drums.

There is only the song which fills the woods and fields, and the greatest law otherwise is as noiseless as it is irresistible.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE

By Theodore Roosevelt

(From "Theodore Roosevelt: An Autobiography.")

THE Monroe doctrine lays down the rule that the western hemisphere is not hereafter to be treated as subject to settlement and occupation by old world powers. It is not international law; but it is a cardinal principle of our foreign policy. There is no difficulty at the present day in maintaining this doctrine, save where the American power whose interest is threatened has shown itself in international matters both weak and delinquent. The great and prosperous civilized commonwealths, such as the Argentine, Brazil, and Chile, in the southern half of South America, have advanced so far that they no longer stand in any position of tutelage toward the United States. They occupy toward us precisely the position that Canada occupies. Their friendship is the friendship of equals for equals.

My view was that as regards these nations there was no more necessity for asserting the Monroe doctrine than there was to assert it in regard to Canada. They were competent to assert it for themselves. Of course if one of these nations, or if Canada, should be overcome by some old world power, which then proceeded to occupy its territory, we would undoubtedly, if the American nation needed our help, give it in order to prevent such occupation from taking place. But the initiative would come from the nation itself, and the United States would merely act as a friend whose help was invoked.

THE case was [and is] widely different as regards certain—not all—of the tropical states in the neighborhood of the Caribbean sea. Where these states are stable and prosperous, they stand on a footing of absolute equality with all other communities. But some of them have been a prey to such continuous revolutionary misrule as to have grown impotent either to do their duties to outsiders or to enforce their rights against outsiders.

The United States has not the slightest desire to make aggressions on any one of these states. On the contrary, it will submit to much from them without showing resentment. If any great civilized power, Russia or Germany, for instance, had behaved toward us as Venezuela under Castro behaved, this country would have gone to war at once. We did not go to war with Venezuela merely because our people declined to be irritated by the actions of a weak opponent, and showed a forbearance which probably went beyond the limits of wisdom in refusing to take umbrage at what was done by the weak; although we would certainly have resented it had it been done by the strong. In the case of two states, however, affairs reached such a crisis that we had to act. These two states were Santo Domingo and the then owner of the Isthmus of Panama, Colombia.

The Santo Domingan case was the less important; and yet it possessed a real importance, and moreover is instructive because the action there taken should serve as a precedent for American action in all similar cases. During the early years of my administration Santo Domingo was in its usual condition of chronic revolution. There was always fighting, always plundering; and the successful graspers for governmental power were always pawning ports and custom-houses, or trying to put them up as guarantees for loans. Of course the foreigners who made loans under such conditions demanded exorbitant interest, and if they were Europeans expected their governments to stand by them. So utter was the disorder that on one occasion when Admiral Dewey landed to pay a call of ceremony on the president, he and his party were shot at by revolutionists in crossing the square, and had to return to the ships, leaving the call unpaid. There was default on the interest due to the creditors; and finally the latter insisted upon their governments intervening. Two or three of the European powers were endeavoring to arrange for concerted action, and I was finally notified that these powers intended to take and hold several of the seaports which held custom-houses.

THIS meant that unless I acted at once I would find foreign powers in partial possession of Santo Domingo; in which event the very individuals who, in the actual event deprecated the precaution taken to prevent such action, would have advocated extreme and violent measures to undo the effect of their own supineness. Nine-tenths of wisdom is to be wise in time, and at the right time; and my whole foreign policy was based on the exercise of intelligent forethought and of decisive action sufficiently far in advance of any likely crisis to make it improbable that we would run into serious trouble.

Santo Domingo had fallen into such chaos that once for some weeks there were two rival governments in it, and a revolution was being carriend on against each. At one period one government was at sea in a small gunboat, but still stoutly maintained that it was in possession of the island and entitled to make loans and declare peace or war. The situation had become intolerable by the time that I interfered. There was a naval commander in the waters whom I directed to prevent any fighting which might menace the custom houses. He carried out his orders, both to his and my satisfaction, in thoroughgoing fashion. On one occasion, when an insurgent force threatened to attack a town in which Americans had interests, he notified the commanders on both sides that he would not permit any fighting in the town, but that he would appoint a certain place where they could meet and fight it out, and that the victors should have the town. They agreed to meet his wishes, the fight came off at the appointed place, and the victors, who if I remember rightly were the insurgents, were given the town.

It was the custom houses that caused the trouble, for they offered the only means of raising money, and the revolutions were carried on to get possession of them. Accordingly I secured an agreement with the governmental authorities, who for the moment seemed best able to speak for the country, by which these customs houses were placed under American control. The arrangement was that we should keep order and prevent any interference with the custom houses or the places where they stood, and should collect the revenues. Forty-five per cent of the revenue was then turned over to the Santo Domingo government, and 55 per cent put in a sinking fund in New York for the benefit of the creditors. The arrangement worked in capital style. On the 45 per cent basis the Santo Domingan government received from us a larger sum than it had ever received before when nominally all the revenue went to it. The creditors were entirely satisfied with the arrangement, and no excuse for interference by European powers remained. Occasional disturbances occurred in the island, of course, but on the whole there ensued a degree of peace and prosperity which the island had not known before for at least a century.

ALL this was done without the loss of a life, with the assent of all the parties in interest, and without subjecting the United States to any charge, while practically all of the interference, after the naval commander whom I have mentioned had taken the initial steps in preserving order, consisted in putting a first class man trained in our insular service at the head of the Santo Domingan customs service. We secured peace, we protected the people of the islands against foreign foes, and we minimized the chance of domestic trouble. We satisfied the creditors and the foreign nations to which the creditors belonged; and our own part of the work was done with the utmost efficiency and with rigid honesty, so that not a particle of scandal was ever so much as hinted at.

Under these circumstances those who do not know the nature of professional international philanthropists would suppose that these apostles of international peace would have been overjoyed with what we had done. As a matter of fact, when they took any notice of it at all it was to denounce it; and those American newspapers which are fondest of proclaiming themselves the foes of war and the friends of peace violently attacked me for averting war from, and bringing peace to, the island. They insisted I had no power to make the agreement, and demanded the rejection of the treaty which was to perpetuate the agreement. They were, of course, wholly unable to advance a single sound reason of any kind for their attitude.

The constitution did not explicitly give me power to bring about the necessary agreement with Santo Domingo. But the constitution did not forbit my doing what I did. I put the agreement into effect, and I continued its execution for two years before the senate acted; and I would have continued it until the end of my term, if necessary, without any action by congress. But it was far preferable that there should be action by congress, so that we might be proceeding under a treaty which was the law of the land and not merely by a direction of the chief executive which would lapse when that particular executive left office. I therefore did my best to get the senate to ratify what I had done.

IT cannot in the long run prove possible for the United States to protect delinquent American nations from punishment for the nonperformance of their duties unless she undertakes to make them perform their duties. People may theorize about this as much as they wish, but whenever a sufficiently strong outside nation becomes sufficiently aggrieved, then either that nation will act or the United States government itself will have to act.

We were face to face at one period of my administration with this condition of affairs in Venezuela, when Germany, rather feebly backed by England, undertook a blockade against Venezuela to make Venezuela adopt the German and English view about certain agreements. There was real danger that the blockade would finally result in Germany's taking possession of certain cities or custom houses. I succeeded, however, in getting all the parties in interest to submit their cases to The Hague tribunal.

"FULL MILITARY HONORS"

By Mary A. Rolfe, A. R. C.

IT was 9 o'clock on one of those soft gray days in France which remind us so of April at home that I went to the hospital with the purpose of going out with some of our boys on the journey to their last resting place. I climbed up on the seat of a big horse drawn ambulance with the American soldier driver and a chaplain from a camp fourteen miles away who had come to attend the burial of one of his men who had died suddenly of heart failure. Our load that morning was a very precious one—the bodies of five of our boys—boys whom I had watched as they slowly passed out with the future.

We went out through the great gates of the old priests' school at Le Mans, now used for camp hospital No. 52. Along the high stone wall and through the narrow winding streets we passed the great old cathedral with its tiny ancient tower, its great tower, its Druid stone and wonderful glass, on down through the "Tunnel"—a covered stone road descending to the river, built in 1261. We passed the old Roman brick tower at the right, and on across the river, leaving the ruined stone arches and porticoes of the Romans to guard the river bank at our left. Then we followed the river as far as the dam, where, turning to our left, we passed along the streets and out into the open country where once, the first time I went to the country, I saw a wonderful simultaneous sunset and moonrise. Looking back across the river, I saw the great cathedral rising impressively from the heights, and not far from it the long buildings of the hospital cut the sky line, far above us.

SOON we came to a few clustered houses and stores, and then to the gates of the cemetery, the Grand Cimetiere of Le Mans. There we were met by an army band, the chaplain, soldier pallbearers, and the firing squad. As the first coffin was lifted from the ambulance to the horse drawn, soldier ridden gun carriage every man came to salute. The guns of the firing squad were held at salute also, and so the flag draped coffin on its gun carriage passed through the gates behind the band and the chaplain, who walked. Then the others followed, with soldiers marching on either side. Behind those we honored went the firing squad, and last of all the visiting chaplain and I.

As the band played softly we passed down the long tree lined lanes of the old French cemetery, with its odd head wreaths and little shrines, on to the soldier section. It is a beautiful spot, that soldier section. As we stood there by our open graves, to the left and in front were many American graves, each marked by a large white wooden cross with the name and date and regiment. Over them was a tall flag pole, from which an American flag hung at half mast. To our right was the French section with its standard, and to our left the British colors flew. Behind us was the Belgian flag, and on a little way I saw headstones of the Chinese graves, and then back farther there were the crescent marked graves of the Turk and a row of short crosses where the German men were buried. There is something wonderfully sweet to me about that cemetery; it seems as though the True Peace rested there. The French people, in all their fine thoughtfulness, keep flowers—great wreaths of them—at the base of our American standard. They also plant tiny flowers on the German graves.

WE stood beside the open graves, and as each coffin was lifted and carried to the waiting grave the band played. The Americans stood at salute, and the French people back of the row of evergreens uncovered or crossed themselves; and then, as the chaplain stood close, the flag draped coffin was lowered. There was a pause when all was quiet, and then another boy was carried to us; again the band played, again the chaplain stepped close, and another boy had gone to his last bodily resting place. When all five had been lowered the chaplain read the burial service:

"I am the resurrection and the life. He that believed on me shall never die. . . . Inasmuch as it hath pleased Almighty God to take from this earth the souls of our deceased comrades, we commit their bodies to the ground, earth to earth, dust to dust, ashes to ashes, in the hope of the resurrection from the dead, in Christ Jesus our Lord." As he said this last, he sprinkled a little dirt with each grave.

The firing squad stepped to the end of the row of graves, and, one, two, three, the triple military salute rang out, followed by the beautiful taps, written, so we are told, to bring cheer and peace to a group of tired American soldier boys many years ago. As it still sounded, softly on the misty air the band began to play "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

NEW YORK SOCIETY

By Mme. Y.

Welcome to Sons Home from War Week's Big Event

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.] — You probably know what the big event in our week has been. It was the parade of the Twenty-seventh and the welcome of New Yorkers to its members whose boys are its own flesh and blood. These men of the Bronx and Flatbush and the smarter districts who have for some twenty or thirty years pursued the tenor of their unexciting lives in school, in trade, in the professions, have suddenly gone 'cross seas, faced death, and become heroes.

It seems so strange to reflect that the mothers of Flatbush have something in common with the ancient mothers of Sparta, that these two are alike mothers of history, and that in their most glorious experience mothers of Flatbush and of Greece are one. That, I fancy, is what many reflective New Yorkers thought when they watched these proud mothers of today glowing, weeping, smiling as their boys marched up Fifth avenue. They had sons to give and they gave them. Theirs is now the reward. These young sons of old Father Knickerbocker are appreciated and it was a great day when the official appreciation was expressed by the city of New York.

The smart set were the most profuse of all in their expressions. The finest homes in all America, which line Fifth avenue, were built up with grandstands. Each seat in those stands was sold at a goodly figure and the proceeds turned over to the men who bore the visible brunt of battle and felt its wounds. Some of the dearest of old Father Knickerbocker's sons were too hurt to march.

The beautiful, low stone mansion of Henry Frick was completely enveloped in grandstand, as were the residences of the George J. Goulds and Mrs. Vincent Astor. More than this—each of these families entertained as many boys as their dining rooms would hold at luncheon. Mrs. Astor, young and patrician in every line, was particularly appealing in her hostess-ship since she dispensed it alone. Vincent is not back yet from across the seas and the lone service star still hangs from her balcony.

I still have something further to say on this favorite theme of mine about the change in the styles of society items. It is not the thing at all today, you know, to be idle. Not to give, sell, or lend your services is dreadfully uninteresting and passé. But you know that of course as well as I do. You know, too, that it is the fashion to use your brain.

This reminds me of something a young married woman said to me in Paris one day. She is American, but has been away from America for a long time. Still she is immensely interested in the smart set of America and keeps track of them as well as she can from such a distance. She is not so successful apparently in keeping track of the tendencies of our time.

Apropos of one of the most conspicuous of the Newport colony she demanded, "Didn't he turn out to be a little queer? Took up Socialism and tried to write things—novels and a play, I heard."

Flora Payne Whitney, the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney (please note the change in this style of society item over a decade ago), is learning typewriting in order to go overseas in some clerical capacity with the Red Cross. She is studying it in the Republican women's national executive committee in Washington and—surely this is a new type of item—she sent word to her parents last week that she couldn't get up for the parade because it would interfere with her regular hours of work.

Miss Mary Garden "pulled off" her entertainment successfully on the evening of this big day of the parade. She added thereby some $30,000 toward the fund for restoring the devastated regions of France. Miss Garden gave an act from Louise and an act from Cleopatra, thereby subtly displaying the range of her activities from factory girl to queen. She ignored the historian, Mr. Ferrero's, pronouncement that Cleopatra had a fat face and portrayed her in the conventional guise, stately and fascinating.

There were many boxfuls of the smart set there to see her and her cooperating artists. Frank A. Munsey, Mrs. Samuel J. Wagstaff, Mrs. Henry S. Redmond, and Franklin A. Plummer were with Mrs. George Rose. The party with Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont included Dr. and Mrs. Preston Pope Satterwhite and Mrs. J. Philip Benkard.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Earle Stevens were with Mr. and Mrs. Edson Bradley. In the party with Mrs. Burke Roche were Mr. and Mrs. James Lowell Putnam and Augustus D. Juilliard. Another group included Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frederick Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederic Tams, and Miss Alice Preston.

Restores Gray Hair

To the Natural Color In from 4 to 8 Days

THIS advertisement is addressed to all women who are afflicted with gray hair, no matter what their age—whether they are ladies of leisure, or beginning business life.

It tells how another woman found a way to restore her whitening locks to their natural color without resorting to crude dyes. It offers you the opportunity to test the method free.

This scientific restorer can be used without fear of criticism. It is as permissible and far more important than the powder you use daily.

It is very easily applied—the user simply combs it through her hair. In from four to eight days the gray is gone!

This may seem too good to be true—prove it by accepting the free trial offer. Don't let yourself be handicapped by gray hair when it is so simply and quickly remedied. These first gray streaks are a warning that it's time to use

Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer

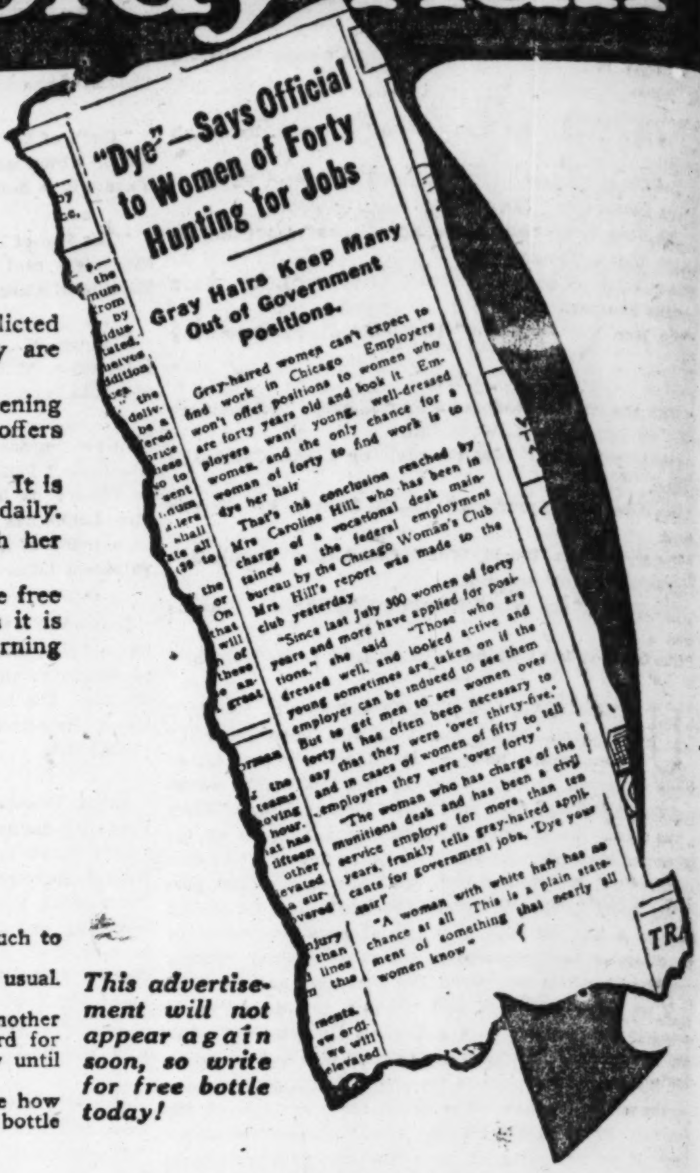
Trial Bottle and Comb Free

This clear, colorless liquid is pure and clean as water, which means much to fastidious women who shudder at the thought of greasy, repulsive dyes.

It doesn't interfere with shampooing, nor with curling and dressing as usual. No one need know you use it, even your own family.

The fact that you can apply it yourself easily and safely and surely is another great advantage to most users. But we don't want you to take our word for any one of these statements. We don't want you to spend your money until you prove that every word we write is absolutely true.

Send for the trial bottle and test as directed on one lock of hair. See how the gray disappears and the natural color returns. Then get the full sized bottle from your dealer or direct from us.



"Dye"—Says Official to Women of Forty Hunting for Jobs

Gray Hairs Keep Many Out of Government Positions.

Gray-haired women can't expect to find work in Chicago. Employers won't offer positions to women who are forty years old and look it. Employers want young, well-dressed women, and the only chance for a woman of forty to find work is to dye her hair.

That's the conclusion reached by Mrs. Caroline Hill, who has been in charge of a vocational desk maintained at the federal employment bureau by the Chicago Woman's Club. Mrs. Hill's report was made to the club yesterday.

"Since last July 300 women of forty years and more have applied for positions," she said. "Those who are dressed well, and looked active and young sometimes are taken on if the employer can be induced to see them. But to get men to see women over forty it has often been necessary to say that they were 'over thirty-five,' and in cases of women of fifty to tell employers they were 'over forty.'

"The woman who has charge of the munitions desk and has been a civil service employe for more than ten years, frankly tells gray-haired applicants for government jobs, 'Dye your hair!'

"A woman with white hair has no chance at all. This is a plain statement of something that nearly all women know."

This advertisement will not appear again soon, so write for free bottle today!

FUTURE EVENTS

Last week a little social puff of gayety blew up on account of Mi-Careme and there were a number of small but interesting parties, but this week the puff has entirely subsided and it seems as if the few people who are still in the city will be forced to lead a quite Lenten life. There is nothing of importance on this week's calendar, and from present indications it appears as if the dullness would continue until after Easter. Few of the southern and California travelers have returned home and numerous people who spent the winter in Chicago are now vacationing at Atlantic City, White Sulphur Springs, or the Virginia Hot Springs, so most of the residences of society folk are temporarily closed.

The last of the course of Lenten lectures on the Bible by Prof. Richard G. Moulton will be given tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss, 1524 Lake Shore drive. The course of lectures is under the auspices of the woman's board of St. Luke's hospital, and is for the benefit of the work of the board in the hospital.

Mrs. Wilton B. Martin will open her residence at 191 East Walton place for the second of a series of four Lenten lectures on "The Mystery of the Master" on Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock. The Rev. Charles F. Wishart has chosen for his subject "The Burning Bush Unconsumed." The series is given for the benefit of the community service of the Second Presbyterian church.

Mrs. Herbert Valentine Burrows, Mrs. Albert Fink, and Mrs. William D. McIlvaine will pour at a reception to be given tomorrow afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock at the Pallet and Chisel club in the Athenæum building.

The members of the South Shore Country club and their guests will receive the election returns over a special wire on Tuesday evening to the accompaniment of music and dancing. This afternoon there is to be a twilight concert followed by moving pictures. Tomorrow afternoon there will be a woman's bridge tournament and next Saturday night a dancing party.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Brown, who live with their daughter, Mrs. Robert O. Haldeman, will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary on Tuesday and will be at home informally at 6031 Kenmore avenue. Mr. Brown was born on the Isle of Man in 1836 and came to America at an early age. Mrs. Brown was born in Canada in 1843. They were married in Chicago and have lived here ever since. Mr. and Mrs. Brown have had four children, but only one daughter is living.

Le Cercle Française will have as its guest and speaker on Tuesday at 3 o'clock in the Fortnightly rooms, Fine Arts building, Mlle. Lucie Pierrard of the French Red Cross. Before the program there will be a members' meeting at 1:30 o'clock, at which Mme. Aillaud De Jouey will read French fables and Mme. Edward Sumerfield will read a paper on "Government Control of Public Utilities." There will be an informal reception and social hour, with tea at 4 o'clock.

The Chicago Alumnæ Association of Monticello Seminary will hold its forty-first annual reunion at 12:30 o'clock on Thursday in Marshall Field's tearoom.

The Chi chapter of Beta Alpha Sigma sorority will give its annual dance at the Cooper Carlton hotel next Friday evening.

Rabbi's Birthday to Be Clebrated by Chicago Jews

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

CHICAGO rabbis and Jewish congregations are preparing to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of the late Rabbi Isaac M. Wise, which occurs on Wednesday. They are raising a fund of $30,000, which is to be an annual gift towards $300,000 raised in the nation for the use of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

Rabbi Wise died in 1900. His work was of such beneficent and national character it is felt there ought to be a pereptual memorial of him. He it was who worked for and finally established the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. He founded the Hebrew Union college at Cincinnati and was president until his death. The $300,000 fund will be devoted to theological education, the securing of the civil and religious rights of Jews, and the extension of education through schools and synagogues.

The celebration of the centennial will be held in Cincinnati. The fund will be completed and reported, it is expected, at the annual meeting of the central conference of American rabbis in Boston in May.

Former President W. H. Taft will make one of the addresses on Wednesday evening. Mr. Taft's father and Rabbi Wise were particular friends, Cincinnati having been the Taft home for many years.

THE SCHOOL COUNSELOR

"I will go with thee and be thy guide."—Everyman.

SCHOOLING IN LEISURE HOURS.

THE opportunities for education were never so numerous as they are today. There is no reason why one cannot have more education—if it is desired. There is no reason why one cannot specialize in some particular line—business, professional, technical, or a trade—if one wishes.

If a boy or girl or a young man or woman is energetic, the fact that he or she must stop school to earn money does not mean that for the rest of life the chance of specialized training must be given up.

Chicago alone is full of opportunities for the continuing of an education outside of work hours. Evening classes are held in which instruction is given in every kind of profession, business, and trade. They are continued in many cases the year around. Some of them are public. Some are private. Some charge a tuition and others are supported by the city or state. But each and every one of them is a chance, an opportunity, for forging ahead, steadily and continuously, until the end in view has been accomplished.

These chances are open to a wide variety of boys and girls, men and women. They are possible to the person who has not been able to finish eighth grade for some reason or other and who has come to the point of realizing that in order to accomplish more in life, more education is necessary.

They are open to the one who has finished eighth grade, perhaps high schools, and who, after working a few years, has come to desire a specialized training along some particular line.

They are possible to the boy or girl who is graduating from eighth grade or from high school this June and who feels that he or she must start working for a while at least before continuing a further education along some special line.

There is probably no line in which boys and men are more interested than in the different branches of technology—mechanical engineering, which prepares a boy for a successful professional career; electrical engineering, which is commercial as well as technical; civil engineering, chemical engineering, and all the many different branches of architecture.

It is possible for the boy who is graduating from high school this year or for the man who has been out of school for some years working, to receive an education in any of these technical subjects quite outside of working hours.

Then there are all the professions which are open to men and women in the night schools—law, medicine, dentistry. Many of the best lawyers and doctors are those who were forced to receive much of their education if not all through the medium of the night school.

Just now the opportunities in civil service are especially numerous and desirable. Examinations for the different departments are held both in the fall and the spring, or whenever the government needs require. At present the isthmian canal service is in need of clerks, with entrance salaries from $1,200 to $1,500 a year.

For nearly all the positions the age limits are 18 to 55 years. To the one who is working in some position he or she is not satisfied with the civil service presents advantages distinct from those of any private employment. And it is possible to prepare for these examinations at night here in Chicago in many of the different schools. The boy or girl wishing to enter civil service in this way does not need to give up one position until he or she has secured another.

In business the chances for self-improvement for the boy and girl, even though he or she must start working immediately on leaving the grades or the high school, are just as good.

The Chicago public night schools have closed until next September, but there are many other ones in the city. It is always possible to supplement an education, even after the first youth is past.

Below is the list of courses offered in the Chicago high schools. Have you children who will enter shortly? Or have you children already in high school and are you in doubt as to whether they are pursuing the courses best suited to them?

There are over twenty courses to select from. Are you sure what line of work your boy or girl is best fitted for?

We shall be glad to answer questions on any subject pertaining to school. We want to help you to select the best the city offers in the way of training and education for your boy and girl. We want you to obtain the best the city offers in training and education for your boys and girls.

Copies of these courses will be mailed on application and detailed information given regarding them. The courses desired should be specified and stamp inclosed.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

"When I finish high school I expect to take up an agriculture course. What high school course would you advise?
"R. W. S."

There is a two year course in agriculture offered in the Chicago high schools. The first year offers a course in agronomy, wood shop, English, physiology, and science. The second year offers horticulture, botany, elementary, physics or chemistry, English, and mechanical drawing. This is a good foundation for university training in agriculture.

"Will you please tell me if they have the two year machine shop course and the two year course in mechanical drawing at the Hyde Park High school?
A. C."

They have both of the above courses at this school.

"I would be much obliged if I could receive some information regarding the Chicago public evening schools. I am a graduate of the grammar school, but I did not go to high school, as I wanted to work. Now I know that to be an architect I must graduate from high school. Please give me some information.
W. A. M."

The public evening schools are closed now until next September. There are many other schools in Chicago, however, which offer architectural courses in the evening. If you will send me your address I shall be glad to send a list to you.

"I am a senior in high school and would like to become a mechanical engineer. What are some of the best colleges that give this course? How about the state university?
J. L."

Send me your address and I will send you a list of the schools which offer excellent instruction in mechanical engineering. The University of Illinois has a reputation in this line for the fine training it gives.

There are many ways of obtaining an education, even if it is necessary to earn a part of it or all of it at the same time.

Chicago possesses many night schools, public and private alike, which educate for professional and technical careers, for business life, or for any and all of the trades.

An education today is a necessity. And an education today is within the reach of every ambitious, energetic person.

Write the School Counselor, "Chicago Sunday Tribune," for any information you desire on schools and education.

Oriental Rug Sale

In this sale of Oriental Rugs you will find a large stock to select from. Many of the pieces were purchased by us at the before-war prices.

In many sections of Persia, Turkey and Armenia the conditions are appalling; no wool, no dyes, no weavers; and the Oriental Rug industry—as we have known it—has become a thing of the past. Our advice is buy now.

You who have Oriental Rugs should value them highly. Be careful to whom you give them to clean, as thousands of fine Oriental Rugs are ruined every year by the careless treatment given them by many cleaners.

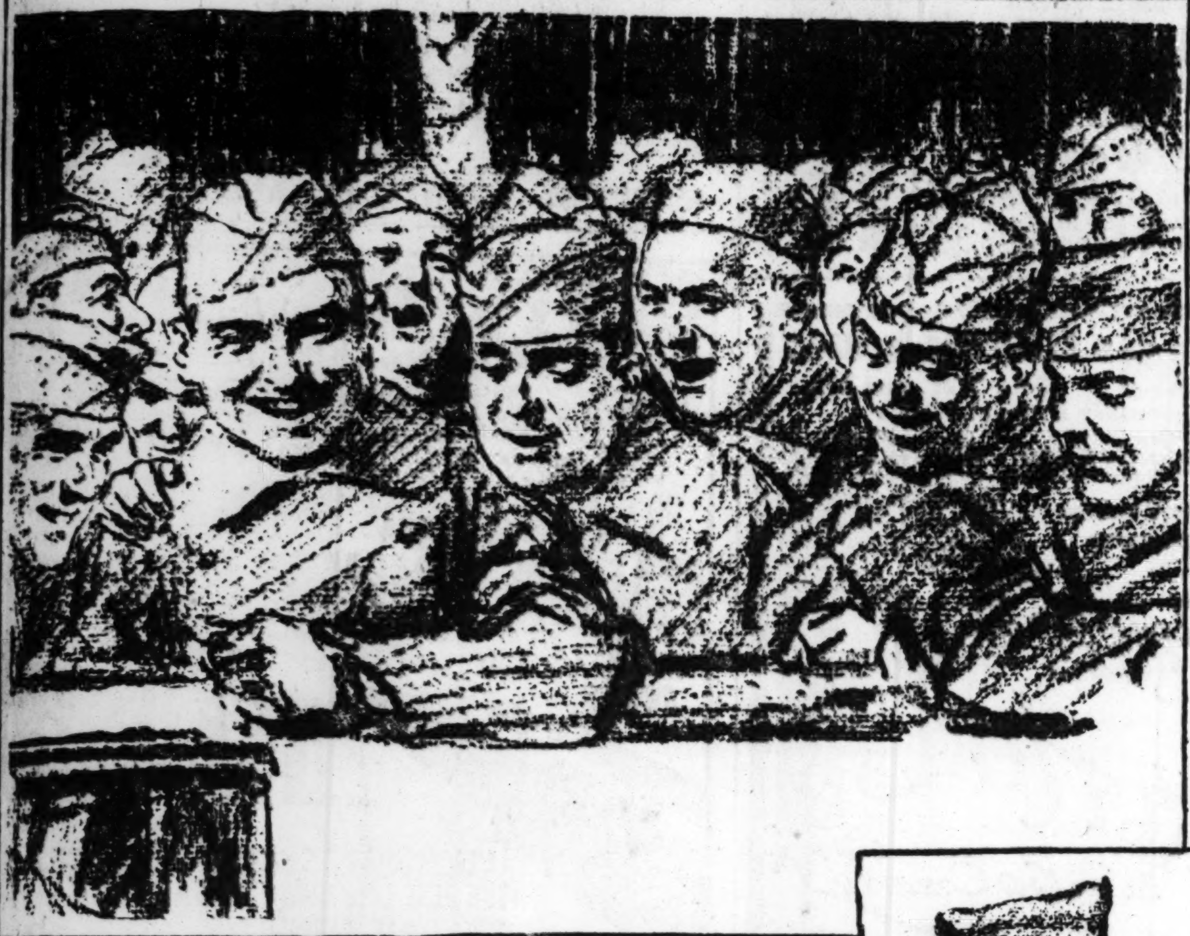
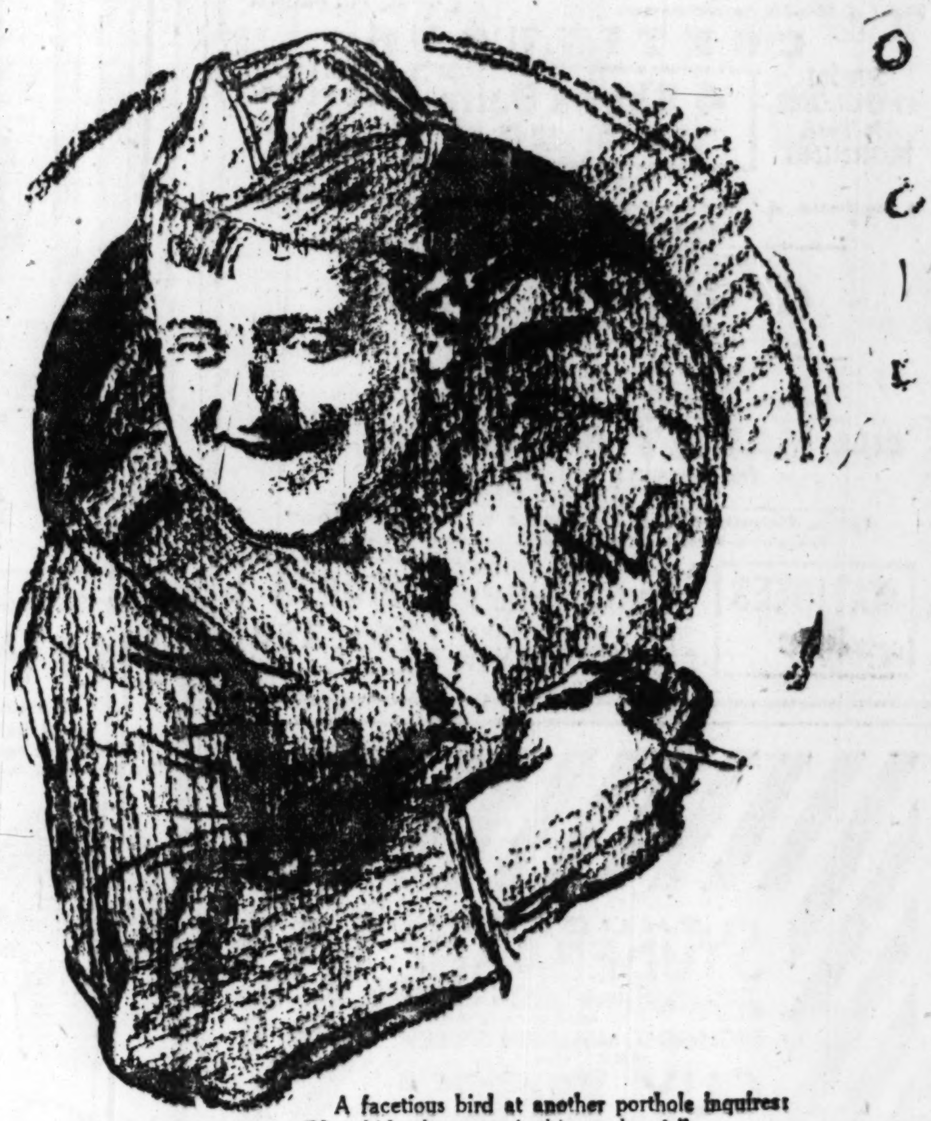
AMONG US MORTALS
"WHEN THE TROOP SHIP ARRIVES"

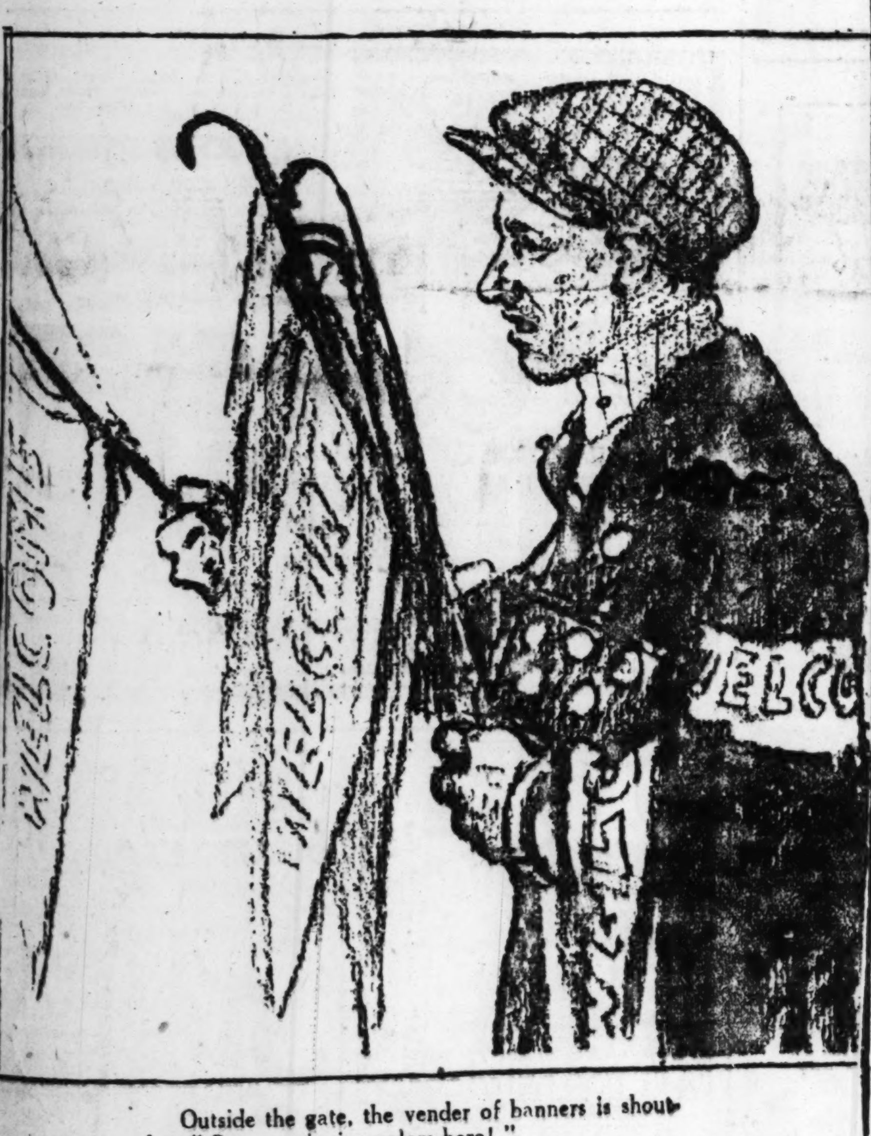
By W. E. HILL.



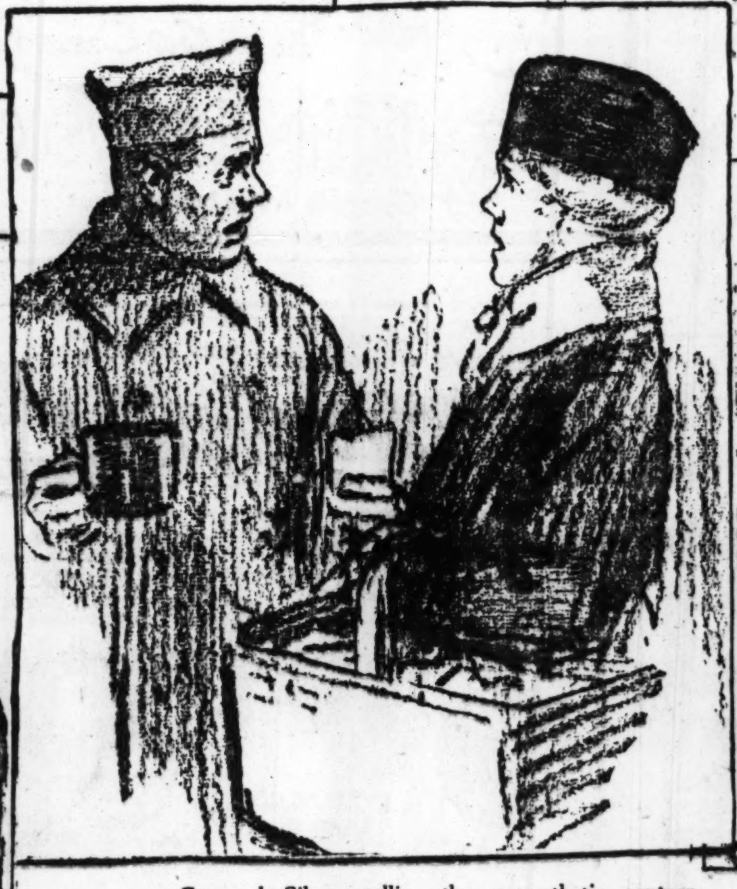
The ship noses into the pier, and the band ashore strikes up "How Dry I Am." "You said it, boy!" shout a thousand khaki clad lads.



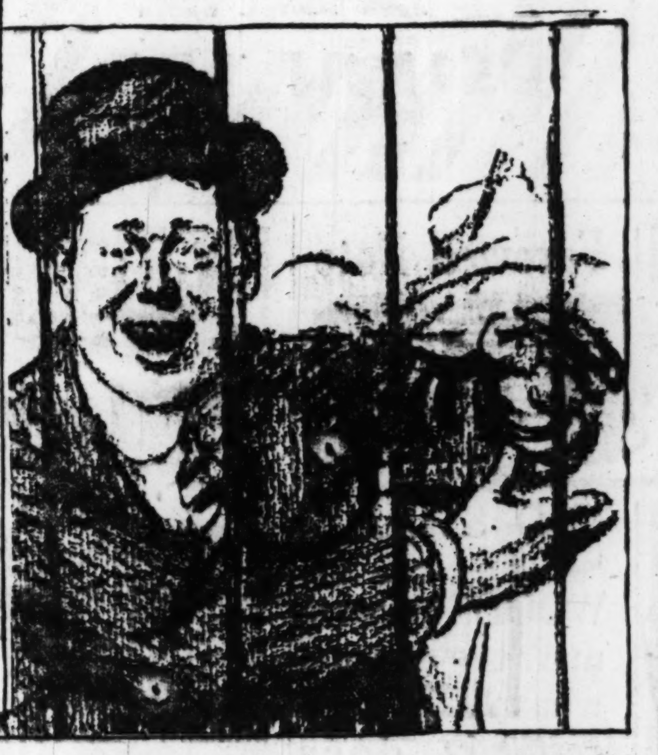
A facetious bird at another porthole inquires: "Hey, kid, what town is this, anyhow?"



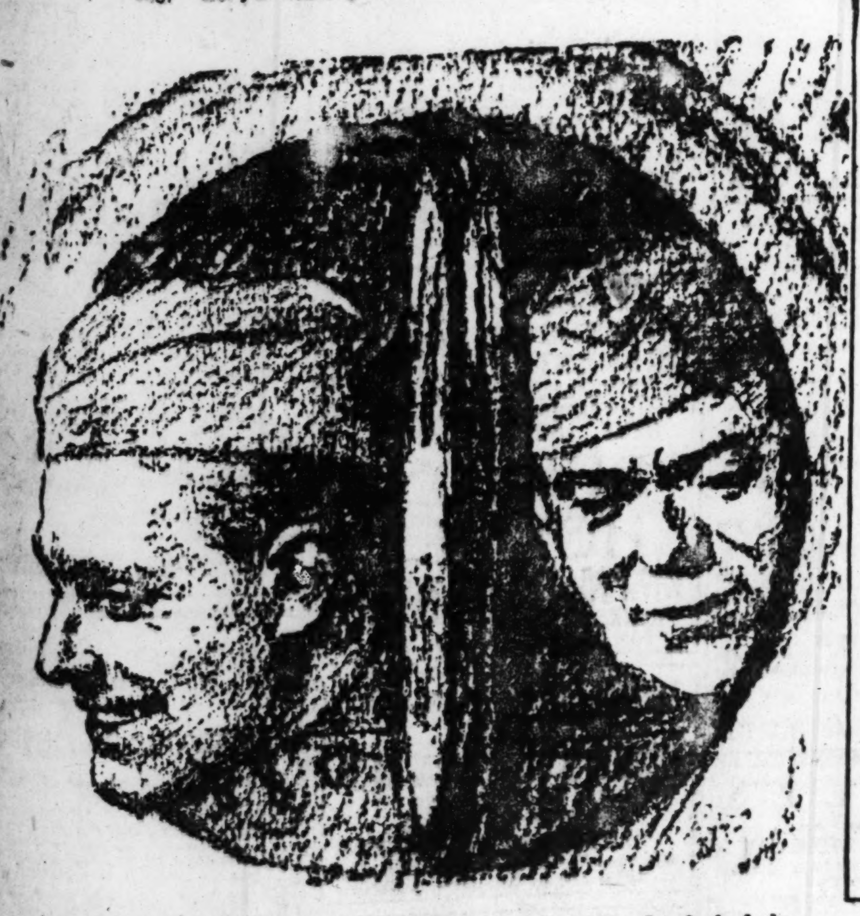
Outside the gate, the vender of banners is shouting, "Get yer winning colors here!"



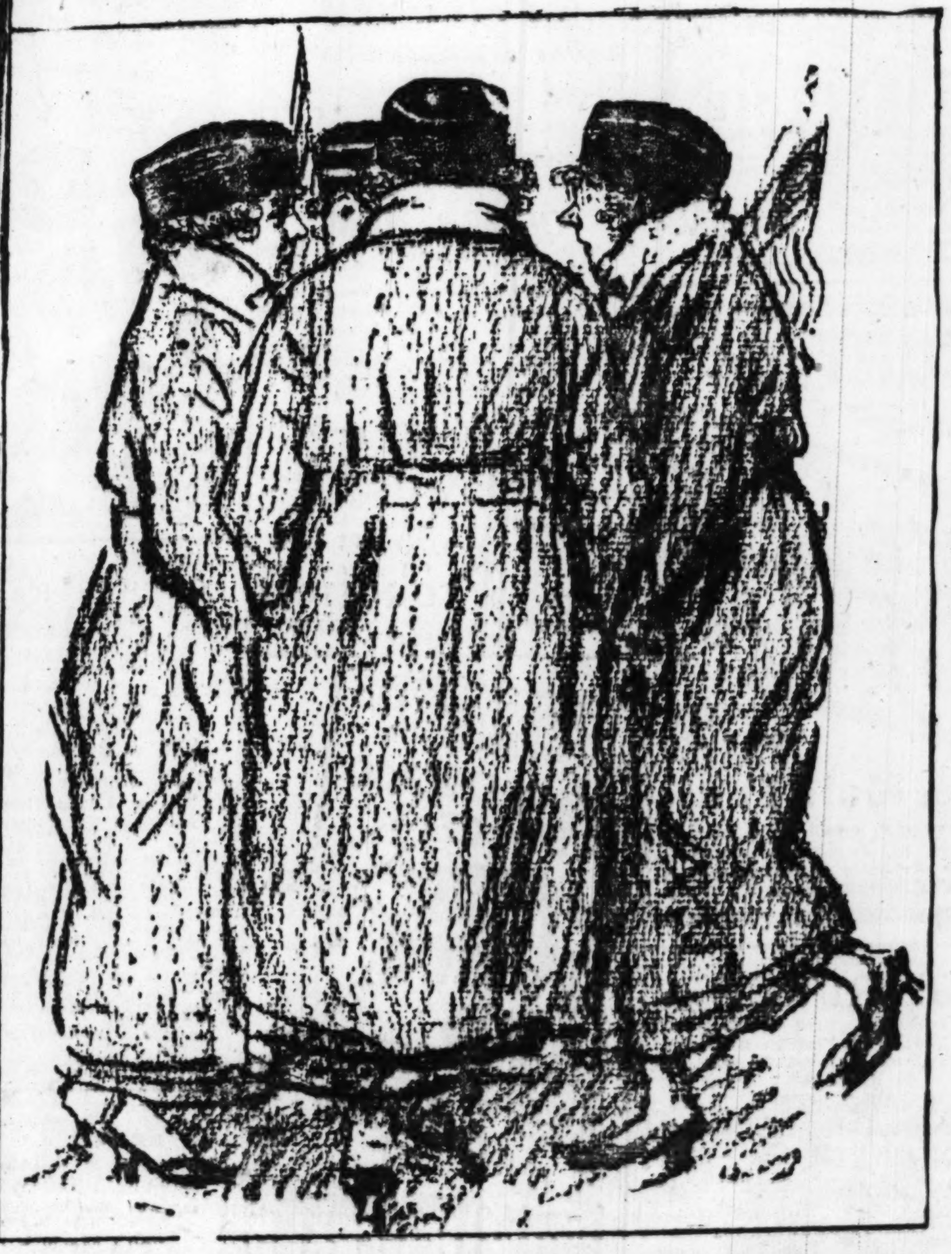
Corporal Silver, telling the sympathetic canteen worker all about the mud at Brest and incidentally demonstrating his lately acquired French. He is saying, "Why, in the morning our eyes would be stuck together with it. Oh, there was beaucoup mud all right, sister."



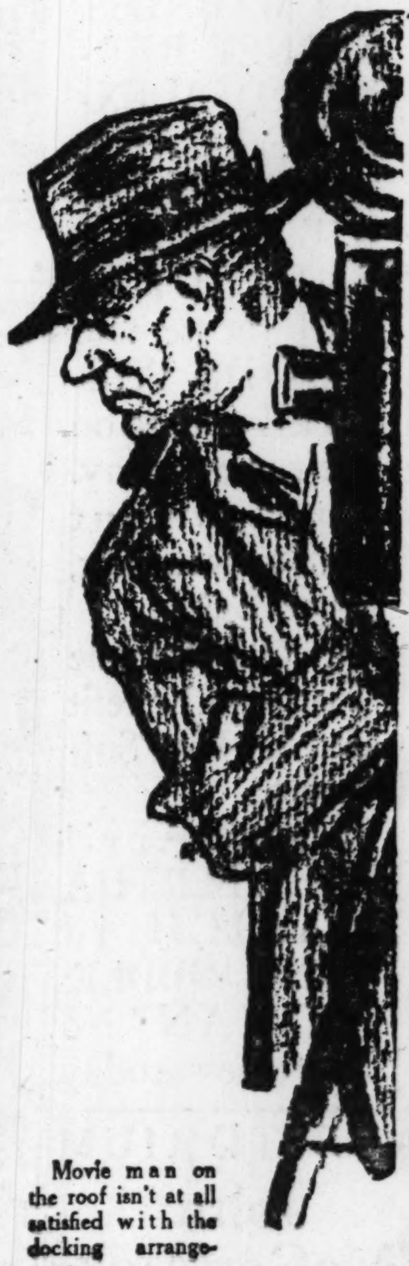
"Hey, there, Joe Riley! I gotta big steak this thick waiting for you!"



Two buddies greeting a friend on the dock: "Hey, fella, how's it feel to wear a linen collar?"



The boat is late and the canteen workers on the dock are finding it hard to keep warm.



Movie man on the roof isn't at all satisfied with the docking arrangements.

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

A CORRESPONDENT in Pasadena writes to THE TRIBUNE raising the devil with Sheppard Butler because that critic did not blow the tin bazoo and burn the red fire of enthusiasm over "The Better 'Ole." He was in the war, this correspondent, and he knows that Captain Bairnsfather's humorous pictures of the Soldiers Three caught the spirit of the British army and reflected its indomitable soul better than all the reams of photographic and impressionistic literature printed in the books and newspapers. He grieves sarcastically for Chicago. if Chicago does not know that this is a fact. "My thumb," says he, "is to my nose."

Being in Pasadena the correspondent is evidently unaware that it is not Captain Bairnsfather's cartoons that are on exhibition at the Illinois. "The Better 'Ole" is not a display of the captain's pictorial studies of the British soldier (of which Mr. Butler is an eloquent admirer), but a show made with them as its basis and containing songs and chorus girls. Mr. Butler's angry Pasadena protestant might as well insist that "Hamilton" was a great play because Hamilton was a great man, or that a drama entitled "J. Pierpont Morgan" would certainly be a financial success.

He ought to know that it is a rule of the theater (ordained by those who go to the theater) to vulgarize every art with which it come in contact. It cheapens everything, with the customary exceptions, from "Hamlet" to "Penrod." It desecrates good plays with bad acting, and good books with bad dramatizations. Its scenery belittles all it touches from the blue sky downward, and its stage direction transforms human beings into bizarre automatons, whose every motion is a mystery. It is the toothpick, the chewing gum, the Saturday night bath, the Twentieth Century Limited, the Waldorf-Astoria, the campaign speech, the jazz cabaret, the lip rouge, the Broadway, the wild woman, and the head waiter of the arts. That is what we wish it to be, and that is what it is.

Mr. McCutcheon intrusted his ineluctable "Bird Center" series for dramatization to Glen MacDonough and Julian Mitchell, neither of whom know, except by hearsay, that life exists outside of the city of New York. The result upon the stage was that Mr. McCutcheon's deep, sympathetic, and humorous studies of simple village lights and shadows came into the theater as a shabby musical New York melodrama, adorned with the hips fashionable in those days and the invitation eyes prevalent in these. It was as a nun wearing tights and a yellow wig, or a rube in a silk hat and spats, and it was altogether a melancholy debacle.

Mr. Tarkington, though a shrewder artist than Mr. McCutcheon, profited little by his friend's experience. A great and fine zealot for truth about boy life, he insisted (so he has announced) that the drama should "lay off" Penrod and his pals and leave them as they are in literature. Concerning the adult part of it he must have said to himself, "The worse it is the more money it will get," and so he assigned the melodramitist, E. E. Rose, author of "The Rosary," to footlight it.

Now, Mr. Rose is the most primitive and naïve of the theatrical cynics. His formula is a black villain, a white hero, a pink heroine, a shallow intrigue, and 30 cents for the best seats. His actors are required to be as remote from this earth as the things they act. They must make strange noises when they utter his peculiar lingo, and their every idiotic deed must be done with the outlandish gesture of the imbecile. "Mother," I heard a small girl say to the lady who was leading her out of the Olympic the other day, "why did Penrod's sister love those awful men? I thought they were both crazy." "But both of them were good looking," replied her critical parent, conclusively.

What a pity it was to turn that refreshing comprehension of childhood over to a theatrical puddler for dramatization. "Penrod," which is a clearer, perhaps, and a more honest understanding of a boy even than "Tom Sawyer," should have been spared the humilities of the theater. But it was good to see those genuine youngsters acting their eager hearts out and proving that the older a player is, the worse. They were the mature characters, the adults the juvenile. I regard the little picanninny who impersonated Herman (or Vermin, whichever it was) as an infinitely better artist than the mechanic who wrote the comedy, or than any of the grown actors who acted in it.

Capt. Bairnsfather dramatized his own work, and so it is less hopeless than it might be if one of the Broadway Huns had subjected it to his customary rapines. "The Better 'Ole" is as good as it can be, if prosperous. Mr. Hopper, who plays the redoubtable Bill, one suspects, is the most thoughtful of the American actors, and the most sincere. He is, after many years of American audiences, still ambitious, and he longs to play in a good play. As Bill in the Bairnsfather pictures he is Kodak. His nose is camous, his figure is large and loose. His deep voice sounds the humor of the character; he is the filthy, the courageous, the fatalistic, the ugly British soldier whose idea is to get it over with. If one were to venture a criticism of Mr. Hopper's characterization, it would be to suggest that he is a bit senile at times and not the vigorous and redoubtable battler to whom long hikes and shell fire are as a Bairnsfather joke. He is pathetic rather than humorous, and he might be much better in a war play that had no tights and wheezes.

What a gay and airy thing is war, when recalled by the current drama. Even so conscientious and fearless a chronicler as Burton Holmes, shows the soldiers only at pleasure, the Americans of the bloody Argonne and the Champagne engaged in nothing more serious than pork chops and pies. Smiling doughboys appear upon the screen and are fed with luscious doughnuts by Salvation Army girls, and they flit away to luxurious trenches, happy and presumably patriotic. There is little of the ghastly background of shells and fox-holes and cemeteries, which are, more than fried cakes, the substance of the scene. But we must not be bothered.

So it is with "Atta Boy" and "The Better 'Ole." The war is a joke. "The Girl Behind the Gun" smears the awful thing with tenors and prima donnas, and little scandals, and amours, and tunes. It is the most pitiably inefficient of the Klaw & Erlanger series of musical comedy. The Shuberts at their best could not do worse—which constitutes a world's record.

One wishes that the American theater, with its audience, would keep away from the war. It hasn't the faintest idea of it, and its usual endeavor to suggest it is a sacrilege. The present game of the American stage is to show, for instance, a bed room and a bed, with a kittenish soubrette jumping into it, with her stockings on, always with her stockings on, and a panting male in the offing. Or a sirupy one-syllable romance wherein Tilly, a Mennonite maid, marries a literary and passionate chap from Harvard; or a dialect charade participated in by funny, characteristic Jews in grotesque circumstance. There is enough to put upon the stage without touching the thing which, if we may be permitted to say so, the American actor and the American dramatist has remained aloof from, save for a few gloriously unselfish exceptions.

News of the Players

Mr. Kaufman, the dramatic editor of the New York Times, sends me tonight a fraternal news telegram saying that if any further harbingers of spring—aye, even of summer—are needed, there is the intelligence that "The Follies of 1919" is now in process of being got together and will open in Atlantic City on May 31. Bert Williams, after a year's absence from the troupe, will positively rejoin the organization this season, and the holdovers from the present show will include Marilyn Miller and Eddie Cantor.

Also by wire from Mr. Kaufman comes the information that: Eugene Walter's newest play is "The Challenge" and will presently be given a preliminary whirl by the Selwyns. Margaret Lawrence, borrowed for a week from "Tea for Three," will head the cast, and Alan Dinehart, late of "The Crowded Hour," will also be in the company.

Winchell Smith and John L. Golden disposed of the English rights to "Three Wise Fools" during the last week, but it is probable that they themselves will figure as the London producers of "Turn to the Right" and "Lightnin'" when the time comes for their presentation abroad. Both are properties of too great value to be idly sold. Frank Bacon, according to the present plan, will go to London to play "Lightnin'," which doubtless means that the English production of that play is several seasons distant, for Chicago is yet to be entertained by Mr. Bacon's knack of elderly pathos.

"Claudia," by Edith Ellis, has been placed in rehearsal by John Cort, with Josephine Victor in the leading rôle. It is destined for next season. Also intended for the season ahead is the Grace George play, "She Would and She Did," which has been exhibiting in the outskirts of the middle west.

Margaret Illington, who has not acted since "Our Little Wife" was briefly seen, will play in New York again next week in William Anthony McGuire's play, "The Good Bad Woman" (formerly "Everyman's Castle").

Dispatches from London confirm the fact that "Aphrodite," a Parisian success of pre-war days, will be a next season's American entertainment. Costumes and other accessories are being obtained in Paris.

Miss Ruth Chatterton
IN "MOONLIGHT AND HONEYSUCKLE"
POWERS

Miss Chatterton tomorrow night at Powers' is to be a Washington belle, the daughter of an Arizona senator, and she will have three aspirants for her love, marrying in the ultimate act the one who is a captain in the U. S. A.

Notes

The Hattons' comedy "Madam Sappho," will be played by Miss Grace Valentine next season under Oliver Morosco's direction. Mr. Morosco is getting ready to produce a new musical comedy called "Smith, Jones and Brown."

The drama in which F. X. Bushman will act audibly next year is said to be "Mont-Martre," something that A. H. Woods found in Paris.

Dear Sir: You know how I dread publicity, but your Sunday column fairly shrieks for interesting stuff. So——

I wrote a song, words and music, called "Prohibition Blues," and took it to New York and showed it to Nora Bayes and Nora put it on and Reminck took it for publication and sent a check to she and I both for advance royalty and honestly you couldn't have knocked me over with a straw. And when she opened in Philadelphia the Press' lead was: "It's worth two dollars of anybody's money to hear Nora Bayes sing 'Prohibition Blues.'" And the Evening Bulletin said: "The best of her song numbers was 'Prohibition Blues,' a Negro lament of the dark days to come." And the Record said: "The star had a song about Prohibition and it was a real laugh getter." And the other papers gave it honorable mention.

Now you don't have to print a d—— word about this, but the season is drawing near and the Hesperus seems to have taken a new louse on life.

R. W. LARDNER.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Maurice Maeterlinck's "A Burgomaster of Belgium" is an echo—an echo of both the war and the war plays that followed it. But it is a tempered echo, projected by one who speaks softly and carries a cane.

The basis, according to those who know, is an authenticated incident of the invasion of Belgium, when the gray wolves were sweeping over the country and laying it waste in the interests of a short war and a bloody one. It seeks by suggestion to visualize the effect of that invasion on the simple people of M. Maeterlinck's country and their natural reaction to it; to make plain to the world how impossible it was for them to understand it. One day they were puttering among their roses and the next they were being shot for having dared to confess that they hated the Prussians.

And yet Maeterlinck, being a gentle person, with the soul of a poet and the vision of a seer, seeks to be fair. He is almost apologetic in his efforts to accord the Germans a reasonable measure of fair play. They knew only too well what they were doing, he admits, but thousands among them were kind enough to regret the necessity for having to do it, and other thousands, having the German mind, were helpless tools in the hands of their misguided superiors.

His story concerns the one day's experience of the burgomaster of Stilemonde, a gentle horticulturist, who was much more concerned about the strange plant disease that had recently attacked his orchids than he was about the threatened sweep of the human pests from the other side of the Rhine. Yet he had taken the precaution to warn his people to bear themselves as respectable noncombatants in whatever crisis might arise, and he had collected all the firearms in the village and stored them in the town hall.

When the Germans come it happens their officers include the son-in-law of the burgomaster. Through his influence, he being one of the well meaning but helpless type of German, the village of Stilemonde is saved much and the family of the good burgomaster is treated with reasonable respect—until an officer of the invading force is shot from ambush in the woods near by. Then Prussian authority asserts itself.

By order of the major in command the burgomaster is held as hostage. If by 7 o'clock that evening the real murderer is not apprehended, or a village victim of some sort found, the mayor will be shot, both as punishment for the crime committed in his district and as a warning to other villages yet to be invaded.

The search for a victim is not successful, the assumption being that the officer had been killed by one of his own men, and the execution of the burgomaster is ordered. Several offer to take his place, but he is an honest man and refuses to accept the sacrifice, which amazes the German son-in-law. Such an attitude is quite beyond his comprehension—and yet, as the burgomaster tells him, it is the way decent people act the world over.

A simple, direct, appealing little tragedy, save in its last act, when the emotional scenes attendant upon the burgomaster's last moments are somewhat long drawn out. It is written with fine feeling and very quietly and well played, particularly by E. Lyall Sweete as the burgomaster. It is not, as may readily be seen, a play for those who "want to forget the war." But it is a good play, in that it vividly recalls many things that we should not be permitted to forget—ever.

Two seasons ago Blanche Bates was content to stay at home and bring up the George Creel family, a restless but happy wife and mother, with no more than a fleeting thought now and again of returning to the stage.

Then came the war and Husband Creel went away to Washington to get himself talked about as the head of a committee on public information—a publicity scheme that was amazingly successful so far as George himself was concerned. Miss Bates, also eager to get into war work of some sort, turned then to the Red Cross and later took part in the British recruiting play, "Getting Together." When this entertainment scored one of the surprising successes of the season and was taken over by a private management she continued in the cast.

But the signing of the armistice practically sealed the fate of "Getting Together," and the actress returned to home and the Red Cross—staging for that organization a vaudeville playlet that she hoped would do a lot of good. Being a very poor playlet, however, it did no good at all and was promptly withdrawn.

But by this time the call of the stage had fastened itself upon the former "Darling of the Gods," not to forget the "Girl from the Golden West," and she could not contentedly deny it. So when Henry Miller offered her the rôle of the favorite courtesan, De Montespan, in "Moliere," she accepted with enthusiasm. A few weeks later she had scored the personal success of the cast.

Last Sunday night there was a special performance of a blank verse tragedy called "Medea," written by Thomas, older brother of George Broadhurst, playwright. Miss Bates had the name part, and again she triumphed. Her audience frankly cheered her at the conclusion of her big scenes and she was forced to make a flustered but sympathetic speech of thanks.

Thus an actress who was, in the managerial catalogues, set down with those who have done their popular bit and are through, has returned to Broadway and conquered a new public while recalling her old following again to her support. Which, I submit, is an incident du theatre worth recording. It so seldom happens that way.

By Frederick Donaghey

ETHEL LEGINSKA, scheduled to play next Sunday, is reported ill and off; and the vernal invasion of Chicago pianists is not reduced numerically by the casualty: Serge Prokofieff is to take her place in Kimball hall. He will, in recital, be new here, and, perhaps, as interesting as he has been in Manhattan where he has taken up plenty of space in the dailies. Whether you like him or like him not for what he did in his visit with the Orchestra in December, you may not deny that he is vivid and live; and traveled persons who have heard him play pieces not of his own make tell me that he is a somebody of the keyboard.

Then, Prokofieff has been put into Chicago importance since December by Mr. Campanini's having hired him to write an opera for use next season in the Auditorium. "The Love of the Three Oranges," it is called—at present, anyway; and writers of other columns have uttered most of the expected japes on the title, and two or three that are good. Prokofieff, talking about his opera, indicates that it is to be farther from routine than anything in the known répertoire, including the Diaghileff-Metropolitan version of "Le Coq d'Or," in which the prima donna is the danseuse: they had to change the bill one night when the lovely Rosina Galli had laryngitis in her legs.

And another violinist is coming—Isolde Menges, who is English, young a pupil of Auer, unknown in Chicago and the owner of a scrap book containing nice notices from the London and New York City papers. Her date is Sunday, May 4, in Kimball hall.

Harold Bauer, whose recital on Sunday last was one of the season's delights, will be soloist in next week's Orchestra program, with Beethoven's most popular concerto, the fifth, as his conveyance.

John Carpenter's symphony is to be revived by the Orchestra for the program of April 18-19. This, in my belief, is the best work of the kind yet composed by an American. Sophie Braslau, the Metropolitan's good contralto, has been assigned to the same program in the revision made necessary by her inability to come this week. Whether she is to return for the summer to Ravinia is not yet made known by Mr. Eckstein, intendent of the institution.

That Mr. Carpenter is engaged on a ballet-pantomime, designed for the opera-stage, is known. His libretto, or "argument," is the story of Oscar Wilde's "The Birthday of the Infanta."

The war-tax is off on the Orchestra's concerts: that is, starting Tuesday. Thursday night's line of buyers for the next—the final—Pop, April 17, paid the face-price of the tickets; and subscribers to the Friday-Saturday concerts have been sent a refund of the tax for the four programs yet to be played. The tax on the symphony orchestras was, maybe, a mistake from the start. They are not ventures for profit; most of them incur an annual deficit in the strict balancing of income and outgo; and performances in a year are so few as to make the tax negligible for the purposes of revenue. Mr. Roper, who is in charge of internal taxes for this United States, so badly bungled the processes that, calculated from the beginning of the impost in October of 1917, it is doubtful if he took in from the big orchestras enough to pay the fees and costs of collection.

Mary Garden, Caruso, Mischa Elman, and Arthur Rubinstein, a pianist who is among the talked-abouts down there, are combined for a musical on Wednesday night in one of New York's hotels. If they haven't cut their wage-scale for the occasion, five thousand dollars will be needed to pay them off at the end of the concert.

Critics review themselves—not the artists they criticize.—Leonard Liebling in the Musical Courier.

Mr. Gatti-Casazza, peeved that the newspapers should give up space to telling of his negotiations with the Chicago Opera's eminences, issued a formal bulletin on Friday to explain that he has never for an instant even considered engaging Galli-Curci, Muratore, Stracciari, or Marcel Journet. He especially objects to a statement that he failed to obtain one or more of the singers named because of unwillingness to meet their notions of pay; and, says he, "A good available artist is always paid what he or she is worth by the Metropolitan, which always endeavors to act in a broad, liberal spirit. With us, indeed, it is a sort of noblesse oblige."

Fine! That Muratore is to go to the Metropolitan has been the general belief ever since he withdrew from Campanini's employ in the first half of the Auditorium season. Of course, the assertion that he is to go there is without proof. That the Metropolitan should put forth any special effort to obtain Stracciari is not credible; and it is unlikely that he will be reëngaged for the Chicago company. There is, I believe, a historic reason, romantic in nature, why Journet may never sing again in the Metropolitan, where he was for a time an important person. And at no time since her sensational emergence into fame here in Chicago has Galli-Curci been without cause for thinking that she would be a welcome little lady in the Metropolitan: the proposition has been always up to her. I may add that she is to toil next season for Campanini, here and on the post-Chicago tour.

Zimbalist returns on Wednesday night, April 9, to Orchestra hall for a recital in aid of the Palestine Restoration Fund.

The Apollo Club is eager that the gold-star mothers of Chicago should be enabled to attend its concert on Sunday afternoon, April 13, in the Auditorium; and it is financially able to do as it would like in the matter—that is, invite the mothers as cost-free guests. Some donations have been received toward paying for seats, but far from enough to take care of the fifteen hundred who, it is calculated, might be counted upon to attend the concert if the opportunity to do so were given. Among the plans suggested is that you buy one or more tickets and leave them in the box-office or with the club on call by the mothers. Fifteen hundred dollars, it is estimated, would take care of all whose interest and opportunity might combine in their attending. Another difficulty is that the club is without a process for seeking out the gold-star mothers and notifying them; and that is among the reasons for this paragraph. Verdi's great Manzoni Requiem is the principal number of the program, which Mr. Wild has prepared as a memorial to the dead of the United States and the allies.

In the matter of post-bellum programs designed as memorial, ritual, or festival, Mr. Damrosch has given two in celebration of peace in New York City, with Beethoven's ninth symphony as the principal item. An amazing sense of humor or lack of it was necessary to project such an entertainment in view of the first-page news in recent weeks. Mr. Damrosch managed to work in a revival of his Manila Te-Deum, which I recall as a fierce punishment to which I was subjected two decades ago—a sort of offset to the joy we knew for Dewey's stirring scrap in the hinterwater. Damrosch was permitted to go through with his brotherhood-of-man concerts; and then, when the Society of the Friends of Music tried to give a performance of the ninth symphony, loud outcries were heard, and the society was told that to play and sing Beethoven was to give aid and comfort to the enemy. The cry-master was Mrs. William Jay, who long ago constituted herself a policeman of music with the special mission of saving us from being gassed with Wagner or fire-sprayed with Brahms. And the S. of the F. of M. backed down and didn't give the ninth symphony.

Concerts and Recitals

FOR the twenty-fifth program, Friday afternoon and Saturday night, by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Stock revives Chausson's symphony, which has been part of five earlier programs, and is classed among the notable French compositions in the form. New matter for the répertoire in the week's bill are, first, a work by Moussorgsky called "Une Nuit sûr le Mont Chauve," and, second, a Concert Overture by Adolf Weidig, who is to conduct it. Liszt's second symphonic poem, "Tasso," is restored to sound; and Theodore DeMoulin, the first-cellist of the Orchestra, gets an opportunity as soloist in Saint-Saëns' concerto.

The Orchestra on Tuesday afternoon, at 4:15, gives its final concert of the season in the University of Chicago series, in Mandel hall. Brahms' fourth symphony is the principal number billed, with other items by Cherubini, Bach, Glazounow, and Tschaikowsky.

THREE GREAT SONGS THAT EVERYBODY IS SINGING

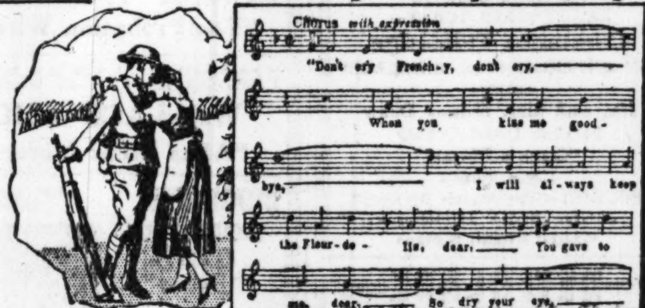
THE House of Songs has never offered a finer collection of delightful "hits" than right now. You know the string of sensational successes that came from the House of Waterson, Berlin & Snyder last year. Well, here are three brand new ones for 1919 that are sweeping riotously across the country—bringing joy into the homes of thousands, delighting audiences everywhere—brightening life and making smiles grow broader.

Hear this one just once—that's all!

A DELIGHTFUL, melodic tale of the good-bye of the lad in khaki to the wistful, star-eyed maiden of France. Dainty and so rhythmic and flowing and harmonious that your memory will catch it the first time you hear it—and you'll be singing it for the sake of the sheer beauty of the music and the lilt and lift of the lyrics.

Hit No. 1

"Don't Cry Frenchy, Don't Cry"



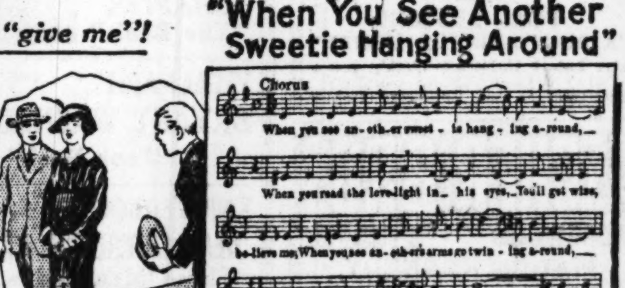
Chorus with expression
"Don't cry French-y, don't cry,
When you kiss me good-bye,
I will al-ways keep the Fleur-de-lis, dear. You gave to me, dear. So dry your eye,

Here's another that you'll say "give me"!

ANOTHER "Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder" in its appeal and charm. In this deftly delightful sentimental "hit," with its brilliant melody, you'll get a real peep into the springtime of love, with its little quarrels and pouts and heart-burnings. You'll keep this song right on top of your pile of best-liked music.

Hit No. 2

"When You See Another Sweetie Hanging Around"



Chorus
When you see an-oth-er sweet-ie hang-ing a-round,
When you read the love-light in his eyes, You'll get wise, be-lieve me, When you see an-oth-er's arms go twin-ing a-round,
All these things will make you re-al-ize; You're jeal ous, You're bound to know, That old-time

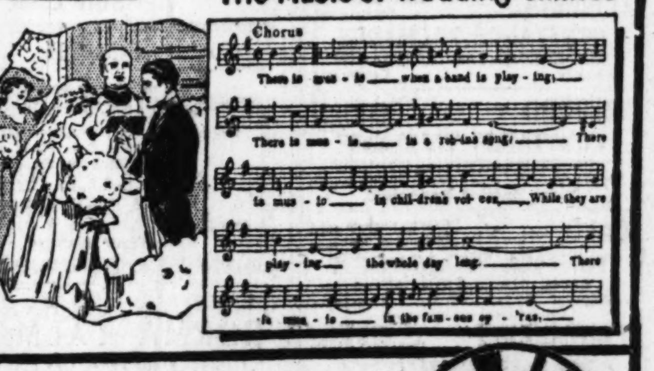
A song for the millions—and then some!

IT is music like this harmony-hit that keeps this old world turning 'round and 'round. It is the recollection of the singer that of all the music in the world, after all is said and done, there is no music to the ears like the merry tinkle of the wedding chimes. You can sing it and you will sing it—and you'll get new joy every time you hear this melodious "hit."

Hit No. 3

"The Music of Wedding Chimes"



Chorus
There is mu-sic when a band is play-ing,
There is mu-sic in a rob-in's song; There is mu-sic in chil-dren's voi-ces, While they are play-ing the whole day long. There is mu-sic in the fam-ous op-'ras,

"DON'T CRY FRENCHY, DON'T CRY"

And here's another batch of "hits" your customers will be calling for

WHY BLAME NATURE

for an 85% Ice Shortage when Nature's Laws make possible the Gedwin $5.00

ICELESS COOLER

The GEDWIN has solved the housewife's great 1919 problem. It will positively keep perishable foods cool and fresh without ice. The price of $5.00 is so low that no family can afford to be without the GEDWIN ICELESS COOLER. It means big savings as well as big satisfaction.

No Ice or Upkeep Expense

All the expense and dirt and bother of "taking ice" is completely done away with. The danger of illness from germs that lurk in unsanitary ice is eliminated.

THE GEDWIN ICELESS COOLER seems almost too good to be true, yet it is a positive, proven, recognized invention, utilizing a principle as old as the hills—the PRINCIPLE OF EVAPORATION.

There is not one cent of expense for upkeep with the GEDWIN ICELESS COOLER. The only attention it requires is four to five minutes twice a week.

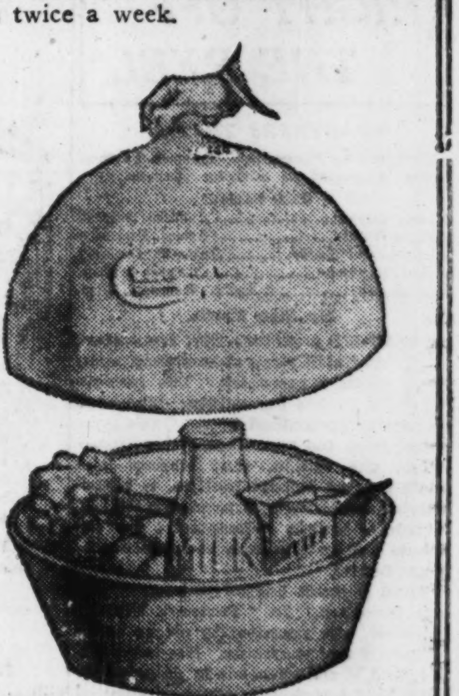
Nature Does It with Air and Water

The PRINCIPLE OF EVAPORATION, applied through a patented process of construction, is responsible for the GEDWIN ICELESS COOLER. This principle has been utilized for centuries in tropical countries, but only in a crude, undeveloped manner.

Each cooler will absorb approximately its own weight of water. After you have soaked the GEDWIN in water for four or five minutes, put in your butter, milk, eggs or other foods, put on the cover of the cooler, and set it where the hot, dry air can circulate about it. The evaporation which ensues keeps the inside of the GEDWIN as cool as a mountain spring. The hotter and drier the circulation of the outside air, the cooler it is inside the GEDWIN.

There is no mechanism about the GEDWIN—no chemicals or artificial power necessary. There are no cracks or crevices where dirt can lodge or germs can breed. It cannot get out of order, because there is nothing to get out of order.

You can set your GEDWIN FOOD COOLER on one corner of the kitchen table and your milk cooler on the window ledge. Both require very little space and save thousands of steps.

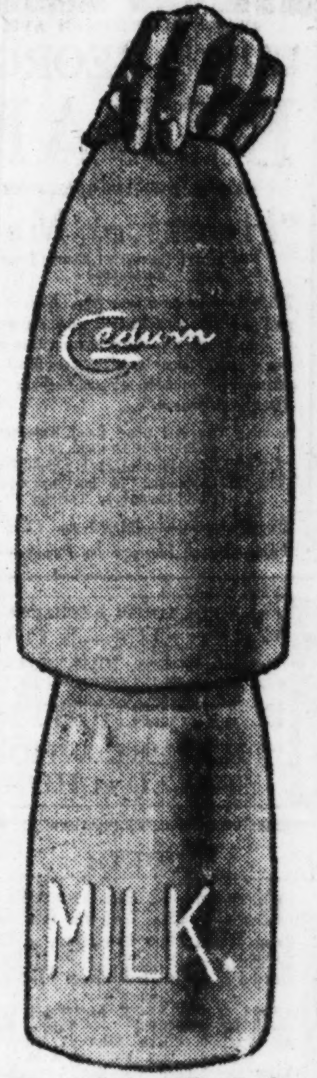


The Gedwin Food Cooler

Shown above, holds a sufficient supply of food for the needs of the average family. This is a very convenient size and is the most popular. The inside diameter is 12½ inches. The price is only........ $5

Hundreds in Use Now

There are hundreds of GEDWIN ICELESS COOLERS in use all over the country. Our files contain many letters from satisfied users. Lack of space prohibits the printing of all these letters. The following are just a few examples:



"I have had in my apartment at the Auditorium Hotel for some time past one of your No. 2 Iceless Iceboxes, and have used it constantly for keeping fruit cool, and find it all you recommended, and even more. It not only keeps fruit cool, and in every way desirable for eating, but it preserves it for a period that is really surprising."—H. L. DANIELS, Fibre Dept. International Harvester Co., Chicago.

"I am at present living at the Lake Michigan Beach at Miller, where at times it is almost impossible to secure ice, and have found your icebox to more than come up to my expectations under trying circumstances. The heat at the beach, especially in the daytime, is extreme; but I must say the iceless icebox indeed operates satisfactorily, keeping milk, eggs, and fruit at an even temperature."—R. G. PARRY, Gary Land Company, Gary, Ind.

"They certainly are wonders. I have used mine all summer, and it has given the greatest satisfaction—always sweet, clean and cool, and occupying no room to speak of. I would not be without it, and everybody who would try one as I have, would certainly have nothing but praise for it."—GEO. C. DAVISON, Chicago.

"Just a line to let you know how pleased I am with the little Iceless Refrigerator which I purchased from you. Recently, during the few extreme warm spells we had, it worked splendidly, and I was delighted to find that my butter and milk kept as cool as with ice. In fact, I was amazed to learn that the warmer the weather, the cooler the Iceless Refrigerator was."—MAUDE L. GRAETZ, Grand Blvd., Chicago.

"I have used one of your No. 2 Iceless Iceboxes for over two years, and it has given me perfect satisfaction; the Milk Bottle Cover is a perfect wonder, and I am delighted to say it gives perfect satisfaction in every way."—EMMA C. PULLMAN, Lombard, Ill.

"Sometime ago I received one of your Iceless Iceboxes, and after making a very careful test, am pleased to advise you that the same is satisfactory in every respect, and is doing all that you claim for it."—M. V. TEUFEL, Edward Hines Lumber Company, Chicago.

"We feel convinced that good sanitation and of a higher degree, will result, as good if not better than what is today found in many of the best constructed iceboxes of the usual type."—THE COLUMBUS LABORATORIES, Commercial, Food and Medical Analyses, Chicago.

PAYS FOR ITSELF IN "NO TIME"

In a majority of families the savings on one month's ice bills will more than pay for the larger size GEDWIN, and for the average size family one of these Coolers is sufficiently large.

The Gedwin Milk Cooler

The illustration above shows the Gedwin Milk Cooler, a very necessary and handy cover for milk bottles, operating on the same principle as the larger Gedwin Iceless Coolers.

As a sanitary protection against cats and dogs which lick the tops of milk bottles, the Gedwin Milk Cooler is a great necessity. The cooler can be left where the milk is usually deposited on delivery. When the milkman leaves the milk he will gladly place the cover over the bottle, insuring protection against germs and keeping the milk cool and fresh until you use it. In winter the use of the cooler prevents the milk from freezing in the interval between its delivery and the time it is brought into the house. Price is only $2

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

THE BIGGER THE CITY THE BIGGER THE BOOB.
No longer they gun in bucolic abodes
For the first-water boobs who are shy on the modes,
The city's the home of the regular rube,
And the bigger the city the bigger the boob.

The gay clover kicker who's up with the sun
To whom cabaret and au gratin are one
Has far more gray matter and wrinkles per mat'
Than the toff who has nothing but hair 'neath his hat.

And that's why the guys with the aquiline eyes
And the three little shells and the ways that are wise
Steer clear of the meadows, the hills and the cricks,
And come to the city for regular hicks—

Succulent suckers of emerald green,
Long on the bluster and short on the bean;
The city's the home of the regular rube
And the bigger the city the bigger the boob.

New York, March 26.

ASK ME! ASK ME! ASK ME!

I. M. and E. M.: Keep right on guessing. So flattering you are. I'll see what I can do about the William Desmond and Eugene O'Brien pictures. Glad to know you have no designs on the gentlemen.

MARIE M.: As soon as I have opportunity I will gladly mention your request to the heads of several of the film companies. I've always found them ready to do a charitable act and feel pretty sure they wouldn't mind lending pictures not in use to the boys at the tuberculosis sanitarium. It is lovely of you and your mother to take so much interest and I am sure the soldier boys must appreciate it deeply.

ELEANOR: Not like you any more? I'm crazy about you, Eleanor. I'd love to come providing the event doesn't happen on a busy day. I done lost your address.

L. O.: The thing for you to do is to watch the various news films for the picture of your brother. There are so many of these picture weeklies that it would be impossible for me to find out just when the reel you mentioned would be issued and by what company. I'm so glad you enjoy the column.

JACQUELINE: No, I never heard you had to be witty to be a moving picture actress. Why don't you tell this one: Out at Dunning two crazy men were sitting in the kitchen. One was reading a newspaper. The other one said to him: "You're not reading that paper. It's upside down."

The other replied: "That's all right, any fool could read it the other way."

That happens to be the only funny story I have at my tongue's end at the present moment and it's a true one. Y'wekkum.

M. A. S: Mary's all over the "flu" and is busy as a cranberry merchant. Her home is in Hollywood. Her hair curls naturally over curlers. I think her charming and surely you need not ask "is she popular?" Her husband is Owen Moore. George Walsh is 27 years old. He is married to Seena Owen. Not that I know of. Constance and Norma Talmadge are sisters, but not twins. Norma is the elder. Constance's hair is light brown. I should say a letter to Miss Pickford might be started as follows: "Dear Miss Pickford: How are you since you had the flu? I admire you so thought I'd better let you know." Now you're started go on.

NANETTE: Mae Marsh was with Goldwyn. At the present time, however, she is resting. Address Anita Stewart in care of the First National Exhibitors, Tally Theater building, Los Angeles, Cal. No trouble at all.

MARIE F.: The "young man" who so intrigued your interest is Charles Bryant. He is the husband of Mme. Nazimova and can be reached in care of the Metro company, 1476 Broadway, New York. Address Sessue Hayakawa in care of the Heyworth Pictures corporation, Hollywood. Nothing I could say would procure you a position as motion picture actress. The only thing for you to do is to apply in person at some studio. I'll send you a list of addresses if you will mail me a stamped, addressed envelope.

DORIS B.: Yes, those roto pictures are pretty popular with most of the fans. No, Mr. Lockwood had brown hair and blue eyes. Glad to have heard from you.

ME: O, of course if you are going to call me honey I suppose I'll have to tell you. His name is Erich von Stoheim. Address him in care of the Universal company, Hollywood, Cal. Why "in distress," me?

A CONSTANT ADMIRER: There are many of you, my friend! I'll say you have good taste. Not that I know of. We'll see what we can do about the picture of Mr. Carey.

RIGHT OFF THE REEL

"PARTNERS THREE."

Produced by Paramount. Directed by Fred blo. Presented at outlying theaters.

THE CAST:

nes Cuyler............Enid Bennett
thur Gould............Casson Ferguson
ssayampa Hardy............John P. Lockney ant Haywood............Robert McKim
e Gossip............Lydia Yeamans Titus

By Mae Tinée.

HERE'S a picture that from start to finish plays shamelessly upon your sympathies. The heroine is pathos personified. The hero pathos personified plus. One's only lief from too much sorrowing comes hen the villain, that sinister and rk browed Robert McKim, is enact g his usual style of picture business, hich is always nefarious in the ex eme and in this case becomes down ght brutal.

Enid Bennett has never been one of y favorites. In "Partners Three," owever, she appealed to me as being omanly and charming. She is beauti l, and if she succeeds in doing away ith that too cloying sweet manner of ers this department may yet end up chanting her praises. (Being neither threat nor a promise.)

All the sorrow starts in a café, where ou see Miss Bennett, all dressed up, nging to the vulgar hordes. But her eart is not in her work. She lo-o-athes ! Only a bird in a gi-hilded cage, as wa! Between songs she doffs her nile, retires to an anteroom, and sits hivering with disgust, only to be auled out by the management to sing gain or to meet somebody or some ing.

In come some men from the west. "Good spenders," cautions the manage ent, who is large and pot-bellied, dou le chinned, and double faced, and nokes big, black cigars. "Good spend s and they want to meetcha!" So e poor songbird sallies forth, is met, sulted, and subsequently married by e aforenamed Mr. Robert McKim, ho takes her away to his deserts.

Here, after abusing her roundly, he rives her out on the plains and loses er. She is picked up by a desert rat ith an awful name—look at the cast you don't believe it—and rescued from eath by thirst and hunger. John P. ockney as the grizzled old man of the lains gives a fine characterization.

Well, he gets poor Agnes a job as aitress at a little cross tracks station here the Overland stops "twenty min tes for lunch." Here she meets a sick oung man without a friend in the orld. It seems from this picture that the west nobody loves a sick man, t alone speak to a sick man or give im a bite to eat. Agnes first sees him rough a looking glass darkly as he is the act of stealing a sandwich. She rns to accuse and starts to love.

As he eats his first meal in ever so ng he tells her his sad tale. You and gnes certainly do sympathize with im, for if ever a handsome youth oked like the last rose of summer ft dying alone it is Casson Ferguson t this juncture.

"You shall eat here," says Agnes, and I will give you a place to sleep."

The place to sleep being her shanty, is not long before the ladies of the ommunity form themselves into an an nated round robin and call upon her. heir vituperations are stopped by the ntrance of Mr. Lockney, who says:

"Ha—you talk of decency! Seems I emember that somebody married little felissy out of a dance hall and that lara got away with the gas company's unds, and that——" And then he finds imself talking to a dust cloud."

Anyhow, he takes the two away with im, feeling that the desert air will be ood for the sick boy. On the eve of he discovery by the three partners of fortune along comes the villain. And he amount of dirty work this one little an manages to get away with is a narvel. Nothing but the satisfactorily nhappy death he dies could possibly nake up for the wrongs he perpetrates. owever, he pays in full—so that's all ight about that.

Really, "Partners Three" is an in eresting, well acted, and nicely put on roduction. A picture doesn't have to e a wiz to be a good picture, you know.

You've noticed, haven't you, that an ld favorite has "come back"?—Mau ice Costello. He's been supporting lice Joyce lately. None more adored han Maurice four years ago. Does e still have the power to thrill you, irruls?

They tell me that Mme. Nazimova has again had her hair cut short for her ew part in "The Red Lantern," a rama of the Orient.

In her coming picture, "Daughter f Mine," Madge Kennedy will have rôle entirely different from any that he has graced before. She will be seen s little Rosie Mendelsohn, a Jewish irl.

ART by Eleanor Jewett

Memorial to Great French Etcher in Institute Exhibit

THE recent death of Auguste Lepère, the great French etcher, was a serious loss to the world of art. There is at present in honor of his memory an exhibition of his work in the print room of the Art institute.

The three finest etchings shown are those of the cathedrals of Amiens, Reims, and Rouen. Of these three the last is the loveliest. Like fairy turrets the white, slender pinnacles pierce the sky, rising into the sun from the gray mists that wrap their base, and standing against the blue, clearly defined as the silver lances of those crusaders who rode the earth in search of the holy grail.

There are besides these a number of scenes of farm life, showing the country in flood and fair weather, depicting villages where the days are broken a bit in their passing by the jar of man upon man, and single houses built in loneliness where the going of night into day and day into night is the solitary measure of time. And there are pastures with feeding sheep and cattle. A slow river, stayed by the thick rushes, flows over its banks and settles in placid content in the hollow of the land, giving a broad watering place to the dull horses that plow at evening through the thick mud to its brink. Country roads, leading from nowhere to nowhere, unroll their sun baked lengths between fields of parched grass in restful monotony.

In gallery 46 an exhibit of Japanese color prints from the Clarence Buckingham collection has been arranged. Among other artists represented are Okumura Masanobu, Okumura Toshinobu, Ishikawa Toyonbu, and Nishimura Shiegenaga. This last has a number of attractive sketches in the most of which the leading lady is busily engaged in the elusive pursuit of culture. For instance, speaking of weird and wild experiences (which we are not, but might be doing), there is the print of the fish, a tremendous, globular eyed denizen of the deep, gliding rapidly down water, and ensconced on its back, arched like a chair, is a Japanese lady, wrapt in the perusal of a waterproof scroll.

Another literary light strolls through a flowering orchard, her manuscript held at arm's length, blind to the beauty of the blossoms and, seemingly unconscious of the sturdiness of their arboreal supports, for in her absorption she walks against a tree striking the fragrant canopy in a shower of pink and white petals to earth, and bruises, though one hopes not severely, her mortal frame in her mad pursuit of knowledge.

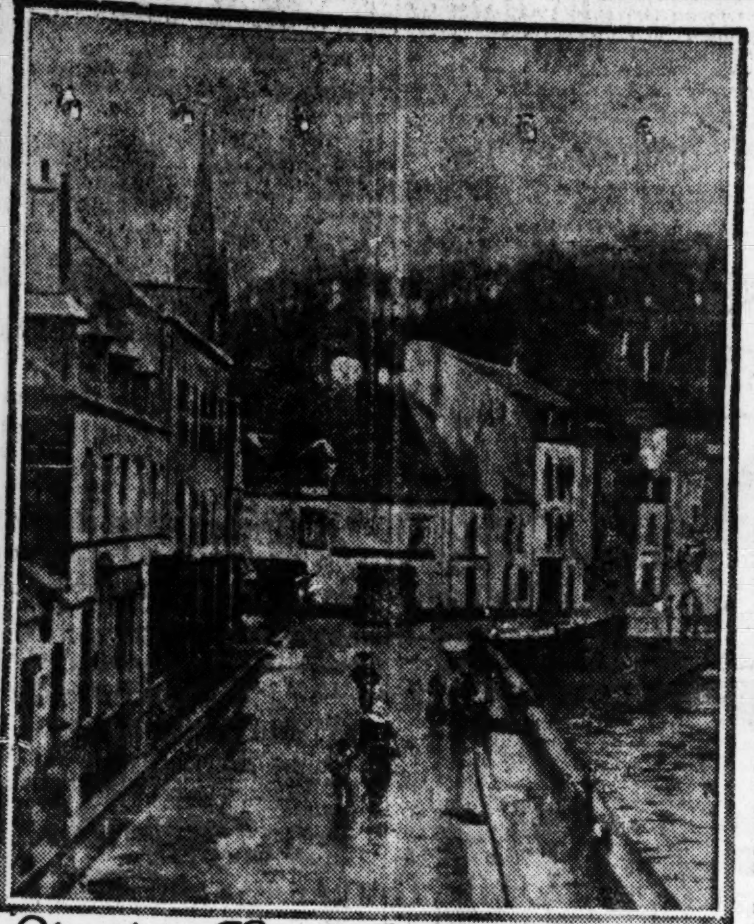
The prints by Hanekawa Chincho show delicate and sensitive workmanship, and are exceedingly decorative. One, that described sounds like nothing, is of a potted shrub, the slim branches sprinkled with faint flowers and leaves, mounted on a cart with large, round wheels which in their remarkable coloring reflect the shades of the flowers above. A second print is of a man in brightly decorated robes advancing to his mistress with his hands outstretched, and bearing upon them a tiny table on which rests a box of growing flowers and ferns. And in a third print, where a woman stands in a garden, there is a wealth of flowers so great that the bees and butterflies gorge themselves with nectar and drowse in the sun forgetful of all other claims, in utter abandon to delight.



Street in Pont Aven, Brittany, by EDGAR S. CAMERON
IN EXHIBIT OF CHICAGO ARTISTS AT ART INSTITUTE

The majority of the prints are from the brush of Okumura Masanobu. They are exceedingly lovely. Mostly they are of women and mostly of single figures. One that differs is of a rooster, a sturdy, well built bird that stands on the rim of a grain bin. His head is cocked for mischief and his eye is fixed on the golden kernel that, in three shakes of a cat's tail, will have departed this world via the road of his hard, yellow beak.

Another picture of a bird, a gay tropical fowl of delightful coloring, is charming. And then there are the prints of people, some reading, others writing, still others painting, and a few, fashioning themselves on the model college freshman of the west, with guitars and mandolins in hand, making the night hideous for those who would sleep with the strains of rapturous serenades.

The Art institute announces that the Chicago popular prize of $100 has been awarded to "The Chinese Coat," by Arvid Nyholm, in the exhibition of Chicago artists. The picture was selected by the visitors to the museum.

In connection with this exhibit by the artists of Chicago there is a small group of work which I have failed, but not purposely, to mention. That is the exhibition by the Chicago Society of Miniature Painters. The miniatures are installed in the hall leading to the galleries where the larger paintings are shown.

The sunsets on Lake Michigan by A. F. Brooks are charming. Most delightful of all is "May," by Edith Sawyer, showing an apple tree in bloom, a white bank against the piercing blue background of the water beyond the fertile orchard.

There are a number of attractive children portrayed. Among these likenesses are "Jean," by Marian Dunlap Harper, and "Master Edward," by the same artist; "Virginia," by Eda Nemoede Casterton; "Albert MacLeod," by Anna Lynch; and "Little Daughter," by Carolyn D. Tyler. Among the representations of older persons that are of interest are "Mr. J. R.," by Nancy B. Robinson; "Mother Mitchell," by Milada L. Bulena; "Mable Lnadrum Torrey," by Eugenia Price, and "Dr. Arthur Dean Bevan," by Anna Lynch.

At the Artists' guild is an exhibit of pewter by Lester Vaughn. There are bowls, trays, candlesticks, spoons, and plates hammered in simple and solid shapes that are good and that remind one immensely of the best effects in hammered silver.

In the same galleries is also an exhibit of the needlework of Miss Elizabeth McCormick. She has painted in threads and beads pictures that hold one as do the stories told in the woven tapestries of other centuries. There are little girls, and birds, and dogs, and flowers. The colors are soft, some gay, some dull and rich, but each piece is different and each is exquisite.

The Artists' guild is doing a much needed work and one that is appreciated by the many people who know of it. To encourage the guild the board of directors is asking that those who are interested will become associate members at the nominal dues of $10 a year. This request should meet with an eager response, for it is based on a foundation of mutual benefit.

Arrangements have been concluded for the sending of an exhibition of American painting and sculpture to Paris. The exhibition is scheduled to open early in May. Several artists from Chicago will be represented. Among them are Frederick Clay Bartlett, Oliver Dennett Grover, Victor Higgins, and Walter Ufer. In return for the American exhibit the French government is planning to send work by French artists to America some time next fall. These paintings will be shown not only in New York but in various other of the large cities throughout the country.

WHAT HOMER MISSED

By Guy F. Lee.

'Twas soft for that old Grecian clan
  Who basked beneath Olympian rays;
They never hired a moving van,
  They had no gas-electric blaze
  Whose cost inspired profane ways,
Nor did they ever change a tire.
  Serene on life a gent could gaze
When Homer smote his bloomin' lyre.

Friend Wife did not wait up to pan
  Boozocles in his fuddled haze;
A Prohib was an also ran
  In that age numbered with the jays;
  Folks looked on water as a phase
Of cleansing, and did not admire
  Its use in that way as a craze,
When Homer smote his bloomin' lyre.

No pyrotechnic suffrage fan
  Disturbed the ether with her brays;
A lady's circumflexic span
  Was not pulled out of shape by stays.
  No belt or gallus helped to raise
The trousers of ye ancient squire.
  Those were, indeed, the happy days
When Homer smote his bloomin' lyre!

ASTRONOMY

THE CONSTELLATION OF LEO.

THE constellation of the lion is high in the sky in the early evening, and is favorably placed for easy identification. Leo is a large, bright constellation, and is all the more conspicuous because there are no other bright stars near it.

Leo represents a lion in a crouching attitude. The constellation actually looks somewhat like a lion. He is facing the west, with his forepaws stretched out in front of him.

The head and shoulders of the lion make another group which is sometimes called the Sickle. The Sickle in the sky resembles that implement to about the same extent that the dipper looks like its namesake. The white, first magnitude star at the tip of the handle is called Regulus.

The names of most of the stars and constellations, it will be noticed, are of Latin derivation. There is a reason for this. Two thousand years ago all the then known civilized portions of the world were ruled by Rome. All the great writers of the time either were Romans themselves or else did their work in Latin.

The star Regulus derives its name in this way: Regulus was a Roman consul during the great struggle between Rome and Carthage for world supremacy, known as the Punic wars. By his superb leadership the Romans were able to defeat the Carthaginians and to land an army on their territory. After many victories the forces of Regulus were overtaken by disaster, and Regulus himself was seized as a prisoner. For several years he languished in a Carthaginian dungeon, until, when the Romans, having raised another army and again defeated Carthage, he was placed on parole and forced to go to Rome as an envoy to plead the Carthaginian cause.

But when he came before the Roman senate he presented not his captors' case but their weaknesses that he had observed while a captive. The Romans, acting on his suggestions, immediately renewed the war.

When Regulus was paroled he had given his word of honor that he would return to Carthage. So now, in spite of the pleadings of the people, he went back and told the Carthaginians that he had counseled a continuation of the struggle. They immediately tortured him to death.

The martyrdom of Regulus made him one of the greatest Roman heroes, and in his memory the star that he was born under was called the star of Regulus, which name it stills bears.

The bright yellow star just above the forepaws of the lion is the planet Saturn. It cannot be mistaken, for it does not twinkle. Saturn is moving slowly along in the sky, completing one revolution every twenty-nine years.

Leo is one of the spring constellations. It appears in the east at midnight late in January, and gradually works its way westward until in April it is near the zenith at dark. As summer advances it sinks, finally disappearing behind the sun during August and September. Its reappearance in the east just before sunrise is a sign that October is at hand.

DRAWN BY S.F. MAXWELL

Vaudeville Wit.

MAJESTIC.

Al Lydell and Carleton Macy:

"The army has always been worth more than the navy."

"Say, the navy took the army where the trouble was."

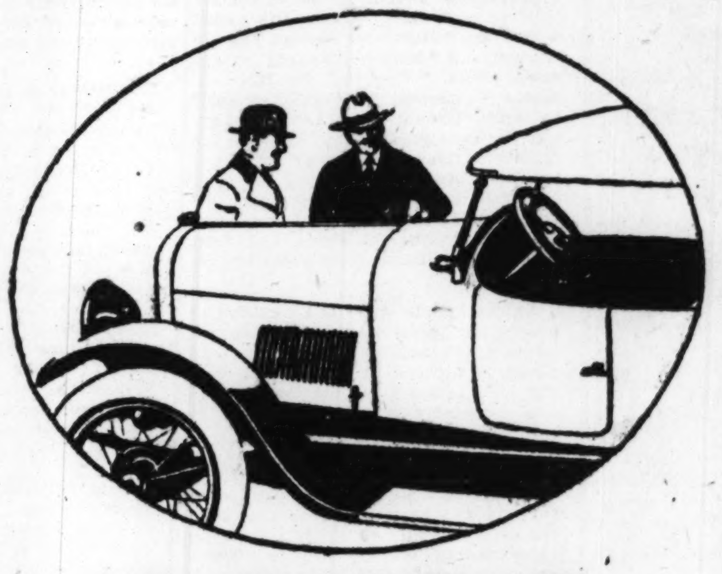
"O, yes, that's true. But then the navy's always getting the army into trouble."

"I remember one time when we had five different kinds of weather at once. First it rained so hard that the water was two feet deep on the slanting sides of the tents. Then the sun came out and dried everything up, even the river. And the boys had to carry water from the well so the boats could get up the river with our rations."

"O, yes, I remember that was the time I crawled up in the crow's nest and found two hard boiled eggs one morning."

"How did the eggs get there?"

"Why, the ship laid to in the night."



PAIGE

The Most Beautiful Car in America

THE first cost of a motor car is an important consideration. But ultimate cost is vastly more important.

We, of the Paige Company, have always believed that freedom from repair bills and excessive depreciation is infinitely more desirable than a mere catch-penny list price. Therefore we have devoted ourselves to the production of cars—not mere price tags.

We have insisted upon using only the best of materials and the best of workmanship—cost what they may. We have built up to a standard—not down to a price.

We have built a car that both we and our owners can believe in—a car that will outlast and out-perform any guarantee that we might write for it.

In a word, we have built the soundest and safest automobile investment that can be found on the market.

New Mitchell Sixes

New Victory Model
50% Added Strength

100 New Conceptions
Of How Good a Car Should Be

You have never seen so new a car as this new Mitchell Six.

It is more than a new model, with new design, new features and new looks. It embodies new principles, new standards—an entirely new conception of requirements in this class.

There are more than 100 improvements. And these include—by actual tests—50% more strength, 75% more endurance, 25% more economy.

They Had to Come

Mitchell is first to make these advances, but all in this class must follow. The years have proved that Light Sixes were too light.

Wise buyers now seek permanent cars. They seek at least 200,000-mile endurance. And the best Light Sixes built in pre-war days could not meet those requirements.

The Mitchell people, two years ago, decided to fix new standards. They employed many able specialists to help. Then wartime, when the great Mitchell factory worked on trucks, gave to these experts their great opportunity.

As a result, this completely new car with all its new standards, has been developed in two years.

A Vast Undertaking

Records were examined on tens of thousands of Sixes to ascertain every requirement. Then, one by one, every part of the car was brought up to new strength requirements.

It meant new axles, new gears, new brakes, a new frame. It meant new machinery for finer workmanship and more accurate tests. Over $250,000 was spent on the new equipment.

It meant the training of 135 inspectors to analyze steels, to watch every detail, to conduct the countless tests. It meant more than 100 important changes in motor, chassis and body.

Will Change Your Ideas

If you thought old-type Sixes good enough, this new car will change your ideas. Here is 50 per cent more strength, 75 per cent more endurance. Here, despite the added weight, there is 25 per cent greater fuel economy.

Here are ample power, unusual room, 75 per cent better brakes. Here is a thermostat in the water system, a perfect disc clutch. Here are a wealth of costly steels, and 123 drop forgings. Here is a twice-better finish and a twice-better top than usual.

Yet, with all these costly advances, the price is below any comparable Six. That price shows what factory efficiency can do. The entire car—motor, chassis and body—is built by the Mitchell scientific cost-reducing methods. It is sold at a very small profit.

Come and study this car. Let us point out the improvements one by one. You will go away with new conceptions of a high-grade car.

What Is Real Motor Truck Service

Motor truck service—real service—means keeping the trucks on the road. An idle truck earns no money.

Making needed repairs, replacements or adjustments in the shortest possible time—and having a sufficient number of motor truck experts instantly available to do this work right, is real motor truck service.

Owners and drivers who have been accustomed to ordinary truck service marvel at the speed and efficiency of SERVICE service.

The SERVICE service station works with clock-like precision to the end that SERVICE Motor Trucks keep on the move—"Here by 10 p. m., on your way before 8 a. m.," is the motto—and our men live up to their motto if it's at all possible for any number of men to perform the work in that time. Loyalty to SERVICE owners is their creed.

Ask any of the several hundred SERVICE Motor Truck owners in and about Chicago what they think of SERVICE service. Ask any owner or any driver, wherever you see him. We have no preferred list for reference. Get the unbiased opinion of as many of them as you like. Then apply the same test to the owners and drivers of any other make of trucks you consider buying. Choose your trucks according to the verdict.

Service
MOTOR TRUCKS

In buying motor trucks investigate the quality of service you will get. All trucks require service—and that truck which carries with its sale the greatest assurance of loyalty and efficiency in maintenance is the truck to buy, providing quality and value are there.

As to Service Motor Truck quality and value, there is no better proof than their re-sale records and their re-sale prices.

In 1918, 65% of Service sales were re-sales to satisfied previous buyers. The average for the past five years has been upward of 63%.

As evidence of Service re-sale value, consider a certain creditor's sale right here in the city some months ago. A Service Motor Truck 22 months old brought 84 3-5% of its original price. Thirteen others of different makes, used only 10 to 18 months, sold for about one-third of the first cost. Service Trucks stand the grind — they endure—therefore their cost in the long run is unusually low.

The Service is built in five models, 1, 2, 3½, 3½ special and 5 tons, all models having the incomparable worm drive—the drive that has never worn out in use.

French, English and Italian Cars Coming to Lure American Buyers

BY HIGH SPEED.

WITHIN the next few months we are going to see in this country a number of new cars especially designed by the manufacturers of France, England, and Italy to capture a share of the American market.

Now, there has been some ill considered talk recently in regard to the possibility of the European manufacturers producing automobiles on the sort of quantity basis that we do in this country and actually making an attempt to capture a considerable part of our home market. In spite of the fact that many of the European makers have expanded their plants to limits that they never dreamed of before the war, there is not the slightest possibility of their ever competing with us at home for our own markets.

One British company has announced a yearly production of 18,000, which is many times any production ever thought of in Europe before the war, but compared with the tremendous output of our leading companies it is a drop in the bucket.

Nevertheless, this European invasion is of interest to all American car owners for other reasons. The foreign cars that will be sold here will be in the higher price classes and there is no question that within certain definite limits they will enjoy a ready sale. There are people who prefer anything imported, whether it is a motor car or a pocket handkerchief.

But for the average man the interest in the coming foreign invasion lies in the fact that American design has always been very ready to adopt European ideas, so that we may look to see American cars of tomorrow embodying the really valuable features of the foreign cars that will be with us very shortly. Let us examine briefly the French, British, and Italian cars that have been announced as prospective bidders for American sales.

France first, and the only definite announcement that has come from our allied land is in regard to the De Dion Bouton line. This comprises two chasses, a light and heavier model. Each of these models may be had with a four or an eight cylinder engine, making practically four distinct models in the line, with the numerous variations of body styles and excellent workmanship for which the French industry has always been noted. No announcement has as yet been made in regard to De Dion prices in this country, but the cars will certainly not be in the cheap or medium price classes.

No definite announcements have been made by the other French companies, but the Renault organization, with its tremendous factories and huge force of skilled workmen which turned out thousands of whippet tanks during the closing days of the war, is known to be casting longing eyes at the rich American market.

Peugot is another French company that is going to make a strong bid for American patronage. It is possible that the Peugot passenger cars will carry the front wheel brakes which have been used on some of the racing cars of this concern and which it was announced would be placed on the commercial productions of the company.

Delage is also known to be getting ready for a try at the American market and this car also may embody front wheel brakes. This, then, will be one definite mechanical innovation that may possibly exert an influence on future American design.

Many of the big English companies have frankly announced their intention of making a bid for American favor. Rolls-Royce, of course, will simply pick up where it left off when it was called upon for airplane production. The Rolls has a definite position in the American field among the very wealthiest buyers naturally, since one of these cars stands the purchaser in somewhere in the neighborhood of $20,000. Rolls-Royce has not announced any change in design and it is probable none is contemplated.

The Sunbeam company has made a definite announcement of its line. One of the items will be the sixteen horse power, four cylinder job already produced before the war, but with various improvements. The really interesting announcement is a "sporting series." One of these will embody a four cylinder engine of roughly 3x6 inches bore and stroke and four valves a cylinder, operated by two overhead camshafts. The other sport model will have a six cylinder 110 horse power aluminum engine. The crankshafts of these engines are mounted on ball bearings and each of the models has a four speed gearset.

To the old and conservative British firm of Enfield-Allday we are indebted for quite the most startling novelties among the foreign offerings. One of these is a car embodying a five cylinder radial engine with stationary cylinders and revolving crankshaft. The other model is a six cylinder, separately cast vertical engine, with what is claimed to be an entirely new adaptation of the sleeve valve principle. Aeroplane practice and experience are plainly observable in British lines and we shall await impatiently the opportunity of examining these cars in detail.

A newcomer in our market is going to be the Austin, long famous as one of the fine productions of the British industry. The Austin company is confining its attention to a single model, which is to sell at $2,000. While the duty will bring this price up considerably on this side, nevertheless the Austin will probably be the lowest priced foreign car to sell on this side.

The Vulcan works, Humber, Clement-Talbot, Crossley, Arrol-Johnston, Siddeley-Deasy, and Lancaster are other British concerns which are expected to enter the American field on a more or less extensive basis.

And finally comes Italy. The Fiat company was one of the first to announce a definite campaign in the American field. The Fiat organization now has nearly 50,000 employés and has learned a great deal about quantity production. In order to hold this great organization together the Fiat works are to produce practically everything that goes on its vehicles, even to ignition apparatus, carburetors, starting and lighting equipment, and speedometers.

The principal Fiat offering in this country will be a six cylinder model, which will weigh 3,100 pounds, fully equipped for the road, in spite of the fact that its wheel base is 130 inches. The Fiat engineers have evidently learned considerable about weight reduction in the course of their war experience.

Fiat has announced three other models, but all of them have less than our stnadard wheelbase. Whether any attempt is to be made to popularize these narrow tread vehicles in this country has not been announced, but it is unlikely that such an attempt would succeed. Americans would insist on considering narrow tread cars as glorified cyclecars and the cyclecar never arrived here.

REO

No Imitation Can be As Good as the Original

WE DON'T LIKE TO KEEP harping on the fact that Reo was a pioneer in this industry—so many of the pioneers have failed to keep pace with the progress.

BUT IT JUST IS a fact, and, as the science of automotive engineering and manufacturing progresses, somehow you always see Reo in the van.

ULTRA CONSERVATIVE in some regards we are considered, by the more adventurous in the industry. For example, we still adhere to the policy of doing all our experimenting at our own expense—not our customer's!

AND WE NEVER adopt as a part of our standard product or offer to a buyer, any feature of which we are not absolutely sure.

THERE'S A DIFFERENCE between courage and daring.

DARING is taking chances and depending on bull luck to get through.

COURAGE is the propensity to assail obstacles when sure of the ground—after the most careful survey of conditions and with a full knowledge of its difficulties.

REO IS COURAGEOUS in that sense. If our engineers have convinced themselves that a certain principle is right, our sales department is perfectly willing to meet any opposition to convince you of its superiority.

SO YOU SEE Reo is conservative—but progressively conservative.

THIS REO "SPEED WAGON" is a case in point.

DO YOU KNOW that the very features that constituted the strongest sales resistance when we first brought out this truck, are now the features that most strongly recommend it to buyers?

AND HISTORY REPEATS itself in this case also, for the very competitors who then flouted the very idea of electric starter and lights; and pneumatic tires; and speed qualities in a truck, are now Reo's closest imitators!

SO AGAIN the soundness of Reo engineering is demonstrated.

WHY, THE VERY TERM "Speed Wagon" used to differentiate this type of Motor Truck from all others, is as much the rightful property of Reo as is the very design itself—it is ours by right of priority.

BUT WE DON'T MIND others using it—imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, and if they find it necessary to imitate as nearly as possible Reo design, why should they not also take the Reo term to designate their imitations?

BUT WE'D SUGGEST to you as a buyer that an original is always better than a copy—the real, superior to any substitute.

SO IF YOU CAN SECURE a Reo "Speed Wagon" the quality of which has so thoroughly proven itself that rivals habitually proclaim theirs "just as good as a Reo"—if you can get an original, why accept an imitation?

Middle West Has Most Motor Cars

AMERICA has one motor vehicle for every seventeen persons, according to figures compiled by the B. F. Goodrich Rubber company. The average is based on the estimated population and the 1918 automobile and truck registration.

The most dense distribution of cars is in the middle western states, Iowa and Nebraska being in the lead, each with an average of one car for every seven persons. Other middle west states having a record under one car to every fifteen persons are: South Dakota, 9; Kansas, 10; North Dakota, 11; Michigan, 12, and Indiana, Ohio, and Wisconsin each with 13 persons to a car.

Although Illinois ranks in importance as a farming state with almost any mentioned above, the factor of a big city pulls down the state's ratio to one in seventeen. Small towns, according to a recent national census, have greater car registrations in proportion to their population than the large cities.

New York and Pennsylvania, with their congested big city population and their lack of space for car driving, have one car to twenty-three or twenty-four persons, respectively. The figures show that the most fertile field for the automobile and tire salesman is in the rural districts and that the motor vehicle has practically become a necessity to the farmer.

Despite the fact that since 1916 the south, as a section, has shown the greatest increase in car ownership—a gain of 101 per cent, as compared with 44 per cent in New England and 66 in the midwest—the southern states' ratio of cars to population is lower than that of any other section of the country. Mississippi and Alabama are last in the list of states with fifty and fifty-two, respectively. Maryland and Florida rank first in the south with eighteen and twenty persons to the car.

Regulating the Trucks.

Motor truck owners and users will doubtless be interested in the resolution adopted at the recent conference of the American Road Builders' association, favoring the following regulations for motor trucks on the highways:

The gross weight of vehicles and load shall not exceed 28,000 pounds on four wheels.

The total height shall not exceed 12 feet 2 inches.

The total width shall not exceed eight feet.

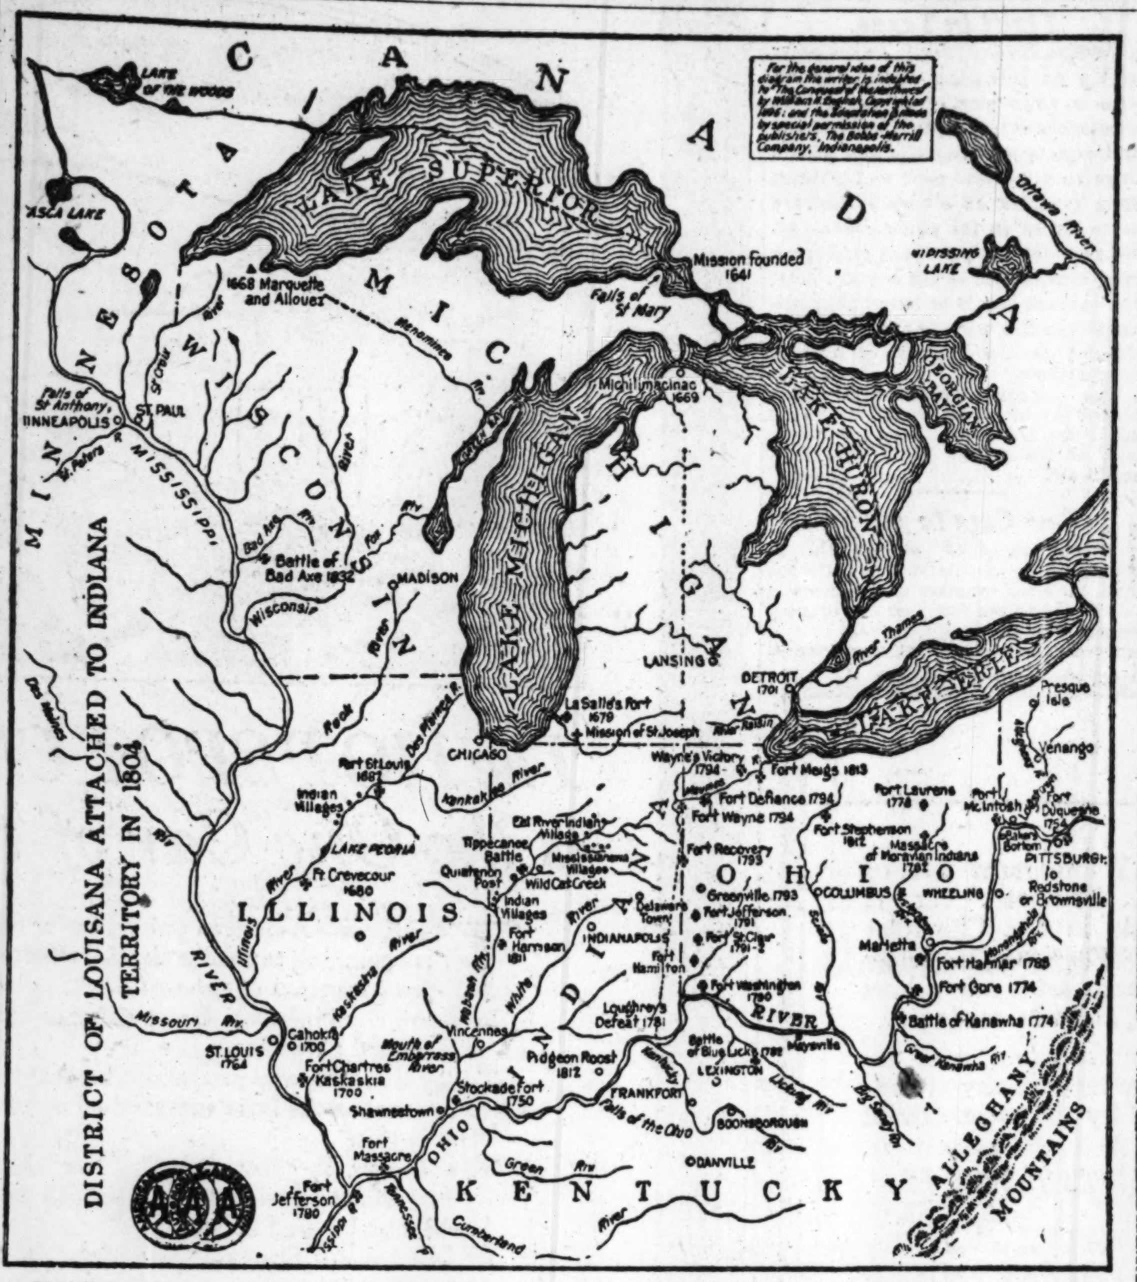
The total length shall not exceed twenty-eight feet.

The total weight per inch width of tire (measured at the base of rubber) shall not exceed 800 pounds.

The speed of motor trucks and trailers entirely equipped with solid rubber tires shall not exceed fifteen miles per hour.

The secretary was directed to forward copies of the resolution to the governors, state legislatures, and state highway commissioners.

The resolution is in line with the action recently taken by the National Automobile Chamber of Comerce favoring a uniform state law for motor truck speeds and weights. The New York law makes 25,000 pounds the maximum, New Jersey allows 30,000, and Masachusetts permits 28,000. A bill for the regulation of motor truck traffic in Illinois is now under consideration at Springfield.



Motorists who are intrigued by ruins and such should be interested in this map of the Chicago touring territory as it used to be, which the American Automobile association has prepared for its members. Among the points of interest near Chicago which are included in the map may be noted:

Fort St. Louis—Erected by La Salle and Tonti at Starved Rock, between Ottawa and La Salle, Ill. The fort was abandoned by the French after the murder of La Salle.

Fort Creve Cœur—Across the Illinois river from Peoria. Built by La Salle, Hennepin, and Tonti. The ruins are still there.

Tippecanoe battleground—Seven miles west of Lafayette, Ind. Here in 1811 Gen. William Henry Harrison defeated the Indians commanded by Shawnee Prophet, a brother of Tecumseh. It was the last great battle between the whites and Indians east of the Mississippi, and marked the real beginning of the war of 1812.

Fort Harrison—An old Indian outpost two miles north of Terre Haute, Ind.

La Salle's fort—It occupied the site of St. Joseph, Mich., and was built ten years after La Salle explored the St. Joseph river.

Fort Meigs—Held by the Americans under Harrison against the British in 1813. It is on the Maumee rapids, near Toledo, O.

WHY ENGINES GO WRONG

TRACING trouble symptoms to the ailments they denote isn't always as easy as it sounds. This summary of motor depravities was prepared by experts of one of the big oil refining companies. You may find it worth preserving.

THE CAUSES OF POOR OPERATION ARE:

Leakage of compression—broken plugs.
Faulty piston rings.
Too much piston clearance.
Use of oil of too light a body.
Valves not seating.
Leaky priming cocks.
Leaky gaskets.
Broken piston ring lock pin.
Faulty ignition—grounded wires.

THE MOTOR KNOCKS BECAUSE:

Ignition is advanced too far.
Compression is too high.
Sparks plugs are defective.
Premature ignition occurs due to incandescent carbon or projecting thread.
Cylinders are carbonized.
Piston head is too thin.
There is too much piston clearance.
Bearings have too much slack.
Piston or piston rings strike ridge in cylinder.
Fuel mixture is out of adjustment.
Flywheel bolts are loose.
Engine is overheated from lack of water or oil and retarded spark.

THE OVERHEATING OF AN ENGINE IS CAUSED BY:

Ignition is being timed too late.
Valves not seating properly.
Radiator or water pipes being fouled.
Water pump being out of order.
Fan belt slipping.
Mufler being fouled.
Lubrication being insufficient or poor.
Radiator being too small for motor.
Brakes dragging.
Motor being new and not thoroughly "run in."
Carburetor being out of adjustment.
Valves being out of time.

Those War Orders.

Motor truck manufacturers have delivered to the war department 96,551 trucks of all types out of orders for 115,137 that remain to be filled after the cancellation of contracts (due to the close of the war) had been made. Of the trucks delivered 51,884 were shipped overseas.

Department reports made public last week also show that all but one of 20,038 motor cars which remained on order after cancellations had been delivered on Feb. 1, and approximately half of them went overseas. Among other orders for motor vehicle deliveries nearing completion are 14,073 ambulances and 39,239 motorcycles.

Brooklands Again.

Reports from England indicate that the famous Brooklands race track, which during the war was permitted to deteriorate into a condition unsafe for high speeds, is to be repaired. The Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders will assist the Brooklands Automobile Racing club in restoring the famous speedway to its former excellent condition, preparatory to the revival of racing in England.

FEDERAL DOUBLE CABLE BASE TIRES
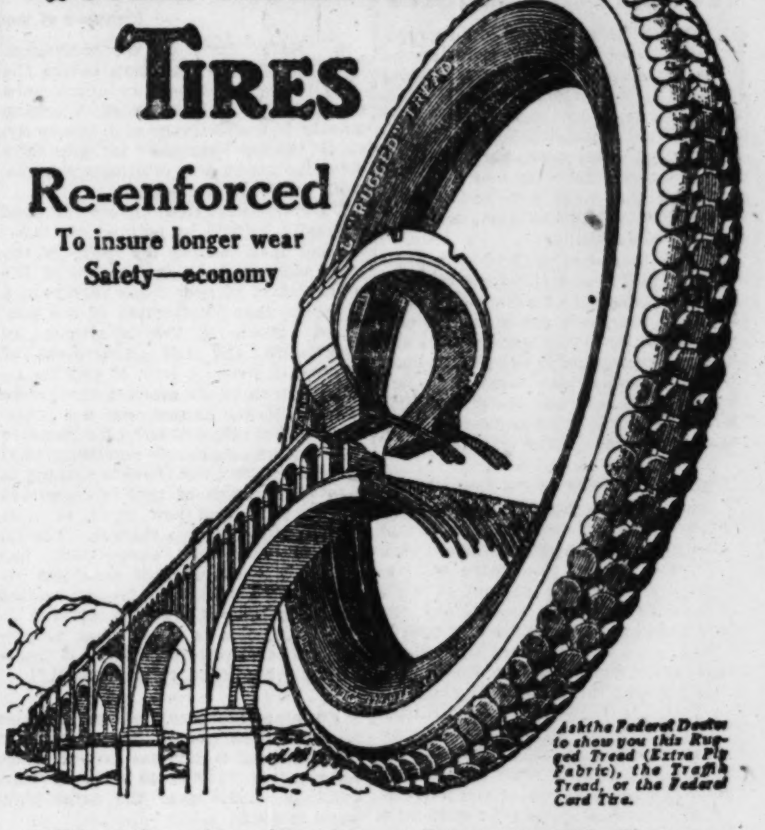
Re-enforced
To insure longer wear
Safety—economy



Ask the Federal Dealer to show you this Rugged Tread (Extra Ply Fabric), the Traffik Tread, or the Federal Card Tire.

IT is obvious why engineers reinforce a bridge.

Car owners could save money and trouble if they realized that tires should be re-enforced at their base.

The durability of the whole tire structure is dependent upon its base.

Study this illustration. Those four twisted steel cables are there for scientific reasons, like steel cables in a bridge.

This Double-Cable-Base construction is an exclusive Federal improvement. It holds the tire firmly on the rim; keeps it from shifting, rocking, blowing off or the toe bead pinching the tube and prevents rim cuts or blow outs just above the rim.

Buy Federal tires and make your tire money go farthest in service on the road.

—on the contrary, Right makes Might

EVENTS clearly have disproved the theory that "Might Makes Right!"

The opposite is true—has been—ever will be—right makes might.

In Industry, might cannot make a wrong purpose nor product prevail.

And public consciousness of right will search out and find the source of right, though its light "be hidden under a bushel."

From the beginning and throughout the world-war, the light of Peerless-Eight rightness was "hidden under the bushel" of war-truck production—first British—then American.

But,—virtually alone in conspicuously distinctive performance among motor cars,—the Peerless Two-Power-Range Eight continuously felt the increasing might of public demand for its rightness.

And the big post-war increase in Peerless production, as first announced, did not suffice.

Increase has been added to increase—the substantial Peerless resources and facilities are responding—will continue to respond to the might of public demand for right motor car performance.

Increasing public consciousness of the distinctive virtues of the Two-Power-Ranger—those delightful contrasts in performance—with economy—is demonstrating in our expanding production schedules, the might of right.

Transcontinental Runs Made Easier

INDICATIONS point to an unprecedented amount of transcontinental motor travel during the coming season. From New York to California touring bureaus maintained by the various automobile organizations report that, even now, hardly a day passes without its budget of inquiries regarding road conditions and general information about the various transcontinental routes.

It is no longer a "stunt" or a pioneering expedition to cross the country by automobile at the right time of year. Motorists who have not made the trip overland in late years cannot have the slightest conception of the vast amount of road improvement work that has been accomplished and the efforts that have been expended toward providing accommodations for the traveler.

The National Old Trails route (Santa Fé trail) and the Lincoln highway are the two most popular transcontinental routes and carry the bulk of the travel. It is entirely true that there still remains a considerable amount of work to be done on both routes, but the work already done enables any person to plan a transcontinental trip, knowing exactly what route to follow; the cities through which he will pass and the distance between them; location of gas and water stations—and to estimate with an amazing degree of accuracy the length of time the trip will take—and the expense of the journey.

It is absurd, of course, to start on a trip across the country by automobile anticipating perfect boulevard conditions all the way. Some disagreeable road conditions must be expected. Yet there are no hardships or difficulties which make the trip unduly hazardous or severe. As for those who desire luxury and ease on a trip across the country, they should ride the "cushions" of a deluxe train.

The only hindrance to the making of good time on the Santa Fé trail or Lincoln highway would be the misfortune of encountering wet weather. It is advisable for the transcontinental motorist to take as a precept the statement that when it rains in the west or middle west the thing to do is to stop and not attempt to continue one's journey until the rains are over and the roads have had a chance to dry. In this way more progress will be made and many disagreeable experiences will be avoided.

Many motorists have formed exaggerated ideas about the perils and hazards connected with a journey across the "desert." In reality the desert, particularly on the Santa Fé trail, constitutes the best portion of the route as far as road conditions and safety are concerned.

On that route the Mohave desert is crossed between Kingman, Ariz., and Victorville, Cal., a distance of approximately 250 miles; the road has been oiled and graded for the greater part, is well defined, parallels the main line of the Santa Fé railway, and passes through more than a score of small towns and stations where hotels, gas, and water stations are located.

The touring bureaus of the American Automobile association have collected a vast amount of information about present road conditions, hotel and garage accommodations, and scenic and historic features. Showing all the principal routes and connections, the A. A. A. master map is now being given the final corrections and will be ready for distribution by the beginning of the touring season. In addition to including all available routes, this map will also carry a brief description of those most used by motorists, as well as a large quantity of valuable data regarding camping outfits and other items essential for trips of this kind.

Supplementary detailed state maps are also being prepared, notably one of Arizona and New Mexico, which shows the various Indian pueblos, prehistoric cliff dwellings, petrified forests, canyons, missions, etc. This is the first road map of that region ever compiled direct from data taken on the ground.

Digests of the principal transcontinental routes have been compiled and these have been laid out in the form of day's runs, giving the mileage for each day, best hotels, and other essential facts.

The Santa Fe trail and the western part of the Lincoln highway have both been thoroughly sign posted and mapped by the Automobile club of southern California. On the former route the club signs extend as far east as Omaha, and on the latter as far east as St. Louis. Detailed maps in book form containing all necessary information for making the trip over either route will soon be available at the club's headquarters in Los Angeles.

Business men of Mount Pleasant, Mich., have organized a motor truck express company to run between Mount Pleasant and Grand Rapids. Over 1,600 subscribers have contributed $500,000 for the purpose.

"THE ROAD, MY LORDS, THE ROAD!"

BY PYKE JOHNSON.

[Secretary of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce Highways Committee.]

A NEW form of transportation, practically unknown before the war, has made its appearance in the United States. Working quietly but effectively and efficiently, rural motor express is gradually bringing about a revolutionary movement in freight haulage.

Unfortunately (the adverb is used advisedly, as will be pointed out later) we find upon reading the report of the joint committee on federal aid in the construction of post roads, Sixty-third congress, that "inspection of the published reports of the department of agriculture and the department of commerce shows a lack of definite information as to the amount of tonnage of commodities hauled over the public roads. The department of commerce has collected statistics regarding total crop production, but there is nothing to show how much of this is consumed on the farm and how much of it is hauled from farm to market. The interstate commerce commission has gathered and presented statistics regarding the amount of freight carried by railroads, but there is nothing in these statistics to show what proportion of the commodities hauled is transported over wagon roads as well."

Working, however, from such tables as these departments have, the joint congressional committee arrived at an estimate of 718,884,419 tons of commodities hauled over the rural highways in 1912.

This was in pre-war days when the rural motor express was known only in a superficial way, before the farmers of the country had begun to awaken to its possibilities in wider marketing areas and increased profits to them. It was before that day when the United States government awoke to the fact that its railroads were congested to the breaking point and called upon the motor truck to come to its assistance.

It was before that day when in response to this demand the first fleet of army motor trucks began to move from inland points to the sea and by making the trip overnight awoke the officials of the nation to the possibilities of motor truck haulage as a corollary to the railroad.

In a bulletin issued in 1917, the department of agriculture estimated the annual tonnage haul on the highways at from 1,500,000,000 to 2,000,000,000 ton-miles, but this was only an estimate. Since that time the abnormal increase due to the motor truck places the figure at 3,000,000,000 ton-miles in the minds of some government officials; others rate the figure as even higher.

In this, as in all new developments, there is a dark side, which must be reckoned with, and that speedily, if the people of the United States are to reap the benefit from this new movement.

It is "the road, my lords, the road." As the Duke of Wellington cried it, in his memorable address to parliament many years ago, so the exponents of a more efficient United States are crying it now, and the statement has only gained in force with the passing of the years and the developments which the mechanical genius of America has brought about.

All in all there are approximately 2,750,000 miles of highways in the United States. Of this, 257,291 miles had been surfaced at the end of 1915.

Figures supplied by the department of agriculture show that the range of increase in mileage from 1909 to 1915 was approximately 50,000 miles per annum, while the range of improvement or surfacing was but 15,000 miles per annum. This clearly shows that we are opening up new roads each year the mileage of which is three times greater than the mileage surfaced without making any provision for 2,500,000 miles of roads heretofore opened up and yet to be improved.

To improve the present road mileage, allowing for no increase, at the rate of improvement as shown from 1909 to 1915 would require 166 2-3 years.

Granting that there are many miles in the total number given not of sufficient recreational or commercial value to justify any considerable expenditure for their improvement, no one can contradict that at least 20 per cent of the total mileage should be improved.

Yet again, at the rate per annum heretofore made, it would take thirty-three years to complete this 20 per cent, not providing for the improvement of the inevitable increase in mileage daily coming into importance, the improvement of which would so greatly affect the material welfare of our people, and upon which our export trade must depend.

The report of the joint congressional committee, already referred to, said that poor roads were costing the United States the staggering sum of $504,000,000 in excessive transportation costs each year at that time. What are they costing today when the traffic is so increased?

More than just first costs are at stake. The man who lives in Maine, the farmer in Nebraska, the fruit grower in Oregon, all these are ultimate consumers. All have to purchase goods for wear, supplies, materials which at some time or another go over the road, and on the verdict of the congressional committee, all of us are contributing today practically eight cents a ton-mile for carriage on our goods which we would save if our roads were improved.

Thrift in Texas.

Wichita County, Texas, in the heart of the oil producing region, has hit upon a novel plan of obtaining high class roads at no cost to the taxpayers, and expects to have millions of dollars of revenue to spend upon its highways from royalties on oil wells that are to be drilled on the public roads. All the proceeds will go toward permanent road construction in the county, but if the revenue should be larger than can be used in this way the surplus will be devoted to the erection of modern schoolhouses.

The county commissioners have leased the oil rights on all the public highways and lands, with the exception of the county poor farm, to a syndicate.

Few Cars in Japan.

There are 4,000 automobiles in Japan. The population is 45,000,000 and the small number of machines is attributed to the fact that the country has no good roads.

The Spirit of Sterling Service

FOR eleven years, STERLING Tires have been sold almost entirely from maker to user and we have been in touch with them until they came back to us for repair, or as "junk." Thus we have had intimate personal knowledge of their performance.

Our business has been large enough to give us the benefit of adequate, efficient and economical organization, but not so great as to lose the element of personality.

Ours is a distinctly human concern, because the men who own the business work in it. We build Tires that we can confidently sell to our friends and neighbors.

We guarantee them 5,000 miles (6,000 in 30x3½ and 31x4), but we expect them to give very much more and we build them on that principle. We KNOW that every STERLING Tire that is kept properly inflated and that is not badly damaged by accident or abuse, will give more than the guaranteed mileage.

We want and intend them to give excess mileage, so we REPAIR THEM FREE OF CHARGE, in all of our thirty-six branches, as long as the condition of the tire will justify the repair.

STERLING Super-Size Cord Tires are the crowning result of our eleven years of experience. We will not say they are the "best on earth," but we do believe it impossible to make tires any better—and we know many that are not as good.

Many of our commercial customers who keep accurate records, tell us that STERLING Tires cost them less per mile than any others they have used. We like to deal with people who keep accurate records.

Any dealer can get Sterlings for you—or address our nearest branch.

The HOT SPOT Chalmers is the One Car of the Day

THE great American public, never fooled for long, is beginning to realize that Chalmers is one of the few great cars of the world.

Sales are climbing fast. From coast to coast the movement is toward Chalmers.

Today this car is on a production basis at the factory that Chalmers executives little expected to occur even in July.

Why is this?

The answer is "Hot Spot." For this simple but really magnificent device does a trick in the use of gas that is almost beyond belief.

It "smashes up" raw gas, "pulverizes" it, makes it "fine as dust," so that you can get every last bit of power out of gas.

Then the great Ram's-horn rushes it gently but quickly through "easy air bends" to the cylinders, and what is the result?

Not only high power from a low grade gas, but an even, soft flow of power that rests your nerves, saves your tires, and gives you a new and rare delight in driving.

Please don't miss this present day Chalmers. It's the one car of the day.

Beauty Power

Admiration centers on this Eight-Cylinder Oldsmobile Pacemaker, whether in city or country, whether on the boulevard or highway—whether you see it from a distance or sit in its roomy tonneau.

Its beauty lines are characteristic, unmistakably Oldsmobile—the real thoroughbred among light Eight-Cylinder cars.

But its performance capabilities are more remarkable still—its ease of action, speed on the get-away, flexibility in the throttling down to a snail's pace in the tangled traffic, making hills on high with extremest ease—all these are attributes of the famous fifty-eight horse power, Eight-Cylinder, V-type motor.

Come in and let us show you over the details of this excellent car—the remarkable product in a light weight Eight at a moderate price. [illegible]

Automobile Trade Notes and Gossip

FINDING itself in the disconcerting position of having to face prospective competition from its fountain head, as it were, the Ford Motor company is sending its dealers this bulletin anent Henry Ford's announced intention of building a $250 or $300 car:

"A new car may be manufactured, but as to when we are not in a position to say, except that we do know a new car could not be possibly designed, worked out, manufactured, and marketed in quantities under two or three years' time. We intend to continue the production of the present Model T as aggressively as in the past. Our factory and assembly plant production is being pushed to the limit, with the thought in mind of reaching our normal capacity of 3,000 cars per day as quickly as possible."

The Giant motor truck department of the Chicago Pneumatic Tool company was purchased last week by a syndicate of Buffalo capitalists headed by Charles A. Finengan of Buffalo, N. Y. A new concern, to be known as Giant Motor Truck company, is to be organized soon as a corporation. Plans to purchase more land adjacent to the present plant in Chicago Heights and to launch a greatly increased production schedule are announced.

A check for the substantial sum of $[illegible]187 was handed the Chicago Buick branch the other day in payment for the January allotment of Buicks to the James Levy Motors company. This is a bit of a record, inasmuch as the Levy organization is only one of six Buick dealers in Chicago and conducts a retail busienss only, with no subdealers.

Oldsmobile fans are offered food for thought in the performance of a car of this make, which during the last fourteen months has traveled 22,000 miles over a stage route between Globe and Phœnix, Ariz. Practically the entire route is mountainous, but the much used car is reported to be in virtually as good shape as when it was new.

"Automobile production cannot be restored to the pre-war basis before July 1," says a pronouncement from the National factory, "but from that date on to Jan. 1, 1920, American automobile makers will build more cars than in any previous six months period, not even excepting the last half of 1917, when the greater part of a record year's output of 1,800,000 was manufactured."

"The Story of the Biggest Transportation Advance Since the Railroads Were Started," a magazine article by F. W. Fenn, secretary of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce rural motor express committee, has been issued in booklet form by the manufacturers' organization. The brochure, which treats exhaustively of recent developments in truck operation, may be had on application to the N. A. C. C. offices at 7 East Forty-second street, New York.

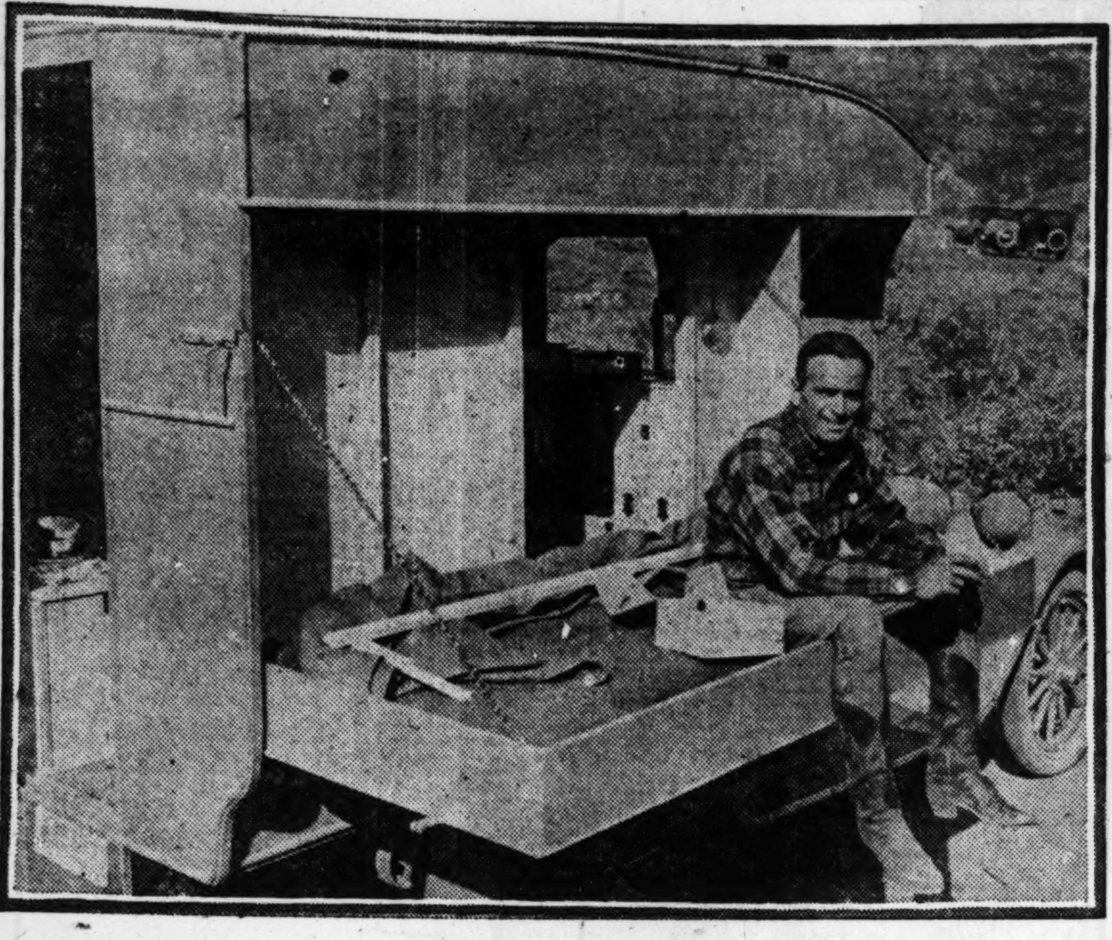
Entries of 1,700 trucks for the second truck efficiency test being conducted by the Packard factory have already been received. The test, which will end Jan. 31, 1920, involves the award of $17,640 in prizes, chiefly to truck drivers.

The builders of the Service truck submit a bid for fame by announcing the establishment of regular airplane service for rapid distribution of repair parts and the like about the country. J. P. Porter, formerly of the Royal Flying corps, is named as the chief pilot and a first flight from the landing field near the factory at Wabash, Ind., is promised for next week.

Frank Dawson, formerly production manager of the Master Truck company, has resigned to ally himself in a similar capacity with the Gary Motor Truck company of Gary, Ind.

Uncle Sam Gets Busy.

A total of 88.19 miles was constructed under the forestry road funds during the past year, according to the department's official report. At the end of the fiscal year forty-three projects were under coöperative agreement involving the survey of 1,061.85 miles and the construction of 664.15 miles.



You can't keep Douglas Fairbanks out of the papers. Here you have him in the automobile section by virtue of his new camping car, designed for him by his brother, Robert P. Fairbanks. It contains a traveling library, hot and cold water, shower bath, fifteen days' food and water supplies, and (somewhere about, though not in the picture), a cook who is also a chauffeur and can make beds. Doug, you know, spends 75 per cent of his movie life outdoors and has to take his home comforts with him.

The Experts Say---

Tufted or studded upholstery is a great catcher of dust and dirt. The ordinary whisk broom cannot reach the bottoms of these small depressions. About the only thing that will is a painter's brush with stiff bristles that come to a point. This will be found a valuable addition to the garage equipment.

A very ingenious tool rack for flat tools may be made by boring a number of holes in a board, each hole being just large enough to take the head of a clothespin. Clothespins are then driven into the holes and the cleft ends are used to receive the tools. The pins may be made secure by a small wire nail driven through their heads and into the board.

Whenever the car has suffered a bump of any kind, a crash against the curb or anything of the sort, the wheels should immediately be tested for alignment, as a bang of this kind is quite enough to force them out of correct alignment, which will lead to excessive wear.

Huge Increase in Gasoline Yield

SHORTAGE or no shortage, the United States did itself proud in the production of gasoline during the latter years of the war, in the opinion of Van H. Manning, director of the bureau of mines in the department of the interior. Mr. Manning's yearly report on gasoline production was made public last week.

In 1916, according to the statement, the production of gasoline was a little short of 50,000,000 barrels. In 1917, when war activity was accelerated by the entry of the United States into the war, the production of gasoline had increased to nearly 68,000,000 barrels, an increase of more than 50,000 barrels a day.

It was thought by many, Mr. Manning points out, that this must be the peak of American patriotic effort, but in 1918 the production of gasoline was over 85,000,000 barrels. The daily increase for this year over the record breaking year of 1917 was about 47,000 barrels for each of the 365 days, or almost as much as the increase of the previous year.

In 1916 there were 8,473,102 barrels of gasoline sent abroad. In 1917 this amount had increased to 9,901,877 barrels, and in 1918 these exports had reached a total of 13,812,508 barrels, an increase of nearly 10,000 barrels a day over the year 1917.

Making Mars Useful.

War tractors will probably be used to haul boats carrying coal over the Chesapeake and Ohio canal, from Cumberland, Md., to the capital. Army officials are now surveying the canal to determine the feasibility of this plan and terminal facilities.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS - - By High Speed

Please publish the best route from Oak Park to Colorado Springs, and from Colorado Springs to Albuquerque, N. M. What are the distances between towns, and how soon could such a trip be made cafely?

P. SCHUCHMANN, Oak Park, Ill.

Follow the Lincoln highway to Sterling, Ill., 119 miles; the Rock river road to Davenport, Ia., 56 miles; the river to river road to Des Moines, Ia., 184 miles; the Great White Way to Omaha, Neb., 147 miles, and the Lincoln highway to Big Spring, Neb., 389 miles. Then go through Sterling, Colo., 73 miles; Greeley, 110 miles; and Denver, 56 miles, to Colorado Springs, 75 miles. From Colorado Springs go through Pueblo, 45 miles; Trinidad, 92 miles; Las Vegas, N. M., 137 miles; and Santa Fé, 73 miles, to Albuquerque, 67 miles. Spring road conditions in the middle west are an uncertain quantity. I should not start before the first of June or thereabouts, in any case.

Please publish the best automobile routes from Freeport, Ill., to Niagara Falls, thence to Amsterdam, N. Y., then to Newburgh, N. Y., Washington, D. C., and back to Chicago. I expect to make the trip when the roads get good. Where can we get road maps of the states we would pass through on this trip? M. J. PACKARD, Lena, Ill.

Come to Chicago by way of Rockford, Belvidere, Genoa, Sycamore, and St. Charles. Then, in driving to Niagara Falls, you have a choice of two main routes, one of which is about as good as the other as to average road conditions. You may drive from Chicago to Detroit and then across Ontario, through London and Hamilton, direct to Niagara Falls, or you may go by way of South Bend, Ind.; Bryan, O.; Fremont, Cleveland, and Erie, Pa., to Buffalo and thence up to the falls. From Niagara Falls your route lies directly east through Batavia, Canandaigua, Auburn, Syracuse, Utica, and Little Falls to Amsterdam. For Newburgh, drive through Schenectady to Albany and follow the main road down the west side of the Hudson through Catskill and Kingston. After this I should continue down the Hudson to New York and follow the usual route to Washington, through Trenton, N. J., Philadelphia, Wilmington, and Baltimore. From Washington go to Frederick, Md., to Hagerstown, where you will strike the old National road. Follow this west through Cumberland, Uniontown, Wheeling, Zansville, Columbus, Springfield, and Richmond, to Indianapolis, and then drive northwest through Lafayette to Chicago. I shall be glad to give you information as to roa dmaps if you will send me a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Please inform me as to what road to take to Berrien Springs, Mich., and how the road is to travel.

A. L. S., Chicago.

Follow the St. Joe road signs through South Chicago, Calumet, Gary, Ætna, Miller, East Gary, Porter, and Michigan City to New Buffalo. Here I should make inquiries as to whether it would be better to drive through Sawyer to Bridgman and then directly east to Berrien Springs, or continue east from New Buffalo to Galien or Buchanan, and then turn north. This depends on local road conditions. For the most part you will find the roads reasonably good, though there may be a bad stretch or two toward the end of the trip.

What would you consider the best route to follow from Galesburg to Pensacola, Fla.?

ROSA B. MORELAND, Galesburg, Ill.

Go through Peoria, Bloomington, Champaign, Danville, Terre Haute, Ind., Vincennes, Evansville, Hopkinsville, Ky., Nashville, Tenn., Columbia, Decatur, Ala., Birmingham, Montgomery, Andalusia, and Flomaton to Pensacola.

How far is it by road to La Salle, Ill., from Chicago? What is the best road to take and what are the road conditions? HOSPITAL, Danville, Ill.

La Salle is 106 miles from Chicago. The best route, on the whole, is the Starved Rock trail, which is marked all the way through Aurora, Plano, Sulphur Lick Springs, and Ottawa, and will be found in good condition if the weather is at all favorable.

CHEAPER TRANSPORTATION INSTEAD OF CHEAPER CARS

Corporations require cars for the use of executives. They can afford to buy to the best advantage. They choose Packards for definite business considerations: longer life and higher second-hand value; ease of handling; lower maintenance cost; reliability; economy and safety; and because the Packard is professional through and through

THERE are a good many men in a rut as to motoring possibilities.

They don't know what they are missing or what it is costing them to use a compromise car.

They never will know until they get their hands on the steering wheel of a Packard Twin Six, feel its sensitive response, its pick-up and get-away, its pep and go, its ease of control, its absolute smoothness and accuracy.

The Twin Six is a remarkable car to handle in traffic. It is a revelation to the man who now grinds and jerks along in congested city streets.

It can be throttled down on high gear as low as two miles an hour and most of its work is done on high. From two miles an hour it will, in a few blocks, pull up to better than a mile a minute. But with all its speed and power it is not a racing machine; it has none of the limitations of the car built for fast travel over short distance; and it doesn't make you pay for power you don't use.

One prominent industrial man says, "The Packard has added at least three hours to my potential business day."

Another says, "With the Packard I can live 20 miles farther in the country."

Another says, "I can cover more ground and keep to schedule by my watch. These days the Packard is more reliable than the trains."

Another, "The Packard is one shining example of a motor car that an owner might elect to drive and care for himself."

There is a new science of transportation—that of motor-vehicle performance, maintenance and cost. It has to do with your car and its duty, however limited its use.

The Packard people are transportation experts; they have more to tell you on this subject than any other organization in the world. You can ask them to discuss your car problem without obligation. It is to your interest and profit to do so.

Before the first Brunswick Tire was ever built, we analyzed and tested over 200 tires.

Since 1845 the name of Brunswick has stood for superlative values and fair-dealing.

Tires Differ As Policies Differ

Some Remarkable Facts About Brunswicks

THERE is nothing to prevent any maker from producing a super-tire. All formulas, all methods are well known in the industry. A perfect tire is simply a question of care and skill and cost. These facts can be verified by testing 200 types of high-grade tires and analyzing their materials and construction—as the Brunswick laboratories have done.

In a super-tire, such as The Brunswick, there can be nothing exclusive. Because such a tire must be a composite of all that is best. No one feature must overshadow others.

In Brunswick Tires, for instance, we have included that familiar formula, long in use, which makes the best tire tread that's known.

And there's a certain type of fabric, which, by test, is stronger than all others. Naturally it is in The Brunswick.

To attain the utmost in tire mileage there are certain reinforcements—certain extras. We have adopted all.

To combat the commonest tire troubles, we have adopted the approved side-wall construction, long tested.

In other words, The Brunswick brings you a combination of supremacies, such as were never possible before.

In attaining a tire worthy of the name of Brunswick we were convinced that it depended chiefly on policies and standards, on prejudices and knowledge. Brunswick Standards are known the world around. For 74 years the House of Brunswick has worked in rubber—long before automobiles were known.

Every Brunswick product has attained and held supremacy. The name always insures superlative values. To build a mediocre tire would be unthinkable for such a concern, jealous of its long-standing reputation.

The Brunswick idea is to give all that is possible, all that anyone can give—all that any factory cost can buy.

The result is a tire that is winning friends the nation over. In The Brunswick motorists expect the utmost—and get it. Never has a tire had greater appeal to the man who appreciates real merit.

Try one Brunswick. See if you agree with others that here is more for your money. One Brunswick, we are certain, will convince you that you'll never be satisfied until you have all Brunswicks.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

DERIVING ITS TONE
From the piano sounding board of spruce at the base of the tone-chamber, precisely on the same principle as that on which the piano derives tone from its spruce sounding-board.

THE WONDROUS STRADIVARA

Presents a decided departure in tonal reproduction, be it the resonance from the magic touch of Paderewski, Hoffman, Gabrilowitz, the snappy chords of Mike Bernard's famous ragtime, the ever so sweet vibrance from the bow of Mischa Elman, Heifetz, or Toscha Seidel, the colorful mellowness of McCormack's tenor, the rippling, birdlike warble of Galli-Curci, the mighty crash of Sousa's band, or the spell of Symphony Orchestra effects.

As the tone peals forth, indifference awakens to interest, and ere the final note fades to silence, the hearer's amazement has developed to

UNEQUIVOCAL APPROVAL.

An especially attractive display all this week at the most appropriate place in the city for their demonstration.

SALESMAN.

After you have looked over a number of selling propositions and you are not absolutely sold on any particular one, drop in and see me and get our "version"; you'll find it conservative but backed by real merit. A word about the qualifications you should have: You must be a salesman preferably with experience in selling insurance, typewriters, advertising, adding machines, real estate, etc. This company, after seven years of hard constructive work, has become a national leader in its line; we are now pushing the sale of an office device of great merit—a necessity for every one having a bank account, large or small; we count about eighteen million prospects in the United States and I want you to cash in on about 250,000 of these right here in Chicago. WHILE WORKING FOR ME YOU—ARE WORKING FOR YOURSELF.

I want men, women, and children to work on my 3,000 acre farm, 65 miles from Chicago. I furnish the houses, plow and prepare the land, and furnish the seed for planting. You tend the growing crop and at harvest we divide it equally. Lands suitable for potatoes, cabbage, celery, sugar beets, and especially onions. Many acres for general farming. WANTED—MALE HELP.

Employment Agencies.

STILL THEY COME.

In spite of the many, many men that we placed during this last week, which used up a large number of the orders which we listed last Sunday, in addition to a number which we received during the week, we still have on file an increased number of orders. They are coming stronger every day and from the viewpoint of the number of men and placements, the last week was the largest which we have ever experienced. This means that more satisfied people, both employers and applicants, have left our organizaiton with a smile and a handshake, thanking us for our services, than ever before—and still we need thousands more applications.

We hear the cry every day of the fact that hundreds are out of jobs looking for work. This may be true, but if it is, they do not as yet realize that this is the place for them to come to. The people that come to us do not remain in this condition very long and from the indications of the number of orders received, we would judge that today there is a shortage of man power rather than a shortage of openings.

If you have not been in, you have wasted time long enough. We will take your application tomorrow and get busy in your behalf toward securing for you the future opportunity for which you have been looking.

Just look at the positions listed below—you cannot afford to wait.

or more given away today. Will you be the one to receive a part of it? If so is the least you can receive. Its this way. We are selling the best vacant ripe for building in the city. Located north of Devon-av. in Rogers Park, only 1¾ miles from the lake. Streets are paved.

$104

There is a new car line on Devon-av. and further extension of this line has already been started. The new Western-av. car line passes the property too, and the Northwestern Steam road is easily accessible.

Our lots are unusually wide. No residential lot less than 33 ft. wide. Corners from 57 to 72 ft. Of course, business lots on Devon and California run from 25 to 57 feet wide.

Two double section line corners for sale.

You can benefit to the amount of $104 or more if you are one of the first two cash buyers today. Our lowest priced lot is $695. As a special advertising offer we're going to give the first two cash buyers today a discount of 15%.

Come out and talk it over. We'll not stretch our imagination nor yours in discussing past actual or future possible development. We'll not build imaginary subways and elevated lines to make a sale. All we deal in is facts—and the best vacant in the city.

Today take Broadway-Devon, Clark-Devon, Western or Lincoln cars to Devon and Western; walk west to our branch office at 2600 Devon, where you can see our property and price list.

Or phone R. P. 992 and we'll send auto for you. For week day appointment to see property by auto phone main office.

A Fine Home of American Manor Design FOR SALE

This unusual home was built to the owner's comfort and pleasure. No single thing that could contribute to these ends was omitted in its construction. It was made to live in, not to sell; and the only reason it is offered now is that his children are grown up and he no longer has need of so large a home.

It is well placed on a lot of 200 feet frontage and 185 feet depth. The carefully tended lawns are adorned with perennial flower beds, shrubbery, and fine trees. There is a garage on the property large enough to accommodate two or three cars.

The house, of stucco on steel lath and roofed with slate, rests on a foundation measuring 71x60 feet. There are five very large rooms on the first floor, seven master's bedrooms with four baths, and two maids' rooms with bath on the second floor, storerooms, billiard and play rooms and the like on the third floor. The motif throughout is the lotus flower, and colors and decorations are in harmony.

There are fireplaces on the first and second floors; French art windows give an abundance of light; all the first story floors are of tile. Over the first floor fireplace is a panel in mosaic glass; a pipe organ is built into the building; a sense of restfulness pervades every room.

There are three cisterns, providing soft water throughout the house; the basement is plastered and cemented throughout; the heating systm is of the hot water type; ice boxes, fruit cellars, and like equipment are inbuilt.

If you are interested in such a property this is available to your inspection. Apply to Owner, C. R. ERWIN, 530 N. Euclid-av., Oak Park, or 58 E. Washington-st., Chicago, or to your own broker.

FLORIDA CALLS

Florida Valencia Orange and Grape Fruit Groves pay an income today as high as $500 per acre, if located in the hill and lake section.

Don't be a doubting Thomas. Investigate. Determine the fact—then act.

Howey, at Lake County, Florida, is the highest elevated section of the state. It offers to particular people the opportunity to have a successful grove built up under the supervision of a government expert.

The editor of the Tampa Tribune investigated these lands and termed this section "The Alpine Country."

Dr. J. H. Ross, president of the Citrus Exchange, investigated, and says: "It's an empire and the finest tract of citrus land left in the state."

These lands are the most beautiful of all beautiful spots in Florida. The elevation runs as high as 311 feet, real mountains for Florida. The truly large lakes of the state are to be found here, some of which are 15 to 20 miles long. This unusual combination gives the groves on the Howey Tract a sure and certain immunity against frosts, not enjoyed by localities south having a low altitude, therefore the trees retain their January bloom and load to capacity. Witness that trees, seven years old in our vicinity carried 17 boxes of fruit, while trees at the same age and with the same care on lowland exposed to these frosts will carry 3 to 4 boxes.

Mr. O. W. Connor refused $60,000 cash for a 40 acre grove 6 years old. Mr. Sidney Inman sold a 22 acre grove December last for $50,000. Mrs. Evans sold a ten acre grove last month for $35,000. These are real facts and prove conclusively the great prosperity possible to those who will plant a Valencia Grove in the hill and lake section on the Howey properties.

Business men and bankers will contract to build you a grove without worry or attention on your part. See us about our special price to the group of first 100 purchasers, our bank reference, commercial rating, etc.

WHEAT

During 1918 we put under cultivation a number of farms which will grow their first crop this year, 1919. The cultivation on these farms is in extra fine shape, and as the land is new and the soil very rich you can be sure that the yield will be high. These lands produce the highest yields of small grains of any in North America, and, remember, that our grain brings the same price in the world's markets as that grown on land selling at $300 an acre in parts of Illinois and Iowa.

We are selling these farms at low prices and on easy terms. Western Canada farm lands are in line for a big advance soon. Write for our free, illustrated, and questions and answers booklets.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

DID YOU EVER

hear of farmers going on strike for higher wages? They are the only class of workers who do not have to. The butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker and all the rest have formed trades unions to insure a living wage and even then are subject to strikes, layoffs, low wages and high prices. The trouble is they are dependent on some one else for their living, while the farmer, whether rich or poor, is self-sustaining regardless of labor conditions.

If you owned a nice little farm, which you could go to when you are ready, don't you think it would mean a lot to your peace of mind and happiness? Then why not make a start now? Write us today for full particulars of our easy way to become a farm owner.

In Kalkaska and Antrim Counties, Michigan, there exists a wonderful opportunity for you to enter the farming business. We have there some 40,000 acres of hardwood land that is selling for only $15 to $30 per acre on easy terms. You have the privilege of getting it in tracts of 10, 20, 40, 80, 160 acres, or larger tracts for stock raising, located near good towns, schools, churches, and with hard roads, railroads, telephones, and R. F. D. accommodations.

The soil produces good crops of beans, clover, potatoes, alfalfa, wheat, oats, rye, vegetables, and fruit, and natural grasses make it fine for stock raising.

$10 to $25 starts you on the purchase of 10 acres; $50 on 20 acres; and $100 on 40 acres, etc., and then small monthly payments.

Send This Coupon Today.

Please mail to me a big free booklet about land without obligation on my part. Also explain how new settlers are exempted from taxes for five years and how free insurance protects purchasers. Also tell me about loaning money to settlers to buy live stock and build and numerous others ways they are helped.

HOME LANDS

INCORPORATED.

Is the Land Dept. of the Holt Lbr. Co., the Oconto Company, and the Menominee Bay Shore Lbr. Co. We own our land. The first block of land to be offered includes over 100,000 acres.

As a result of many years of experience in colonization work, we offer our Sales Plans Nos. 1 and 2 given below. We have found that the settler should be free from financial worries the first few years. During this period he should devote his time to developing his land. His crop returns should not be taken by the Land Company as payments on principal and interest, but he should be allowed to invest them in more cattle, equipment, etc., from which he will get increased returns.

We believe in our lands. We feel so certain that you will pay out if given a chance that we will finance you for five years and turn your first payment into a house and barn built for you to move into. We also feel that we can extend further credits for dynamite, clearing machinery, etc., to settlers who prove they are industrious.

Investigation will show that the Holt Lbr. Co., the Oconto Company, and Menominee Bay Shore Lbr. Co. are three of the financially independent lumber companies of Wisconsin. They have sufficient capital to extend these credits. You can satisfy yourself of their responsibility by referring to your home bank or any Chicago or Milwaukee bank.

As to agricultural possibilities of our district, we refer you to the State Dept. of Soils and the State Bureau of Immigration at Madison, Wis.

SALES PLANS NOS. 1 AND 2

No. 1. We build you a house, barn; furnish cow, calf, pigs, sheep, chickens, fruit trees, tools. We also furnish dynamite on credit for blasting stumps and rent you clearing and farming machinery. On this plan we require $500 down.

No. 2. Land without improvements: $25 down, $10 to $15 per month, or annual payments of $100 down and $120 per year. When $500 is paid we give you the benefits in our Sales Plan No. 1.

OCONTO RIVER VALLEY.

Oconto and Forest counties, is about 11 hours' ride from Chicago. It is reached by the Chicago and Northwestern R. R. Here you will find towns, roads, schools. Our soil is a Kennan Silt Loam, or, in other words, a clay loam. Our prices range from $20 to $30 per acre for agricultural land. Stony land is sold as grazing land at very low prices. No light sand or swamp offered for sale.

SWAMPS AND STONES.

Statement by our agriculturist, R. S. Dunham, graduate of the University of Illinois:

"There is so little swamp in your district that only a few words are necessary. All swamps are not alike. Some cannot be drained and are worthless. Some have outlets close at hand and may be reclaimed. They have so much silt and clay mixed with humus that they will be very productive after drainage.

"Some will dry up after clearing and need no further drainage. Many of these are "Elm Flats," rich, fertile soils that make excellent meadow land and will add to the value of the farm.

"STONES ARE THE EARMARKS OF A GOOD SOIL. They indicate that the soil was made from granite which contains the necessary minerals for plantfood. NONPRODUCTIVE SAND SOILS DO NOT HAVE THESE STONES. Sand soil is made from sandstone which does not contain many plantfood minerals. Where the land contains so many stones that they interfere with cultivation, it should be sold only for grazing."
